UNDERWOOD WILL WIN SAY ALABAMA POLITICIANS

HIS RACE SUFFERS BY FIGHT ON WILSON ON TOLLS QUESTION

Skilled Observers Declare, However, That His Election Is Only Foregone Conclusion of Primary

BIRMINGHAM RALLIES END BITTER CAMPAIGN

Prohibition and Railroad Rate Regulation Chief Issues. Record Vote Tomorrow Is Predicted

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 4.—In a series of final rallies by the various candidates for national and state offices, the warmest campaign in recent years in Alabama was brought to a close tonight. Rallies were held in Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile, the state's three largest cities, and in countless other smaller cities and counties, flying squadrons of speakers covering every available section.

The greatest interest in the state, as well as in the nation at large, has been and is centered around the contest between Oscar Underwood, Democratic leader in the house, and Captain Richmond P. Hobson, congressman from the sixth district, for the long term senatorship. Mr. Underwood has made but a short personal campaign, leaving his interests entirely in the hands of friends. Captain Hobson has been campaigning for many months, making speeches in every nook and corner of the state.

The contest for the short term, the unexpired portion of the term of the late Senator Joseph F. Johnston, is between Captain Frank S. White, of Birmingham, and Ray Rushton, of this city. Both have made a whirlwind campaign of the state in a limited time.

The gubernatorial race, a four-cornered affair, is being fought out by B. B. Comer, former governor; Charles Henderson, president of the state railroad commission; Captain R. F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture, and Walter D. Seed, lieutenant governor. The race has been one of the hottest in the political annals of the state. Every office in the state is to be voted on in the Democratic primaries next Monday, nomination in these primaries being equivalent to election as that party has no formidable opposition at the general elections in November. The polls open Monday morning and close at sundown. Because of the length of the ticket counting is expected to be very slow and the result may not be fully determined until Tuesday night.

A second primary, where none of the candidates receive a majority Monday, will be held on May 11.

Underwood and Hobson Hold Rallies in Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 4—Prohibition and railroad rate regulation have been the chief issues in the campaign that closed in Alabama tonight. Monday the Democratic voters of the state will nominate candidates for the long and short terms in the United States senate, for governor, state officials, two members of the railroad commission, two supreme court judges, nine candidates for congress, candidates for the state legislature and county officers.

Oscar W. Underwood's nomination for the long term in the United States senate seems the only foregone conclusion in the entire list. Congressman R. P. Hobson, of the Sixth district, has been campaigning steadily for two years to succeed Joseph F. Johnston, but it seems practically certain he will be defeated Monday and by a decisive majority. Underwood's majority probably will be lessened by the opposition to the president on the tolls question.

Hobson's manager, L. B. Musgrove, of Jasper, seems confident an eleventh hour landslide will make his man a winner, but the cool judgment of the most astute political observers is that Underwood will defeat him by at least 15,000.

Captain Hobson closed his campaign tonight with his fifteenth political speech of the contest in the limits of Birmingham, the home of his opponent. He had an immense rally at Capitol

Washington Looks for Early Claim by Rebels For Recognition by U. S.

Surrender of Tampico Would Leave Only Location of Capital and Naming of Officers Between Carranza and Demand

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Anticipating a period devoid of important engagements in central Mexico where Villa's army rests after its capture of Torreon, the interest of the officials here centers on how far rules of civilized warfare will be observed in the treatment of federal prisoners.

The conduct of constitutionalists in their hour of triumph is being given close attention by officials whose advice may have much weight in determining the future policy of the United States. It was said today at the state department that constitutionalists here believe consideration of their claims of recognition cannot be delayed much longer. The statement attributed to the rebel leaders at Torreon that they were awaiting news on the political effect of their victory on Washington also is taken as a sign of general expectancy that the United States government will recognize their claims.

Conditions precedent to political recognition in such cases always have been regarded as involving the establishment of a regular government at some capital and the possession of one or more seaports through which the new government can communicate with the outside world. Recent reports assert that Tampico is about to surrender to the constitutionalists without further fighting. In that case it will remain only for General Carranza to locate a capital and appoint a cabinet and other administrative officers to claim recognition.

The United States, however, is likely to go slow in admitting this claim. Already the constitutionalists, through the lifting of the embargo on arms and ammunitions of war, have received substantial advantage, and some authorities on international law are suggesting weighty objections to actual political recognition at this stage.

Wounded Federals Shout For Gen. Villa at Torreon

(By Associated Press.)

TORREON, Mex., April 4.—Villa's victorious army marched into shot-torn Torreon today, wounded federals lying in the streets for the wounded are being attended by but one nurse, raised themselves on their sides and gave feeble shouts "viva, Villa!"—a demonstration caused by the announcement that their lives would be spared.

When Velasco fled he left behind in the military hospital 200 wounded. When the rebels entered the place they found only one nurse, Dorothea de La Cruz, in attendance. The patients were in a high state of anxiety, for they had been told that Villa took no prisoners. They were reassured by H. S. Cunard-Cummins, the British vice consul at Gomez Palacio, who entered the hospital first, climbing over bodies of the wounded who had died there. The air was foul with the odor of dried blood. The British official announced that Villa had assured him none of the wounded would be harmed. Those who had the strength raised themselves on their elbows from pallets on the floor and from bits of cots and cried a feeble "viva Villa." The nurse was soothing a dying patient who with his last breath joined the cheering and then sank back dead.

DEAD ARE BURNED.

This city, from which Governor Venustiano Velasco and most of the uninjured of his command fled yesterday, was occupied by the rebels in force today and the work of burning the bodies of the dead, clearing away the wreckage of shell-shattered adobe walls, street barricades

RESERVE BANK HERE IS DISTRICT'S, NOT CITY'S

Atlanta Bankers Say Public Has Arrived at Proper Realization of This Fact

Atlanta's attitude toward the new regional bank is becoming quite normal. That has been the attitude of the bankers and other leaders of finance and business since the announcement was made last Thursday afternoon that the organization committee had decided to locate here the reserve bank in district No. 6. The general public is appreciative now of the fact that the bank is not Atlanta's, is not an Atlanta enterprise, and benefits Atlanta more than other cities of the district solely insomuch as the physical location of it here will distinguish this city.

"Atlanta has the bank. That is all we can ask, in my opinion," said J. K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National bank, yesterday afternoon "I am not a candidate for any honor connected with it. My work as a member of the Atlanta committee was directed solely toward the city's interest, not my own."

This was echoed by W. J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National.

"We wanted the endorsement of other cities for Atlanta," said he. "What we wanted was the bank.

"The publication of my name, not in The Journal, as one of several Atlantians who probably would become directors in the bank, was a mistake and did us an injustice, I believe. I do not ask a thing of the new bank. It belongs to the whole southeast, not to Atlanta, and the southeast must be permitted to officer it as the stockholding banks see fit."

It was known during the campaign by Atlanta for the bank that a number of interests were seeking the Atlanta committee's promise, as a committee, for this or that; but the committee avoided entangling alliances and is pledged to no individual or interest.

In fact, if it were, the pledge would be presumptuous, for the work of the Atlanta committee has been completed. It has no more to do with the organization of the reserve bank here than has the committee which represented Savannah or that which worked for Birmingham or Chattanooga or Columbia.

"If I may not be misunderstood as assuming to speak for others, I would like to say publicly," declared Mr. Blalock, "That Atlanta's attitude is not reflected properly in publications which depict it as taking charge of the bank. Bankers know this, but I believe a general public understanding of it is to be desired."

There will be nine directors in the reserve bank of this district, as in all other districts, five of whom will be chosen by the federal reserve board, and the six remaining will be elected by the stockholding banks.

FRANK SHOULD GET A NEW TRIAL, SAYS DETECTIVE BURNS

Will Not Say Whether Opinion Is Based on Evidence or the State of Public Mind During Trial

BELIEF IN INNOCENCE OF FRANK INDICATED

Report Will Be Ready Tuesday or Wednesday—Will Try to See Solicitor Dorsey and Conley

William J. Burns, the detective, arrived in Atlanta Saturday night and announced that his report on the Mary Phagan murder case will be made on Tuesday or Wednesday. The report will be made to the attorneys on both sides of the case and at the same time be given to the newspapers.

His work on the case is practically complete, he says, and he again declares that the report will leave no question as to the identity of Mary Phagan's slayer.

Isolated sentences dropped by the famous detective in the course of a talk with a Journal reporter indicated more strongly than ever that Burns in his report will exhonorate Leo M. Frank, who has been condemned for the murder, and attempt to pin the crime upon Frank's negro accuser, Jim Conley.

Burns, who is returning from a trip to New York, Chicago, Kansas City and other places, remarked that The Journal's editorial asking a new trial for Frank had attracted the attention and the approval of the whole country.

A NEW TRIAL.

"Do you think that Frank shouldhave a new trial?" he was asked.

"Unquestionably, he should," was the quick reply.

Since the state of the public mind at the time of the trial or because of the evidence?" was the next question.

"I shouldn't like to say anything that would anticipuate my report," Burns replied.

Burns said that the Phagan case alone caused him to make the trip to Chicago and Kansas City.

"Did you find any material witness-es?"

"I wouldn't say I found material witnesses, but I did get material information. As I have always said the solution of the case, which is not a mystery, is right in Atlanta, but the information I obtained is valuable."

"What's the negro? How's Bill Smith?" asked Burns, when a reporter met him.

"Smith is still willing for you to see Conley if you take him and a court stenographer along."

Burns laughed.

"Conley is still in jail?" he asked.

W[illegible] SEE ATTORNEY.

On receiving an affirmative reply he said that he expects to go to see Attorney Smith in an effort to arrange an interview with the negro.

"Do you think it is necessary to see the negro?"

"Not necessary," said Burns; "but I want to see him."

Burns said also that he expected to call upon Solicitor General Dorsey and

SLATON OUT FOR SENATE; WEST WILL NOT ENTER

ANNOUNCES FOR SENATE

GOVERNOR JOHN M. SLATON.

BOTH ANNOUNCED THEIR INTENTIONS LATE LAST NIGHT

Senator West Issues Formal Statement, but Governor Slaton Simply Said: "I Am in the Race"

SEEKS UNEXPIRED TERM OF LATE SENATOR BACON

J. Randolph Anderson in Race for Governorship and Other Candidates are Expected to Announce Soon

Governor John M. Slaton is in the race to fill the unexpired term of the late United States Senator A. O. Bacon.

Senator W. S. West, of Valdosta, appointed recently by Governor Slaton for the interim, announced last night at 10 o'clock that he would not enter the race. He dictated a statement for publication and gave it out to newspapermen waiting at his rooms in the Hotel Winecoff.

Ten minutes later, from the capitol, Governor Slaton announced his candidacy for the place. The governor merely stated verbally to the newspapermen waiting in his ante-room that he would enter the race. He issued no written statement and gave out nothing further than this for publication.

At 12:15 o'clock last night Senator West returned to Washington. He had been in Atlanta attending the meeting of the state Democratic executive committee, of which he is vice chairman.

Following is his statement:

West's Statement Declining Race.

Fully persuaded that my candidacy before the people to fill the unexpired term of Senator Bacon in the United States senate does not meet with the entire approval of south Georgia, and knowing, too, without the practically unanimous indorsement of this section—approbrating that cannot be—candidates from the "wire-grass" section will enter the field, rendering the situation still more complicated—to succeed it would require the greatest effort and my presence much of the time from my duties in Washington: therefore, I have come to the conclusion not to enter the race.

This is no wail of Jeremiad sent up because many of the people of south Georgia seem reluctant to unite in my support. They have their preferences, and under a free Democratic representative government must maintain the right to exercise them. Yet I wish to say without reference to myself that if south Georgia is ever to fill with any of her favored sons the high places in the state, the people must get together. They should remember, too, it takes time to grow statesmen.

South Georgia is a great section with tremendous possibilities, and I trust the people will be equal to the great destiny that seems to await them.

In declining to enter the race for the senate, I wish to say I have made no promise that influences me in arriving at the conclusion.

I take this occasion to express my deep appreciation to the people all over Georgia for their generous offer of support.

Slaton Announces at Close of Conference.

Governor Slaton's announcement came at the close of a conference in the governor's office, which lasted from 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon until after 10 o'clock last night.

A few minutes before the adjournment of the conference Governor Slaton came out of his private office into the reception room, accompanied by Jesse E. Perry and A. Hardy Ellis, two of his secretaries, and the three stood and talked together a few moments beside Mr. Perry's desk. Then they returned into the governor's private office and immediately there was loud applause from the gentlemen in the conference and the next moment the door was thrown open wide and all emerged.

In the conference were some fifteen or twenty, including well known politi-

Girl Dances as Sick Mourn At Meeting of "Healer"

Wondering, Faithful and Skeptical Crowd Old Baptist Tabernacle, 1,000 Strong, to See Mrs. Etter

A woman weakened by age and sickness, her hair grey, her body frail as a leaf, sank down on the platform of the old Baptist Tabernacle last night and her head was propped up with a shawl used for a cushion.

The singers grouped on the platform by Mrs. M. B. Worthington-Etter, who claims to be a spiritual healer, and who is conducting services at the old Tabernacle, swayed their bodies in time to a stirring hymn.

At the edge of the platform, a girl of fourteen danced with unexpected grace and lightness. She raised and lowered her arms and moved her fingers in a fluttering fashion as though to imitate the wings of a bird.

One thousand people were gathered in the auditorium. All the seats were taken. Many stood at the back of the hall, in the doorway, and at the windows. The air in the big room was thick and close, and occasionally the leader paused to rest and breathe.

A dozen men knelt at a long bench in front of the platform, praying aloud. Each had his hands raised, with the tips of his fingers joined; another, with both fists clenched, had his head lowered.

A woman with a child in her arms moved between the kneeling men to the platform, and the baby was in a chair where all could see.

The singers raised their voices, filling the room with the rejoicing words of the hymn; the young girl at the edge of the platform turned in quicker circles as she danced, gyrating occasionally on her toes. And the sick woman lay in a stupor by the chair in which the baby was placed.

"SORE EYES, GO AWAY!"

The child held down its head and tried to wriggle to its feet. Its eyes were inflamed and its cheeks red.

"Sore eyes, go away!" commanded the "healer." "God, make them well."

Her hands traveled over the child's face. Her fingers rubbed the sore eyes, the inflamed cheeks. The sick woman stirred slightly. A man holding a blind boy moved nearer to the platform. A girl with sightless eyes was pushed toward the bench. The unvarying hymn continued, the young girl dancing alone, turned in circles, and skipped with agile and graceful steps in time to the hymn.

"Go away, sickness," cried Mrs. Et-

LYNCHING MAY FOLLOW ATTACK OF SEMINOLES

Four Members of Wealthy Bolegs Family Slain by Indian Youths

(By Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 4.—Four persons are dead and the entire Indian country in Seminole county is in a fever of excitement tonight with threats of lynching being made as the result of a murderous attack by two Indian youths early today upon the home of David Bolegs, wealthy Indian farmer, four miles southwest of Seminole, Oklahoma, which is about fifty miles east of here. The dead are:

David Bolegs, well known Seminole Indian.

Mrs. Bolegs, his wife.

Jimmie Walker, aged 14, nephew of Bolegs.

Baby daughter of the Bolegs, aged two.

The body of the man and the forms of three others were discovered early today by neighbors. The man's body was found seated in a chair in his home. He had been shot through the head. In his hands was a newspaper. Just outside the house lay the wife of the dead man in a pool of blood. The woman had been shot, beaten and assaulted. She was dying. Inside of the house and in bed lay the nephew and the baby girl. The 14-year-old lad was unconscious, his skull beaten to a pulp. The baby had been shot twice through the head.

Mrs. Bolegs, her daughter and the lad died this afternoon.

In a statement made just before her death the woman said two Indian youths who she declared were intoxicated, knocked on the door of the home early today. Bolegs, she said, admitted them. Shortly afterward, according to her statement, the two Indians shot her husband to death as he sit in the chair and then attacked her.

The woman in her statement declared that the two Indians were known to her as Penesia and Holly Holatte, brothers, living near Wewoka, Seminole county. This afternoon Sheriff Henry Moore, of Seminole county, arrested the two Indians in the eastern part of the county and took them to jail at Wewoka.

BANK COMMITTEE IS SILENT ON CRITICISMS

Politics Played No Part in Selection of Sites, Say Administration Leaders

WASHINGTON, April 4—Members of the reserve bank organization committee continued silent today, although criticism of their selection of reserve cities and their division of the country into banking districts was still heard in congress.

Defenders of the committee declare tonight that no matter who has been charged with the responsibility of setting up reserve districts, they would have reached fundamentally the same conclusion as the committee.

POLL OF BANKS.

One fact that was brought out tonight was the poll of all the national banks which had signified their intention of entering the system was taken into consideration in naming the cities. In every district but one a majority of the banks favored the city chosen by the committee as a reserve center.

Some surprise was expressed at the critics who dwelt upon the fact that the New York district does not include Jersey City and Newark and some nearby Connecticut points. It was recalled tonight, however, that the fact that these cities were put in the Philadelphia or Boston district will not prevent their having about the same relations with banks in New York as at present. About the only difference will be that their reserve funds will not be kept in New York.

In this connection it was said that under the present system more than $300,000,000 of reserves from small banks throughout the country is usually on deposit in four banks in four great cities. In times of stress—as in 1907—much of this great sum is cut in call loans. When a crash comes, it was argued, the small banks are likely to find themselves unable to get their reserve funds from these cities.

CHARGE POLITICS.

The charge that the committee was playing politics in its selection was met tonight with the assertion that if politics had been a factor the committee would have been inclined to give a bank to Lincoln, Neb., the home of Secretary Bryan, to Louisville, where Senator James was anxiods to see one located, and to Denver favored by Senator Shafroth, who gave aid to the administration in the fight for the currency act in congress.

WILL REMOVE ALL DOUBT.

Burns declared that he feels certain that his report will remove all doubt as to the slayer.

"If you do remove the doubt from the public mind, you will have rendered the city and state a service," he was told.

"Yes," he replied, "it would be a terrible thing to hang an innocent man. It would reflect upon the whole country, not alone the state and the city."

Burns on his arrival here immediately went into a conference with Dan S. Lebon, of New Orleans, his lieutenant, whom he left in charge of the investigation during his absence.

SAYS ORGANIZED BALL HAS WON BIG VICTORY

Such is Opinion of Judge Kavanaugh, of the Southern Association

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 4.—The decision of Chancellor Henderson at Hot Springs in the Camnitz case today is a complete victory for organized baseball, in the opinion of Judge W. M. Kavanaugh, president of the Southern association, who was a witness at the hearing of the case.

"I never had the slightest doubt but that contracts of organized baseball will stand the test of the courts," said Judge Kavanaugh. "The chancellor's decision, in opinion, upholds the contention of organized baseball as to the legality of its contracts."

the chief of police while he is in Atlanta this time.

Burns declares that he will make his report to the attorneys in the case, and at the same time he will make the report public.

COUNTRY INTERESTED.

Burns seemed surprised at the unusual amount of interest manifested in the case at various places he visited while away from Atlanta. The moves in the case, he said, are being followed with interest over the whole country. He said that practically every one of the dozens of newspaper men with whom he talked asked if The Journal's editorial would not result in a new trial for the condemned man.

His reply, he said, was that it should.

Burns said that he was asked everywhere about the charges of race prejudice and "frame-up work by detectives" in the case.

"I had to explain over and over again," he said, "the fact that the public excitement was caused by the atrocity of the crime and the fact that other preceding crimes had gone unpunished. I declared again and again that the indignation was an evidence of a public conscience, which was aroused by the nature of the crime."

DISCUSS UNIFORMS OF FOOTMEN OF STATESMEN

Resolution to Increase Bryan's Salary Ruled Out of Order

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The uniform of state department footmen, their compensation, the Panama tolls fight, Secretary Bryan's salary and his chautauqua lectures and "all of the other subjects occupied the house today, during consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills.

Estimates included provision for a coachman and footman for the Bryan carriage, which provoked comment. Representative Johnson, of South Carolina, in charge of the bill, read from the Bible the story of the fiery furnace and declared Secretary Bryan had come through a furnace of "criticism, sarcasm and ridicule, with his hair unsinged and his body unscathed."

Representative Humphreys, of Washington, offered an amendment to increase Secretary Bryan's salary. It was ruled out of order, but Mr. Humphrey got a chance to talk.

"We ought to have a Secretary of state," he said, "who could not have to sell something to England and violate his party platform to extricate himself and the country from the difficulties into which it had fallen through him."

When an appropriation was reached for "driver's equipment" for the state department, Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, said Secretary Bryan was undoubtedly planning to put uniforms on his coachmen.

"Whether the British union jack should be displayed on the front or the back of the uniform is a matter of taste," he said. "But that it should be prominent somewhere is without question in view of the recent surrender of Great Britain on the canal tolls question."

SALT RHEUM IS THE ITCH FIEND

Salt rheum is one of the worst and unfortunately one of the most common of all diseases. How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales, over and over again!

Salt rheum comes from humors in the blood. This is why local applications do so little good.

Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla. It goes to the source of the trouble. It cleanses the blood and has given perfect satisfaction in thousands of cases. Get it today.—(Advt.)

"THERE IS BUT ONE FAIR AND HONEST WAY"

To Determine the MERIT of a Ready-to-take Medicine

No one can speak positively of the worth of any medicine until he has tried it. Not tried it on others, but tried it on himself. Any one who has been afflicted with a chronic ailment and experienced relief from some remedy, he and only he can give testimony that is worth anything concerning the remedy.

The people who have taken Peruna know what Peruna is. The people who have read about Peruna or heard about Peruna, have a more or less imperfect knowledge of it. The true test, the only fair and honest way, is to try it. Read the remarks below, made by people who know Peruna. If you are interested, send to us for the "Ills of Life," full of similar testimonials from honest men and women all over the United States.

Mrs. A. E. Stouffer, R. R. 1, Sabetha, Kas.: "Peruna has given me health and strength; it is the best medicine that was ever made for women. My friends say they never saw such a change in a woman. I talk to every one about Peruna. I cannot say too much for it."

Mr. Isaac Horrenga, Fremont, Mich., writes: "I was taken sick last spring, unable to work for three months and a half. My weight was reduced to 125 pounds. At last I was advised to use PERUNA. I have now gained my usual weight. PERUNA gave me a splendid appetite. I feel strong."

Miss Marie A. Lesser, No. 522 36th St., Chicago, Illinois. "I was troubled with systemic catarrh for years. The catarrh had got all through my system, head, throat, stomach and other internal organs. Tried many remedies. Did no good. Took Peruna at the suggestion of a friend. Was surprised at results. I am now perfectly well and strong. That weak, tired feeling has left me."

Mrs. Alvina Plamann, No. 2025 Elm St., Milwaukee, Wis. "I am now able to do my housework again, and have a good appetite. Peruna did it for me. We always keep Peruna in the house. We all use it, my husband and children. I thank you a thousand times for your advice."

Fine Spring Wear For Men

Benjamin Suits---Knox Hats

Manhattan Shirts--Hanan Shoes

These are important spring outfitting days. During this week you will be buying new things with which to make a good beginning of the new season.

Spring is in full swing, and time is beginning to look limited. Just a spare moment is all the time needed to buy a

Spring Suit of

Alfred Benjamin Make

They're all first New York styles—that settles the style question—they're every one finely tailored, that is marked and seen at a glance; and whatever the price of the suit, it is modest, for the value evens up to the investment in more than comfortable measure.

Distinct models—English and conservative—single and double-breasted. Remarkably trim models—blue, gray and black and white checks—making a specially fine group with a splendid variety that every personal taste may be gratified.

FALK'S

The Home of the "Home-Cooked" Foods

Not a "new idea"---but an old idea MADE NEW; brought out in the open and put into practice. There's nothing new about "FALKS' FOODS"; the way they are COOKED IS NEW to the average restaurant patron, who is accustomed to have his nostrils assailed with characteristic restaurant fumes and flavors. The absence of the customary conglomerate of tastes makes eating here a thing to be looked forward to with genuine gastronomic enjoyment. "FALKS' FOODS" are cooked like, and taste like the "home prepared". Therein lies their charm---the real reason hundreds of Atlanta's most discriminating eaters are daily walking blocks out of their way, and passing a half dozen other restaurants to get to "FALKS'" and "Home Fare".

The best evidence the class of patronage "FALKS' CAFETERIA" is getting every day, is to step in and see all of your friends eating there. "Dollars to doughnuts" one of your friends DID tell you about "FALKS'"---Isn't that right?

Every man, woman and child who eats at "FALKS'" is a "booster" for the place.

"COME UP TO LUNCH" tomorrow. Everything in season that's good to eat. Wholesome, satisfying "home-cooked" substantials, and dainty desserts.

Something new on the menu every day.

CAMPAIGN IS PLANNED FOR Y. W. C. A. BUILDING

Young Women Are Going After 1,000 New Members as First Step

As a preliminary movement toward securing a commodious, well-appointed building, the Young Woman's Christian association of Atlanta will start a brisk membership campaign in a few days. The various committees hope to secure 1,000 new members for the organization and are planning a systematic and comprehensive campaign.

Twenty companies, composed of ten women each, will start out on a date to be decided later; and each woman is pledged to secure five new members. A general chairman, or captain, will be at the head of the twenty companies directing the campaign, which will run about ten days.

If the membership campaign is successful, the association plans in a few months to begin a campaign for a new building which will be a credit to Atlanta. Although Atlanta is the largest city in the south Atlantic field and is, therefore, the logical headquarters for the Y. W. C. A. work in that territory, Atlanta's poor showing has caused the city to lose the establishment of the temporary headquarters here. The national board awarded the headquarters to Charlotte, N. C., but the members of the association in Atlanta hope to accomplish so much in the next few months that the national board will recognize Atlanta by giving to the city the permanent headquarters. The board has now the location of permanent headquarters under consideration; and the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. is very anxious to secure the cooperation of everyone in its effort to secure new members and the southern headquarters.

NO BUILDING HERE.

Despite its size and advantageous position, Atlanta has a membership of 181 only and no building at all. Neighboring cities make a much better showing. Chattanooga, Tenn., with a population of only 70,000, has a Y. W. C. A. building which cost $85,500, and the membership there is only 833. Nashville, with its population of 150,000, has a building worth $150,000, not including furnishings. St. Louis, population 687,000, has a $250,000 building, and Birmingham, with a population of only 162,000 has an $82,000 building.

The Young Woman's Christian association is a world-wide organization to promote the physical, social, intellectual and spiritual interests of girls and young women. Through its membership it seeks to federate all classes for mutual helpfulness, irrespective of creed or condition. It is a democratic, nondenominational organization which unites women in fellowship and service.

The much-needed building would provide a safe home for self-supporting girls; an employment bureau for business and domestic positions; general educational classes in any subject, practical science and music. Also included: a cafateria where a wholesome and appetizing meal can be obtained at minimum cost; a gymnasium and swimming pool; wholesome recreation and social evenings; public rest facilities; club meetings once a week, and greater opportunity to help young girls and women in many ways.

The association now does many of the things outlined, but it is greatly hampered by its lack of facilities.

DECLARES REGIONAL BANK MEANS MUCH TO ATLANTA

I. Lipstein Says It Is Best Thing That Has Ever Happened to the City

The regional bank and what it will mean in the development and growth of Atlanta is the topic of general conversation and business men of the city are enthusiastic over the city's good luck.

I. Lipstein, president of the Carleton Shoe and Clothing company, said Saturday that securing the bank was the best thing that had ever happened to the city.

"It means more than we realize at present," said Mr. Lipstein. "It will do much for Atlanta, and the city is to be congratulated also. Hoke Smith, to whom, I think, most of the credit for securing the bank should go."

Seeks New Office.

PARIS, April 4.—Joseph Calliaux, who resigned from the ministry of finance after Calliaux killed Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, has consented to become a candidate for the chamber of deputies. He expressed his willingness to undertake this campaign at the solicitation of a delegation of politicians and friends today.

Father Wins Boy After A Long Legal Battle

J. B. RICHARDS, Third.

Grandfather's Writ Denied by Court and Father Retains Custody of Child

The possession of 9-year-old J. B. Richards, Third, who has been the subject of litigation between his father and his grandfather for more than seven years in the state courts, was awarded to J. B. Richards, junior, his father, by Judge C. S. Reid, of the Stone Mountain circuit, Saturday.

Judge Reid's decision followed a long hearing brought about when the little boy's grandfather, A. McHan, of Jasper, Ga., entered a writ of habeas corpus for him in the DeKalb county courts a month or more ago.

In his writ McHan alleged Richards was an unfit guardian of the child on various grounds, one of which was that Richards had been arrested on February 4 for "spooning" on the steps of the Jones Avenue Baptist church with a young lady.

On the stand at the hearing McHan admitted he had hired detectives to shadow Richards and that these sleuths had caused Richars' arrest. It was immediately after this affair that McHan filed his suit for habeas corpus.

Fifteen or twenty prominent citizens of Atlanta and Decatur where Mr. Richards lives with his little son, testified as to the high moral character of the defendant and his eminent fitness to take care of the little boy.

In refusing the writ, Judge Reid stated he could not take the boy away from his own father on the evidence offered by McHan's attorneys, especially since counter evidence showed the boy was happy, well-cared for and in good hands.

Mr. Richards was represented by Attorneys George F. Gober, Ben J. Conyers and Aldine Chambers. Rosser, Brandon, Slaton and Phillips filed the habeas corpus suit for McHan.

Mr. Richards is a well known salesman for the Dowman-Johnson company. He lives on Atlanta avenue, near Decatur.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The war department has made public the names of army officers who will leave for France next July to study the methods of military science while detailed with French regiments. They are: Captain John W. Barker, Third infantry; Captain A. M. Miller, 110th cavalry; First Lieutenant F. W. Honeycutt and Second Lieutenant Edwin St. John Crabble, Third field army; Mayor Morton J. Henry, quartermaster corps; First Lieutenant John M. Quackmeyer, Thirteenth cavalry; Captain Frank Parker, Eleventh cavalry.

LONG FIGHT FOR EWALD ESTATE WON BY WIDOW

To Receive $300,000 Cash Annuity From Estate of Iron Master

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 4.—All litigation pending in courts here for several years against the $4,000,000 estate of Louis Philip Ewald, late Louisville and Nashville railway iron master, was ended here today. The jury in the trial of the $1,750,000 suit of Ellen J. Golden, or Ewald, against the estate, returned a verdict today declaring the woman to be the lawful widow of Ewald, under a common law marriage in St. Louis 24 years ago and the court finally approved a compromise agreement for settlement of this woman's claim by which she will receive $300,000 cash and an annuity of $10,000. Three children of the couple, adopted by Ewald, are adjudged legitimate heirs at law of the late iron master.

MODELS TO DEMONSTRATE MEN'S CORRECT CLOTHES

Mere Man Will Have His Inning at Cloud-Stanford's Monday

There have been style shows for women in these parts for years, but until recently the superior masculine sex has refused to admit its interest in things sartorial.

Cloud-Stanford company has shattered the illusion of indifference, and boldly announces that on Monday, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning and lasting until 10 o'clock at night, there will be a man's style show at its store. Clothes of all kinds, coats, hats, socks, ties, shirts, handkerchiefs will be displayed, not on racks or in cases, but on living models.

While this is frequently done in the stores which furnish the habiliments for women, it has never been done in a man's furnishing store in Atlanta before. It will be something novel and much interest is being taken in the event. The models will join the guests on the main floor and will be distinguishable from the visitors only by the button which the models will wear in the lapels of their coats to tell name and make of their clothes.

MANY LIGHTS TO BE USED.

The store will be handsomely decorated for the occasion. Flowers, small ornamental trees and many lights will be used, and small cages with canary birds inside will be hung amidst the foliage of the trees. The show cases will be illuminated, but will contain flowers instead of their usual stock.

Three sessions will be held. The first, which will begin at 10 o'clock, and close at 1, will illustrate the correct business suits for men and boys. At the afternoon session, which begins at 2 and lasts until 5, all the latest things in outing and sporting togs will be shown as well as all the newest things in midsummer garments.

The night session, from 7 to 10 o'clock, will be a full dress affair. The most formal clothes will be worn and only evening dress accessories will be shown.

An orchestra will furnish music during the day and in the evening.

Women are specially invited to attend.

ST. LUKE'S CHOIR TO SING ROSSINI'S "STABAT MATER"

Capable Singers Will Take Part in Service on Evening of Good Friday

ST. LUKE'S CHOIR.

Rossini's immortal oratorio "Stabat Mater," will be rendered on the evening of Good Friday, April 10, by the choir of St. Luke's Episcopal church. The choir will be augmented by a number of especially capable singers from other churches, and several instruments. The service will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Stabat Mater is one of the most appealing of all the oratorios, rich in melody without being in the least trivial, and containing magnificent harmonies and climaxes which are not so dreadfully classic as to be uninteresting to the layman. It has never been sung in Atlanta, and should prove a treat to real music lovers.

ATLANTA MUSICAL ASS'N IS AFTER MORE MEMBERS

Organization Which Supports Philharmonic Orchestra Asks Atlanta's Support

The Atlanta Musical association, of which Mrs. John M. Slaton is president, is continuing its campaign for new members and guarantors; and hopes at an early date to complete the number required to put the association on a sound and permanent basis.

The musical association supports the Philharmonic orchestra in Atlanta, and is very eager to give to the city an orchestra which will compare favorably with those of other cities. Five hundred members and 200 guarantors are needed for the association. The present membership is about 250, while the guarantors number about 100.

Leading women who are interested in Atlanta's artistic development have set about enlarging the membership to the desired number, and they ask the cooperation of the community in their effort.

"We feel that now is the time for Atlanta to assert its wish for an orchestra that will be a credit to the city," said one member Saturday. "Other cities maintain orchestras and secure great civic as well as artistic benefits from the organization, and Atlanta can and will, I am sure, come to the assistance of the musical association."

CHINESE BOY MURDERED WOMAN AND BURNED BODY

Killed Her Because She Found Fault With Him, He Tells Police

VANCOUVER, British Columbia, April 4.—Jack Kong, the seventeen-year-old Chinese boy suspected of the murder of Mrs. Charles A. Millard, confessed today that he committed the crime.

The boy told the police that at breakfast Wednesday Mrs. Millard had found fault with him. He struck her with a chair and stunned her, and then choked her to death, he said. Later he took her body to the basement where he cut it up and placed it in the furnace, piece by piece. He hig the clothing to convince Mr. Millard that his wife had gone out in the morning.

D. D. D. In Hospitals; Standard Skin Cure

How many hospital patients, suffering the frightful itch, the raw scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands?

That fluid is the famous D. D. D. prescription for eczema.

THE SUPERVISING NURSE of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (name of nurse and institute on application), writes regarding a patient: "The disease had eaten her eyebrows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are paying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with this same soothing, healing fluid?

DR. GEO. T. RICHARDSON frankly writes "D. D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see!

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed—calmed—so thoroughly refreshed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

But we are so confident of the merits of this prescription that we will refund the purchase price of the first full size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge.

GIRLS! GIRLS! YOU JUST MUST TRY THIS! IT DOUBLES THE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

For 25 cents you can make your hair lustrous, fluffy, and abundant

Immediately?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.—(Advt.)

Buy Diamonds That Are Worth While

Our interest and the interests of our customers are identical. We do not mean by this merely that it is good business to render good service.

We invest heavily in diamonds, and naturally take care that they are carefully and efficiently graded, weighed and priced. This we do ourselves as diamond specialists.

Diamonds carefully bought are an investment. They are particularly safe, marketable and appreciate in intrinsic value. They are not subject to manipulation or depreciation.

Our diamonds are marked in plain figures; nothing is hidden. If a stone is not perfect, the shape or cutting not correct, or if it is "off color" it is so marked.

Every diamond is absolutely guaranteed to be just what we sell it for, and you are therefore fully protected, as it is graded and classed to its real intrinsic value.

Let us explain personally our terms and prices on diamonds. We are never too busy to give you courteous attention, whether you are ready to buy or merely seek information.

U. S. MAKES TERMS ON CANAL WITH COLOMBIA

Figures for Panama Rights May Reach to $25,000,000

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—No rights to the United States for an interoceanic canal by way of the Atrato river or for a naval base off the Colombian coast are contemplated in pending negotiations for the final agreement between this country and Colombia in settlement of the controversy arising out of the partisan of the South American republic, the establishment of the republic of Panama and the cession of the Panama canal zone to the United States. This was learned here tonight from an authoritative source, with the further information that American Minister Thompson and the Colombian authorities hope to sign the final papers in about three weeks.

The United States, it was said, had abandoned effort to obtain the canal route, because the Washington administration did not consider it a practicable one for an ocean-to-ocean waterway. Colombia, on her part, is said to have dropped the effort to obtain free passage of her ships through the Panama canal.

While the final figure has not been agreed on, it was said, as to the amount of indemnity the United States is to pay Colombia for the various economic and other losses, including the Panama railway rights, which she sustained, it is understood here it will be between $22,500,000 and $25,000,000.

The treaty as finally agreed upon, it is understood, will allow to certain products of Colombia, over which no question could arise as to any treaty rights between the United States and other countries, special rates in passing through the canal, although free ship tolls are to be denied.

As to the boundary line between Colombia and Panama, it was said it would follow that laid down by Secretary Root and which was defined in the Cortes-Arosemona treaty negotiations of 1909 between Panama and Colombia and which was rejected by Colombia.

"Better Babies"

SUFFRAGETTES IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH ROWDIES

"General" Drummond and Two Other Women Arrested for Creating Disturbance

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 4.—Suffragettes created a diversion during the Unionist demonstration in Hyde Park today and "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond and the Misses Rogers and Virtue were arrested.

The women, 1,000 strong, marched through London streets and forced their way through crowds at the gates, waving the suffragette colors.

Immediately crowds of rowdies charged them, and fierce fighting ensued, the police repeatedly interfering to save the women.

Miss Virtue was on the point of being thrown into the river when policemen got her out of the hands of her tormentors.

Mrs. Drummond and other speakers, perched on the shoulders of men sympathizers, harangued the crowd. Twelve Americans, who refused to give their names, marched in the women's procession carrying the stars and stripes.

The "rally" of Unionists to protest against any coercion of Ulster brought an enormous concurse of people to the park. Meetings were addressed by peers and members of parliament. The speakers fiercely denounced any attempt "to use the army and navy to drive out by force of arms our fellow subjects in Ireland from their full heritage in the parliament of the United Kingdom."

Demands were expressed that the government should immediately submit "this grave issue" to the people.

BALFOUR MOVES PROTEST.

Arthur Balfour, former Unionist premier, who occupied the center platform, moved a resolution protesting against the use of the army and navy against Ulster and demanding an immediate general election on home rule.

"The government is on the point of committing a great national crime. If the crime is committed it will be followed by one of the greatest national disasters," he declared.

When the buzles announced the time for taking a vote on the resolution, Sir Edward Carson sprang on to the wagon waving a Union Jack and calling for three cheers for the king. His act aroused wild enthusiasm in the vast gathering, which cheered for some minutes.

AVIATOR BEECH COMES NEAR DEATH IN FLIGHT

(By Associated Press.)

HAWKINSVILLE, Ga., April 4.—Aviator Beech had a narrow escape from death here today when his aeroplane due to motor trouble dashed to the ground after it had ascended to an altitude of about 100 feet. A large crowd saw him fall in an old field several hundred yards away, and it was feared he was killed but he escaped without injury.

He met with a similar accident on Thursday when his machine fell and was wrecked after a short flight, though the aviator was not hurt. He will make another flight here Monday if he can get his motor in working order.

Eddy Refrigerators

Can You Afford

To buy a Refrigerator, a thing no longer classed as a luxury but a necessity, without first investigating:

One that is today giving satisfactory service to over 3,200 Atlanta homes.

One that is earning money every day for those 3,200 users in saving of ice.

One that is safeguarding the health of those 3,200 families by its absolute sanitary condition at all times.

The EDDY REFRIGERATOR with its CLEAN COLD SLATE STONE SHELVES, its WHITE PINE CONSTRUCTION, its PERFECT INSULATION, is the only refrigerator in the world that could enjoy such an enviable reputation.

Whether your needs in a Refrigerator are large or small, you owe it to yourself to call up some of these people and verify our claims, and if they are true, then there is but one thing left for you to do, GET AN EDDY.

Eddy Refrigerators from $12.50 up

Florence Oil Cook Stoves

"Look for the Lever"

Time had to come when you could get a safe, reliable oil stove. It has. In Florence Oil Stoves you now have safety, reliability—and more! You have simplicity and economy.

Florence Oil Stoves have no wicks, no valves. The oil supply is automatic. The heat is regulated by turning the simple little (but patented) lever device. You can have a slow, simmering fire on one burner and at the same time a quick, hot fire on another. Just set the levers as you want them—and the same heat will be given as long as you wish.

More than that, Florence Oil Stoves give more heat for the oil consumed—with a steady Blue Flame. And it only costs about two-thirds of a cent an hour per burner. Cheaper than coal or gas.

Clean, convenient and cool, Florence Oil Stoves are a boon to any kitchen. Investigate.

Spend Less Time in the Kitchen

Let the "Thermatic" Do Your Cooking

THERE'S absolutely no need of you spending so much time in the Kitchen preparing the three daily meals. You can just as well have more time for other more important things.

By the ordinary method of cooking you spend fully two-thirds of the day in the Kitchen. This is entirely unnecessary if you will use a

"THERMATIC" FIRELESS COOK STOVE

It cooks better, with absolutely no attention, cooks more thoroughly—more appetisingly; retains all the goodness—all the tissue and strength building qualities of the foods. None is lost by evaporation in boiling away. No unpleasant cooking odor nor burning or scorching.

The less expensive and toughest meats are cooked far better and more tender by the "Thermatic" method. The "Thermatic" not only bake and stews but it bakes and roasts, even better than can be accomplished by any ordinary stove, and costs less to operate.

SLATON AFTER TOGA; WEST DROPS OUT

clans of Atlanta and various parts of the state.

Governor Slaton walked over to the newspaper men and said:

"I am in the race for the unexpired term."

"Is that all, Governor?"

"That's all, gentlemen."

The governor made the statement to callers yesterday that he would not resign to make the race for the senate, should he decide to become a candidate. He intimated, however, that if he should be nominated to the senate in the state primary he might resign shortly thereafter. In the latter event, J. Randolph Anderson, as president of the state senate, will serve out his unexpired term.

ANDERSON FOR GOVERNOR.

Which brings up the fact that Mr. Anderson will shortly make his formal announcement as a candidate for governor to succeed Governor Slaton. He stated definitely to the newspaper men yesterday afternoon that if Governor Slaton should run for the senate he would run for governor.

The action of Governor Slaton in announcing as a candidate for senator throws open the governor's race, regardless of the outcome of his senatorial contest.

And into this opening it is expected that other candidates will soon toss their hats along with Mr. Anderson. Among the names mentioned in this connection are Colonel W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; State Senator B. H. Miller, of Columbus; Representative W. H. Burwell, of Hancock county; the speaker of the house, and C. Murphey Candler, the chairman of the state railroad commission.

In addition to Governor Slaton there are two other candidates for Senator Bacon's unexpired term who have been announced some time. They are Hon. Thomas H. Felder, former attorney general of the state, who resigned a few days ago to make the race, and Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick, of the Tenth district, who announced several weeks ago.

Governor Slaton's political record is well known. It dates back fifteen years or more, to the time when he was first elected to represent Fulton county in the house of representatives. He served as speaker of the house, was later elected to the state senate from the Thirty-fifth district, and served as president of the senate. It was from that place that he stepped into the governor's chair to fill out the unexpired term of Hoke Smith when the latter was elected to the United States senate by the Georgia legislature to the unexpired term of Senator A. S. Clay upon the latter's death. Governor Slaton in the next state primary, which was two years ago, ran for governor before the people and was elected.

Effingham Politics

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

GUYTON, Ga., April 2.—In local political circles chief interest centers in the race for sheriff and tax collector, Rabe Usher and H. B. Seckinger are out for the sheriff's job, and it is likely that the present incumbent, W. A. Jessup, will enter the race shortly. Fred E. Seckinger has announced for tax collector against the incumbent, T. E. Zipperer.

In district circles three candidates want to be solicitor general of the Atlantic judicial circuit, W. F. Slater, of Bryan; J. H. Smith, of Effingham, and W. G. Darnell, of Tattnall. W. G. Sheppard, judge of the Atlantic judicial circuit, so far is unopposed.

Dooly Officers Nominated

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VIENNA, Ga., April 4.—The following were nominated for the county offices in Dooly primary, held yesterday: J. F. Powell, clerk of superior court; H. O. Davis, sheriff; B. M. Wood, treasurer; C. R. Morgan, tax collector; J. J. Williams, tax receiver; C. F. Churchwell, surveyor; Dr. Grimlame, coroner. All were present officials with exception of J. J. Williams, who won a five-cornered race for tax receiver.

Miller Primary Held

COLQUITT, Ga., April 4.—In Miller county primary, held April 3, the following officers were elected: J. A. Phillips, sheriff; J. E. Lane, clerk; M. D. Jones, tax collector; D. Griffin, tax assessor; B. F. Rawls, treasurer; S. B. Wilkin, James Cheshire, J. D. Cleveland, J. M. Butler, county commissioners; J. K. Ritchie, surveyor; James Knight, coroner.

MULE DRAGS GIRLS TO DEATH IN MILL POND

LEXINGTON, S. C., April 4.—Misses Jessie and Flossie Crout, aged 20 and 18 years, were drowned this afternoon when the mule they were driving dashed over a dam into a mill pond, drawing the buggy and its occupants into the water. Elsie Crout, aged 15, a brother of the young women, was riding in the buggy but escaped by reaching the bank.

The pond is almost in sight of the home of the young women 15 miles from this place. The young women were returning from a nearby town where they had gone yesterday to spend the day with relatives. The bodies were recovered.

Imaginary Whys of Celibacy

(New York Evening Sun.)

Curious how when a man remains a bachelor people will speculate concerning his celibate state.

"Well, he has had an unfortunate affair some time or other. No man as attractive as he has gone this long without a tender memory or a woman."

"Funny she never married. Now, you'd think she'd be attractive to the men, wouldn't you?"

Has a Cure For Pellagra

Parrie Nicholas, Laurel, Miss., writes: "Seems to me if I had not obtained your remedy when I did I would not have lived much longer. I am glad you discovered this wonderful remedy that will cure Pellagra. When I began taking Baughn's Pellagra Remedy my weight was 60 odd pounds; now it is 90 odd. I would like to have this published and sent to sufferers of Pellagra."

This is published at her request. If you suffer from Pellagra or know of any one who suffers from Pellagra it is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn, who has fought and conquered the dreaded malady right in the Pellagra belt of Alabama.

The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off; sore mouth, the sore throat and tongue a flaming red with much mucous and choking; indigestion and nausea; either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope, if you have Pellagra you can be cured by Baughn's Pellagra Remedy. Get a big free book on Pellagra. Address American Compounding Co., Box 2502, Jasper, Ala., remember the money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.

GIRL DANCES AS SICK MOURN AT MEETING WHERE HEALER WORKS

ter, and the child, wriggling from the chair, slid into its mother's arms.

A woman, walking with crutches, stumbled on the top step to the platform and half fell. As she sat down in the chair where the sick come to be healed, her crutches were taken away.

Mrs. Etter stood on one side, and a man, who assists, was on the other.

The closeness of the room had become oppressive and the 1,000 people watching the healer rubbed their foreheads with handkerchiefs and fanned themselves.

The woman lying on the floor by the chair remained where she had sunk down. She had cancer of the stomach, and when she came into the hall, a companion, dressed in black, had supported her.

When her turn had come to sit in the "healing chair," Mrs. Etter had raised the sick woman's hand in the air, and commanded her to slap them together and shout words of praise.

Mrs. Etter rubbed her hands up and down the sick woman's sides, and occasionally prodded her.

"Clap your hands," urged Mrs. Etter, "and say praise God. Clap them harder."

She waved the sick woman's arms back and forth, then rubbed one hand heavily across the sufferer's body.

"The pain's all gone, isn't it?" demanded the healer. "All gone now. Get up and walk across the platform."

The frail woman tottered toward the group of singers joining in a song which swung up and down with a refrain that went: "There is power, power, power, working power in the Lamb."

She turned and walked, started to turn again, then sank to the floor. With her hand pressed to her body, she lay on the floor, her knees drawn up.

The crippled woman, after stumbling up the steps tripped against the woman lying on the floor and half fell into the chair.

Mrs. Etter bent over her on one side, the man on the other.

The singers began to lessen the vigor of their song; and, Mrs. Etter leaving the cripple, walked toward them. As she returned, a new hymn rose with increased earnestness.

"THE PAIN IS GOING."

"God will heal you," began the spiritual doctor, beginning her sentences in a low tone and ending them with a harsh shout. As she bent over the chair, she seemed old and frail herself, but her voice is almost masculine. "He is healing you. The pain is going. It is gone. You can walk now. Get up and try."

The woman was raised painfully to her feet, and began to hobble toward the end of the platform. Beads of sweat broke out on her face, and another woman threw one arm under her shoulder to help her.

"Now back again," directed Mrs. Etter, and the cripple turned and began to toll across the platform. Her face paled, and her brow wrinkled with pain.

A woman carrying a child forced her way to the platform, hurrying as though she feared someone else would reach the chair first. The baby lay in her arms with its head thrown back, its eyes closed. Its lip was pulled to one side. Mrs. Etter pressed her fingers against the sore flesh. The baby twisted and turned in its mother's arms, then lay still, except for a quiver of the body.

At a motion of the healer's arm, the mother rose and moved away.

AND THE PALSIED.

As she left the chair, a woman whose hands shook with palsy eagerly took her place. The woman's hair was silver and her face was lined with the wrinkles of age.

The healer and the man on the other side bent over, each whispering into one ear. The mourners at the benches in front of the platform suddenly raised their voices into a wail. The hymn grew louder, the healer's voice rasped above the medley of sound.

"You're well now. You don't feel pain any longer. You can walk—you can. Show everybody."

The woman had raised both hands and was waving them. Her voice rose in a queer sound like a whinney.

She got to her feet, and began to walk up and down, crying in a weak, high voice. As she passed the chair she almost stood on the woman lying motionless on the floor.

Two women, one assisting another, came up the steps, their eyes fixed on the chair as on the goal of hope.

As the woman who was being half led, half supported, dropped into the chair, she raised her hands and began to cry aloud.

"GO PAIN—NOW YOU'RE FREE."

"Go pain," shouted the healer, rubbing the back of the woman. "Smite it, Oh God! Now you're free from sickness. Show everyone you're well."

The woman shoved back the chair, and began to jump up and down.

"It's the holy dance," said the man helping in the cures.

"Keep her out in the middle," urged Mrs. Etter, "so everyone can see."

The woman suddenly stopped, straightened her body, and would have fallen had some one not caught her. She was laid on the floor at the opposite end of the platform from the woman who had dropped down in a stupor.

The girl who was dancing stopped, and sank into a chair as though exhausted. The hymn ended, and Mrs. Etter, by a motion of her hands, indicated that the meeting was closed.

Meetings will be held today at 10 o'clock, at 2:30 o'clock and at night.

Before the "healing" began, Mrs. Etter, talked to her hearers of the necessity of faith, and ended with a prophecy of the impending end of the world.

"I think many times," she said, "that I'll be living when Jesus comes again. Some of these mornings very soon the graves may open and the natives come up with a shout. Some of us may go up to heaven without dying."

REBELS MUST FIGHT ANOTHER BIG BATTLE

(By Associated Press.)

JUAREZ, Mex., April 4.—The rebel still have another battle to fight if they wish to annihilate the federal army which fled Thursday night from Torreon, say those in close touch with constitutionalist officers.

While the odds are said to be in the rebel favor an admission of General Carranza's tonight was considered significant. It was that his telegraphic conference with General Villa this evening concerned the sending of additional troops and supplies to San Pedro and Parras, where General Velasco, the federal commander, led his troops from Torreon.

"There is no news from San Pedro, because the federals in their retreat cut all the wires and burned the telegraph poles. We are hoping that a courier will arrive at Torreon or Gomez Palacio tonight with news," said General Carranza.

While there is no disposition to insinuate that Velasco can defeat the related rebels with the remnant of an army whose spirits have been affected by a defeat and great hardships, it is pointed out that he is probably able to inflict considerable damage.

The hills among which he has distributed his men are said to offer strong natural defenses and there always is the chance of being reinforced from Monterey, Saltillo or the south. Previous reports placed the number of pursuing rebels at 4,000 and the fact that the Carranza-Villa conference concerned reinforcements is said to indicate one of two things—either that another battle of large proportions is expected, or that the rebels are attempting to minimize their own prospective losses by bringing overwhelmingly superior numbers to bear.

Concrete Protection for Trees

(Popular Mechanics.)

To protect growing trees with some degree of permanency the use of concrete has been adopted, reinforced by steel bars and rings, a singularly pleasing design resulting. The concrete tree box lends itself readily to decorative features, and color may be introduced to harmonize with foliage or house coloring. When the tree outgrows its narrow box, it is no great matter to remove the concrete and release the steel bars. While the first cost is somewhat higher than a good wooden box, the lasting qualities of the concrete make it worth while.

BUCHU FINE FOR WEAK KIDNEYS

Mixed With Juniper Is Old Folks' Recipe For Clogged Kidneys and Backache

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders, dizziness and dribbling, dizzy spells, spots before the eyes, frequent passages, puffy ankles or eyelids, shortness of breath.

To avoid above troubles you simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel any of the above symptoms, get a good sized bottle of Stuart's Buchu and Juniper Compound from any good drug store, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water after meals. Stop eating sweets or sugar. In a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and natural. Stuart's Buchu and Juniper is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer hurts to pass water, thus ending bladder disorders. Everybody should take Stuart's Buchu and Juniper now and then to keep their kidneys clean and free from clogged matter. Stuart's Buchu and Juniper strengthens the kidneys. (Advt.)

FOOTPADS MAKE VICTIM LET THEM SEARCH COAT

When two negroes held up W. L. Drake, of 570 Martin street, in an alley beside the Austell building at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, they made him take off his coat, searched it, got $10 from it, and gave it back to him. Then they disappeared.

Captain Mayo and Call Officers McGovern and Jones, investigated but found no clue.

Drake said the negroes pointed pistols at him and told him they wanted his money.

The Atlanta Journal.
DAILY, SUNDAY, SEMI-WEEKLY.
JAMES R. GRAY.
PRESIDENT AND EDITOR

ATLANTA, GA., Mar. 28, 1914.

Mr Edwin P. Ansley,
Atlanta, Ga.

My dear Mr Ansley:-

I have just examined with great interest your plans for developing a suburban residence section in the vicinity of Oglethorpe University site. This section you have wisely and appropriately named "Oglethorpe Park".

In my opinion it is one of the most important developments that have been projected around Atlanta in years. The natural beauty of the country, its hills and brooks and trees, its accessibility to the city from Peachtree Road, and the numerous winding drives which you have laid out, make it most attractive.

I am glad you have undertaken this development. It means that this park is to be directed by your splendid intelligence and energy to successful accomplishment.

I am especially pleased because of the proximity of this beautiful park to Oglethorpe University. It will add greatly to the attractions of the University grounds, and in this and other ways will be a great advantage to the institution.

We have practically half a million dollars with which to begin the erection of Oglethorpe University, and expect to have a great deal more. In a short time, just as soon as certain preliminary details can be satisfactorily determined, we shall begin the work of erection. The establishment of Oglethorpe Park will help us greatly in solving some problems that we are to deal with, and I am convinced that the University will be an added attraction to the park.

Your splendid enterprise appeals to me so strongly that I cannot refrain from expressing to you my warm commendation and approval.

I trust you will have the greatest success in carrying out the plans that you have undertaken.

Very truly yours,
James R. Gray
President Board of Trustees
Oglethorpe University.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION
Daily, Sunday, Tri-Weekly

ATLANTA, GA., April 3, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Mr. Ansley:—Of all the real estate development enterprises which have been undertaken in Atlanta during the past twenty years, it seems none offers better opportunities than the Oglethorpe Park movement and the immediately adjoining enterprises, all of which, practically united, affect some 1500 acres of as attractive suburban property as adjoins any city in the United States.

It was inevitable when the Capital City Club took over the Brookhaven Country Club with its wonderful scenic attractions that every acre in that immediate section should be brought at once into the public eye for development as a high-class residence section. This movement was crystallized and emphasized when the Oglethorpe University movement assumed definite shape assuring the establishment of a great Southern University on the Silver Lake property. If any doubt remained, all that was necessary to assure the success of the movement was the touch of your magic hand as a developer.

The story of your work in transforming Ansley Park from a wilderness to one of the handsomest residence sections of Atlanta is known throughout the country, as is also your splendid development of the Forsyth street section which, in a few years, has become one of the most active business sections of the city, with property valuations increased, I understand, over 1,000 per cent in five years.

Now that you have taken hold of an extensive development plan of the property lying between the Capital City Country Club and the Oglethorpe University site, the transformation of that whole section into an aggregation of beautiful country estates, is assured.

Nature has done everything possible in contributing to the beauty of this section, and you are fortunate, in being able to secure the services of Mr. S. Z. Ruff, whose ability has been demonstrated in the landscaping of Ansley Park and Druid Hills. Mr. Ruff is an artist of rare ability and he is fortunate in having such a splendid subject for development.

Your plans furnish additional inspiration for the further development of the Capital City Club. Its golf course is already one of the best, and the additional acreage offered will make it as perfect as any in the country. I am sure the club will assist you in every possible way to secure the extension of the electric car lines, which, in the very nature of things, will be extended to the Club and to Oglethorpe University.

It is gratifying that the other real estate developments in that section are co-operating with you just as you are co-operating with them, and with this combination the results will no doubt be equally as gratifying as have been the result of your efforts on the Forsyth street and Ansley Park properties. Very truly yours,

Clark Howell

FIRST INSTALLMENT OF LOTS IN OGLETHORPE PARK

These lots from 100x300 feet up, are 1,100 feet above sea level and beyond the "smoke line."

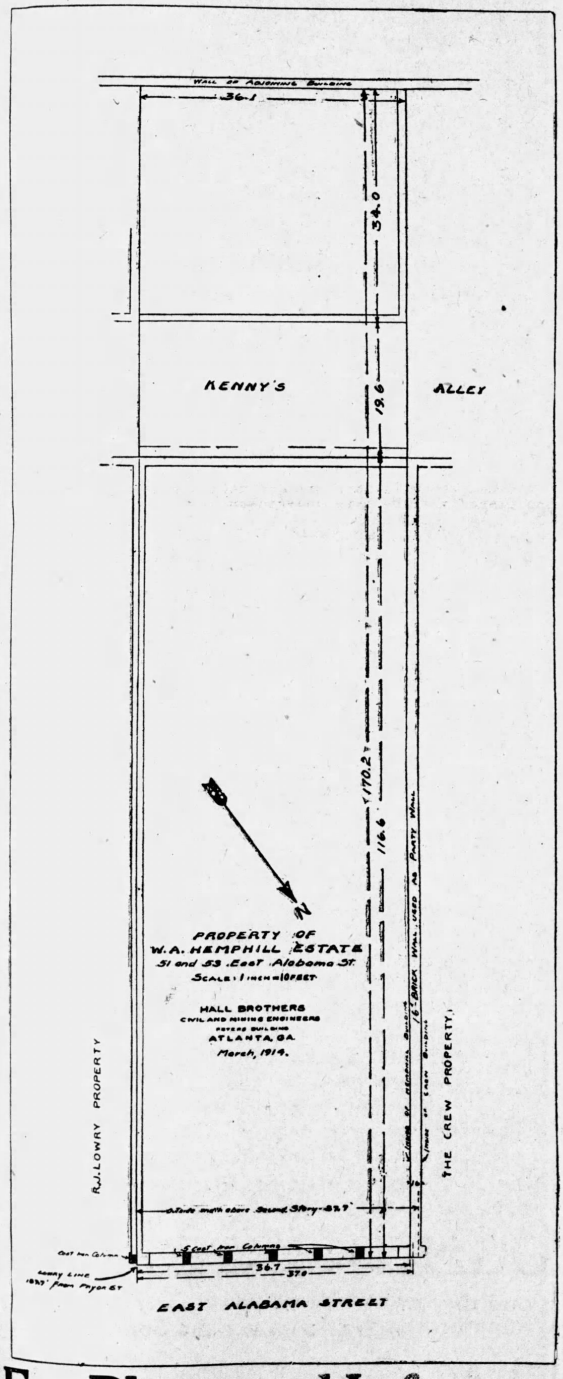
AT AUCTION

TUESDAY, APRIL 7th, 1914

BEFORE THE COURT HOUSE DOOR AT 10 A. M.

Two exceedingly valuable pieces of Central Income Property on Alabama Street, belonging to the W. A. Hemphill Estate, on the Northwest corner of Central Avenue and Alabama Street, with railroad frontage.

Also property known as 51 and 53 East Alabama. The properties are under lease and in fact are never vacant.



This is a chance of a life time and under ordinary circumstances these parcels of land would not be upon the market. The property is in a most ideal location, always rented and pays a handsome income, and we are safe in saying that the public will not find this property on the market again in many years. Some day the state will rebuild the old depot and the city will finish the plaza plan in this district, and will make this property worth double its present value.

SALE BY COMMISSIONERS.

Georgia, Fulton County:

The undersigned, R. A. Hemphill, W. F. Crusselle and J. W. Mayson, as Commissioners in case of Mrs. Lulu Belle Quinby, et al, vs. Mrs. Margaret Pegram, et al., the same being suit for partition now pending. Case No. 27712 in the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, under and by virtue of an order passed on the 4th day of September, 1913, by the Hon. J. T. Pendleton, Judge of said Court, will sell at public outcry before the Court House door of Fulton County, in the City of Atlanta, Georgia, within the legal hours of sale on the first Tuesday in April, 1914, the following described real estate, to wit.

Parcel One. All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the City of Atlanta, being composed of parts of City Lots ten (10), one (1), nine (9) and two (2) in block number three (3) and in Land Lot number seventy-seven (77) in the fourteenth (14th) district of originally Henry now Fulton county, Georgia, fronting on the southwesterly side of Alabama street thirty-seven (37) feet, and extending back southwesterly to and across Kenney's Alley one hundred sixty-eight (168) feet, more or less, to the line dividing original Lots numbers nine (9) and two from numbers eight (8) and three (3), with the reservation of a strip twenty (20) feet in width through said tract for alley purposes, being the strip now constituting Kenney's Alley; said tract of land being about one hundred eighteen (118) feet deep from Alabama street to the alley and about thirty (30) feet deep from said Kenney's Alley to the south line of said lot, both parcels being included in the tract hereby conveyed; said tract being bounded on the southeasterly side by lot of R. J. Lowry and on the northwesterly side by lot of Mrs. Jane L. Grant (formerly Jane L. Crew) and being improved property known according to street numbers of said City of Atlanta as numbers 51 and 53 Alabama street, together with said lot immediately in the rear on the southerly side of said Kenny's Alley; said premises being the same property conveyed by United States Mortgage and Trust Company to William A. Hemphill by deed dated July 1st, 1902 and recorded in Deed Book 162 page 325 in the office of the Clerk of Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, and being more particularly shown upon a plat of said property made by Hall Brothers, Civil Engineers, Atlanta, Georgia, March, 1914.

Parcel Two. Also, all that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the City of Atlanta, being part of Land Lot number seventy-seven (77) in the fourteenth (14th) district of originally Henry now Fulton County, Georgia, and being Lots numbers thirty-one (31) and thirty-two (32) of the subdivision of the property surrendered by the State of Georgia to the heirs of Samuel Mitchell, deceased, and more particularly described as commencing at the corner formed by the intersection of the northeastern side of Alabama street with the northwestern side of Central Avenue (formerly Lloyd street), and running thence northwesterly along the northeastern side of Alabama street forty-nine and one-tenth (49.1) feet, more or less, to line of property of James R. Brown; thence northeasterly along the line of Brown sixty-eight and two-tenths (68.2) feet to a point situated at the northwestern corner of a platform; thence southeasterly along the northeastern side of said platform forty-nine and forty-four hundredths (49.44) feet, more or less, to the northwestern side of Central Avenue, and thence southwesterly along the northwestern side of Central Avenue sixty-one and six-tenths (61.6) feet to the beginning point; said premises being improved property; together with all the right, title and interest of the estate of W. A. Hemphill, deceased, in and to a parcel of land lying on the northeasterly side of said tract and more particularly described as beginning at the northeasterly corner of said tract and at the northeasterly corner of said platform, and extending thence northeasterly along Central Avenue, fifteen and four-tenths (15.4) feet to the line of the property of the State of Georgia used as right of way for the Western and Atlantic railroad; thence northwesterly along the line of said property of the State of Georgia forty-nine and forty-four hundredths (49.44) feet to a point; thence southwesterly sixteen and one-tenth (16.1) feet to the northwestern corner of said tract and to the line of said platform; and thence southeasterly along the northeastern side of said platform forty-nine and forty-four hundredths (49.44) feet, more or less, to the northwestern side of Central avenue; upon which last described tract there is situated one railroad track and a portion of a second railroad track; all of said premises being the same property conveyed by Mrs. Lucie H. Harrison to W. deed dated April 20, 1887 and recorded in Deed Book E-3, page 73, in the office of the Clerk of Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia; said premises being more particularly shown upon a plat of the same made by Hall Brothers, Civil Engineers, Atlanta, Georgia, March, 1914.

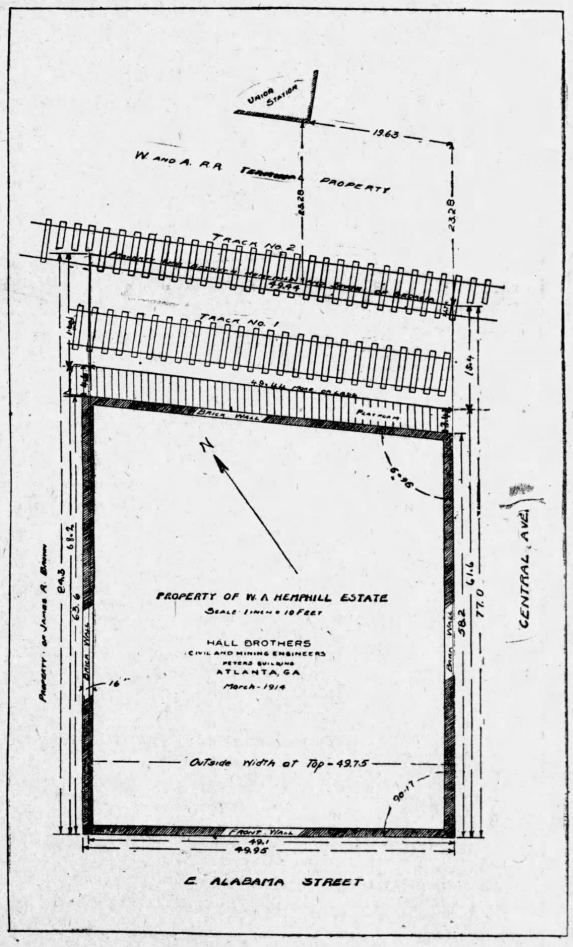
Said two parcels will be offered for sale separately.

Terms. One-fourth cash and the balance payable on or before one, two, three, four and five years, with interest on the deferred payments at the rate of seven per cent per annum, interest payable semi-annually.

Said sale to be made subject to a confirmation by the Judge of the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia.

R. A. HEMPHILL, Commissioner.
W. F. CRUSSELLE, Commissioner.
J. W. MAYSON, Commissioner,

as aforesaid in Case number 27712, in the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia.



The public would not have the opportunity of bidding on such property except that some of the heirs have brought a partition suit in order to separate the interests. The terms will be one-fourth cash, balance on or before, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years, bearing interest at 7 per cent. payable semi-annually.

The Title Guarantee Co. will issue certificates of Title.

ITCHING PIMPLES COVERED LEG

From Knee Down to Foot. Clothing Irritated and Seemed to Poison, Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Leg is Entirely Well.

R. F. D. No. 2, Morris, Ala.—"The trouble was caused by a cut which turned to a very bad running sore. My leg from my knee down to my foot was red and was covered with pimples. It itched very badly and when the pimples would break or I would scratch the top off them they would make small running sores. All the calf of my leg was covered with running sores besides the cut, from my foot up to my knee. My clothing irritated and seemed to poison the sore.

"I noticed an advertisement in a magazine of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and sent for a sample. It seemed to heal the sore up a little bit and I sent to the drug store and got two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. My leg had been sore for about five months. The Cuticura Soap and Ointment stopped the itching after dressing it once a day for three days. I washed my leg with the Cuticura Soap and spread the Cuticura Ointment all over the sore and inflamed part. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and now my leg is entirely well." (Signed) F. G. Dodson, June 26, 1913.

Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Everybody After Hot Springs Liver Buttons

People Coming for Miles Around for Wonderful Constipation Remedy That is Better, Safer and Surer Than Calomel.

Tone up your liver, clean your bowels of foul waste, drive out poisonous gases, end constipation and feel fine and full of energy in twenty-four hours.

Throw away calomel, it's dangerous, you know it, everybody knows it.

HOT SPRINGS LIVER BUTTONS are different. They are harmless, act gently but surely on the bowels and do not cause a particle of after misery and are fine for children as well as grownups.

They are joyfully laxative and more, they are fine for laziness, dizziness, biliousness, sick headache, sallow skin and malaria.

They make everybody feel good because they act as a general tonic, driving impurities from the blood and making the entire intestinal tract clean and sure in short order.

Little chocolate coated HOT SPRINGS LIVER BUTTONS are 25 cents at all druggists, and money back, if dissatisfied. Free sample from Hot Springs Chemical Co., Hot Springs, Ark. (Advt.)

WASHINGTON LOOKS FOR EARLY CLAIM BY REBELS FOR RECOGNITION BY U. S.

and barbed wire entanglements, was begun.

While Villa took a large number of prisoners Velasco escaped with a considerable portion of the force. He was pursued last night by General Hernandez, who today reported that he had fought a small rear guard engagement with the retreating force.

Stories are told here of alleged insults to the American flag at Torreon by federal soldiers, who were enraged by rumors that a large number of Americans were in Villa's army. As a matter of fact there were but nine. None of them was killed or wounded.

Dr. A. N. Carr, an American resident of Torreon, was the only physician on duty when the rebels took the town. He transferred his services to Villa and the latter instructed him to continue his work in the hospital.

WOMAN IS KILLED

Persons who say they were eyewitnesses declare Velasco summarily executed three Spaiards whom he accused of firing on his troops. The wife of one of these, Lotero Lopez, attempted to shield her husband and the same bullet killed both.

Three hundred and fifty Spaniards, including women and children, took refuge in a bank building under the protection of American Consul Elmer, who remained in town throughout the battle. The insurgents have shown no disposition to harm those Spaniards who are known to have remained neutral. Other foreigners, including fifty-five Chinese, Syrians and Austrians and 100 Americans were unharmed, so far as could be learned today.

The formal entry into the city was without ceremony. The victory has greatly raised the spirits of the soldiers, who have come through a very trying campaign and are now fully confidently of taking the national capital itself.

Only 30 Taken Unwounded in Blood-Spattered Torreon

(By Associated Press.)

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, April 4.—When General Villa took Torreon he took only thirty prisoners alive and unwounded, according to information received here today. Whether this means many were executed or that General Refugio Velasco, the crippled but valiant federal commander escaped with nearly all of his army not dead or disabled, could not be learned. However, it is known that he made the first few miles of his escape on troop trains which he abandoned when he came to the first place where the rails had been removed. This circumstances is construed in favor of the reports that he got away with the remnant of his army intact.

BLOOD-SPATTERED CITY.

A dispatch from an Italian army officer with the rebel artillery received today from Torreon says:

"Dead horses and dead men are piled high in the streets and plaza and the ruins of the city are spattered with blood. It is impossible to estimate the number of federal dead, but superficial inspection of public places would indicate that not less than 2,000 bodies are scattered about. It will be a task to get rid of the dead, a gigantic funeral pyre proudly will be built and the bodies of men and animals incinerated.

"Among the dead are some of the picked ruralists who fought against Zapata in the south, who were sent north to attempt to check Villa's victorious march. When Villa entered the city only the thirty who were made prisoners remained of the tragic story of their defeat. During the close of the fighting Thursday, when the federal garrison saw defeat was certain, they threw down their arms and took to flight."

The Italian's account of the number of dead is not relied on here.

NO COMPROMISE.

Rebel officers here quote General Villa as opposed to any compromise with the enemy, if one should be proposed.

"We will be ready to dictate in Mexico City," he is quoted. "There can be no compromise. Madero compromised and his government failed through the treachery of those who did not appreciate him or took advantage of his clemency. This revolution must be the last in Mexico, and it must be thorough and conclusive. This we must accomplish by force of arms, so that in the end there will be no questioning of our orders or our laws."

4,000 Rebels Chase Fleeing Torreon Federals

(By Associated Press.)

JUAREZ Mexico, April 4.—It is estimated here that the rebels now have a force of 4,500 men in pursuit of the federal garrison which fled from Torreon Thursday night.

Fighting between the two forces at San Pedro was reported yesterday and the day before, but nothing new on the subject was received today.

CONSTIPATION IS THE BEGINNING OF NEARLY ALL DISEASES

Keep your bowels open and liver active and avoid biliousness and kidney diseases

All food eaten has some indigestible waste, which the liver clears away day by day. Now, a heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles, and the next day its cleansing work is more difficult. These particles press and clog, and more are left out and so this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestinal canal and causing Constipation.

This is not all. If this waste is not eliminated, it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood stream and is carried along through the system to poison it and develop disease.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT dissolves the uric acid and passes it off in the urine. It flushes and cleanses the stomach and intestinal canal and relieves the liver from the pressure of fermenting waste matter. The liver then resumes its normal activity.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel. It causes no griping, nausea or vomiting, because it acts mildly and without force. It is the mercurial force of calomel that nauseates and salivates. JACOBS' LIVER SALT is pleasant and bubbling, agreeable to everyone, and no other liver medicine acts so quickly and so gently. Don't take an inferior substitute. Some stores may offer other preparations upon which they make larger profits, perhaps similar in name, but very different in action to the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. Large jar 25c (by mail 16c extra). For sale by all Jacobs' Pharmacy Stores and druggists generally. (Advt.)

GIVE PEEVISH, CONSTIPATED CHILDREN AT ONCE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Harmless "fruit laxative" cleanses stomach, liver and bowels

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When cross, irritable, feverish, pale doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently move out of its little bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless fruit laxative; they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other with contempt.—(Advt.)

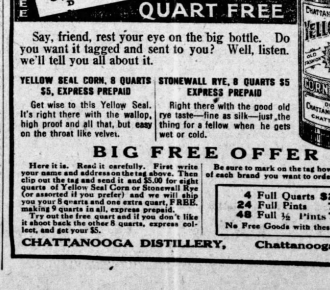
EAT NEW BREAD, CABBAGE, SAUSAGE, FISH, "PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN" WILL DIGEST IT ALL

No indigestion, no sour, gassy stomach or dyspepsia. Try it!

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, hot tile down; Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear. Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.—(Advt.)



Say, friend, rest your eye on the big bottle. Do you want it lagged and sent to you? Well, listen. we'll tell you all about it.

SANTANDER ASSEMBLY MOURNS BACON'S DEATH

(By Associated Press.)

BOGOTA, Columbia, April 4.—The assembly of the department of Santander has adopted a resolution of sympathy in the death of United States Senator Augustus Octavius Brown, of FGeorgia. This resolution is to be sent to the president of Columbia and later through the minister of foreign affairs to the American minister at Bogota for transmission to the United States. The resolution reads:

"Interpreting the patriotic sentiments of the worthy people whom it represents, and considering the expression of its sympathy and appreciation as an act of justice to those who have labored, or labor, for the supreme rights of thec ountry and humanity, it deeply regrets the death of Senator Bacon, who p'aced his highest abilities at the service of COolumbia and the weak nations battling for her in the congress of his country, in connection with the events that took place in Panama."

Under Other Circumstances

(Answers.)

Father—Upon my word, you children are getting too daisy for anything. Why, when I was your age I was glad to get enough bread to eat.

Robert—You have a much better time living with us, don't you, father?

Park several thousand persons hearing him. Forney Johnston, son of the late senator and Underwood's campaign manager, had his chief here for a final rally at which Mr. Underwood and Congressman J. Thomas Heflin, of the Fifth district, were the chief speakers. The Jefferson theater was packed to capacity for this rally.

THE TWO CAMPAIGNS.

Congressman Underwood has made one brief tours of the state, making a half dozen or more speeches a day, but has contented himself for the most part with staying in Washington and leaving his campaign in the hands of his friends, until today he had not been home since the Christmas holidays. Captain Hobson has spent the last eight or nine months in practically continuous campaigning throughout the state. He has been in every county and in most of them several times.

Captain Hobson has based his campaign directly upon what he has termed the friendship of the corporate and other interests for Underwood. He has charged that the liquor interests are pouring thousands of dollars into Alabama to defeat him. Effort to show that Underwood has constantly been the friend of the corporate interests, the Thomas F. Ryan campaign contribution when Underwood sought the presidency, his own prohibition propaganda and more recently the house leader's attitude on the canal tolls question—these have been the sum and substance of his campaign.

Congressman Underwood's partisans have relied upon his record as house leader, have denied any connection with Ryan or other corporate interests and have urged that prohibition was not an issue and had no place whatever in the campaign. They have attacked Hobson on both his record as an absentee and as a loser.

The campaign has been hard fought and frequently extremely bitter. The most sensational incident occurred last week when Forney Johnston and Phil Slaton, former secretary to Captain Hobson and now editor of the Advance, the Hobson campaign publication, had a fist fight on the streets.

BOTH MUST QUIT HOUSE.

No matter what the result of the primary Monday, both Hobson and Underwood will retire from the national house, one to private life and the other to be elevated to the United States senate March 4, 1915.

For the short term the race seems very close between Captain Frank S. White of Birmingham, and Ray Rushton, of Montgomery. Here again the liquor question enters, with Captain White representing the prohibitionists.

GUBERNATORIAL RACE.

In an ordinary campaign, the present fight for the gubernatorial nomination would have been the center of interest. Former Governor B. B. Comer, champion of the railroad rate legislation he fathered during his term, though he has been the storm center of this race, and all efforts have been directed toward defeating him. He is opposed by another prohibitionist, Walter D. Seed, now lieutenant governor, and by two local optionists, Charles Henderson, president of the railroad commission, and Captain Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture.

Comer's opposition has been railroad rate regulation, and though a pronounced prohibitionist, he has insisted that the liquor question was not now an issue. This campaign has been particularly bitter, with charges and countercharges flying thick and fast. Comer has led the field all the way and is almost certain to lead in the primary vote, though it is very doubtful whether he will receive the necessary majority. Whether Kolb or Henderson will be in the run-off with him May 11 is very much in doubt.

The liquor question has entered strongly into all of the county races, chiefly in the fight for the legislature in which in Jefferson county both factions have named full slates. The race for sheriff of this county has attracted wide attention, owing to the fact that the fees are so lucrative. This office is said to be worth about $50,000 a year for four years.

FARM CONTESTS FOR CONGRESS.

There are warm contests on for congress in all but the Fifth district and the state-at-large. J. T. Heflin is unopposed in the former and Congressman John W. Abercrombie, former president of the University of Alabama, in the latter. In the Ninth, Underwood's district, there are four candidates.

The vote in Monday's primary will be very large. Conservative estimates place it at 120,000 to 130,000, and it may be even larger. In case it reaches the latter figure it will be a record primary vote in Alabama.

So many different issues and personalities enter into the race for the following offices, it is impossible to forecast the result: Lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, commissioner of agriculture, auditor, treasurer, railroad commission, supreme court justices and judges of the court of appeals.

B. B. Comer, former governor, will be the leading candidate for the office in the Democratic primary Monday. This is conceded by his chief opponents, Charles Henderson and Reuben F. Kolb. Mr. Comer's friends believe he will receive a majority of all votes cast while supporters of Mr. Henderson and Mr. Kolb, respectively, say their candidate will prevent Mr. Comer's winning in the first primary, thus necessitating a run off on May 11.

THE CANDIDATES.

Candidates for other state offices in the primary Monday will be:

Lieutenant Governor—Thomas E. Kilby, Thomas A. Curry, of Clanton; Scott E. Chestnutt, of Birmingham.

Secretary of State—James H. Nunnelee, of Tuscaloosa; Judge John Purifoy, of Montgomery; William F. Cobb, of Tuskegee; Charles H. Greer, of Marion.

Judge of the Court of Appeals—J. B. Brown, of Cullman; E. Perry Thomas, of Eufaula (incumbent).

Congressman-at-Large—John W. Abercrombie, of Tuscaloosa (incumbent.)

Chairman Democratic Executive Committee—Hibb Graves, of Montgomery; Tyler Goodwyn, of Montgomery.

All Alabama congressmen are candidates for re-election excepting Oscar W. Underwood, congressman from the Ninth district, and Richmond P. Hobson, congressman from the Sixth district, who are opposing candidates for United States senator.

VOTERS WILL CHOOSE BETWEEN THESE TWO TOMORROW.

NEW CABINET FOR SALE OF GOODS IS PATENTED

S. Weil and G. Waters Have Clever Invention for Display of Article

An inventions which is honed to greatly facilitate the selling of goods at retail was patented on March 24 by Sigmund Weil and G. Greir Waters, of Atlanta.

Mr. Weil, who, for thirty-one years has been prominently identified with the clothing and furnishing goods business in Atlanta up to a year ago, conceived the original idea for the new patent.

The invention consists of a cabinet for the display of goods. The cabinet is square, revolving on a pivot, and also has a glass top, through which goods can be displayed.

The inventors intend to establish a plant for making these cabinets soon. At present their headquarters are in room 706 Atlanta National Bankbuilding.

In their opinion, the most practical size of cabinet for interior purposes is one two feet square and forty-six inches high.

One of these cabinets, says Mr. Weil, will display as many goods in a two-foot floor space as the ordinary seven foot show case now in use, thereby establishing a tremendous saving in floor space and store rent.

"By its unique arrangement," says Mr. Weil, "this cabinet both stores and displays a very large amount of merchandise of various kinds. Four salesmen can sell to four or more customers at the same time out of the same cabinet; or one salesman can wait upon several customers at the same time, resulting in more and quicker sales, with a minimum handling of the merchandise."

BIG FLOWER FESTIVAL IS PLANNED FOR ATLANTA

Church and Society Women Making Elaborate Preparations for Event

A great April-May Flower Festival for Atlanta is being planned under the auspices of a large committee of church and society women, appointed by the ministers' association of the city. The festival will be unusually attractive and will convert Atlanta into a flower city for a week or more.

The monetary proceeds will be used in providing for the expenses of the International Women's Christian Temperance Union convention to be held here in October.

Miss I. M. Morse, who is to direct the plans of the flower carnival, will arrive from Chicago Sunday. She has had wide experience and great success in this work in other cities, and is confident that her success in Atlanta will go beyond any of her past experiences. A committee of church and society ladies will meet Miss Morse in the ladies' parlors of the Piedmont hotel, Monday afternoon, April 6, at 3:30 o'clock.

Miss Morse will probably speak before the ministers' meeting on Monday morning.

BREAKS RIBS AND ARM IN PECULIAR ACCIDENT

W. R. Honey Injured by Trap Door of Postoffice Basement

By a rather unique accident, W. R. Honey, who lives at 237 Jones street, was painfully injured Friday afternoon. He was walking along Fairlie street just back of the postoffice, and as he stepped in one of the trap doors which open up from the postoffice basement to the street, the door flew upward suddenly and Honey, according to a policeman's account, was precipitated six or eight feet in the air. He landed heavily on the pavement, breaking several ribs and fracturing his arm. He was taken to Grady hospital for treatment.

THE CITY NEEDS ITS CITIZEN SOLDIERS

COLONEL MAKES APPEAL FOR UPHOLDING OF FIFTH

Says Atlanta Should Be Proud of Regiment, and Enlistment Encouraged

BY COL. ORVILLE K. HALL,
Colonel Commanding the Fifth Regiment, N. G. G.

Atlanta is the only city south of Baltimore which has a full regiment of militia. This is a distinction which Atlanta should be loathe to relinquish from a standpoint of civic pride, but it is not of this that I want to talk.

We are told that this is an age of commercialism and I want to show the business men of Atlanta in this statement that from a purely cold-blooded business standpoint there is no better investment he can make than to encourage his employees to belong to the militia.

The only money we get from the city of Atlanta for the support of the Fifth regiment is a few thousand dollars for janitor service and supplies. This amount invested by the city would pay for the services for a year of one policeman. Contributed to the militia it gives Atlanta 700 well trained and armed men to protect lives and property in every case of trouble and emergency when additional protection is needed.

Atlanta's force of 300 policemen is admitted numerically too small, even for normal times. The value of the militia in Atlanta is then theoretical. It was proven in the time of the big riot. It is the fate of all cities, no matter how well governed, to have occasions of that kind periodically, and unless Atlanta is different from any other city in the world, sooner or later there will again be occasion, though not necessarily of the same kind, to call on Atlanta's militia for the protection of lives and property.

APPEAL TO TAX RATES.

The presence of a regiment of militia in Atlanta has a direct affect on fire insurance and tax rates. It has an affect on all big business interests. Investigation shows that it is taken into consideration when big outside insurance companies and capitalists invest great sums in Atlanta.

The only thing that Atlanta has to subscribe to keep this regiment intact is the paltry thousand dollars from the city and the time which employers will permit their men to have off for special duty and for the annual ten days in camp. This time does not amount to nearly as much as the public may imagine from the recent opposition to the militia of some Atlanta employers. In most instances the ten days' camp is accepted by the employe as his vacation time. No time from work is required for drills because the drills take place at night—every Monday evening.

The only time when a man is actually called from his work is for two or three parades on special occasions each year and for very occasional emergency duty in time of riot or for the protection of prisoners. During the past year I recall only three occasions when the men were specially called on—one for the Memorial day parade, another for the Corn Show parade, and another was for the protection of the prisoners at the trial at Cummings. The Memorial day parade and Corn Show brought hundreds out of town visitors and the public who patronize Atlanta stores and Atlanta industries, and who probably a great deal more profit to Atlanta merchants than they could have lost by the absence of their men from duty.

It is not much that we are asking from employers in Atlanta, in consideration of what they receive in return. The United States government spends $2,000,000 a year for the militia, $80,000 comes to Georgia, and more than one-third of the $80,000 is spent right here in Atlanta. The Georgia legislature appropriates $25,000 more, of which Atlanta gets a large share.

TIME FOR DRILLS.

The attitude of the government toward the militia is further shown by the fact that it has directed that all government employees be permitted and encouraged to join the national guard.

I am confident that business men in Atlanta who have made it difficult for their employes to be members of the militia, have not stopped to take these facts into consideration. If the militia asked that the men be given regular time off for drill every week or every month, it would be a different proposition, but the men are willing to use their own time at night. They are willing to accept the ten days in camp as vacations which they would spend in no way in most circumstances, so that, as I have pointed out before, the extra time they take from the work amounts to only two or three days a year.

The Monday night drills cannot in any way interfere with the efficiency of an employe for work the next day. If the man is a clerk in an office or store, the exercise he gets in the drill is a healthy diversion. He will be better the next day than if he had spent the evening at the theatre or on the street. Membership in the militia conserves efficiency.

We are trying more and more to make our armory a high class club—but minus the liquor features, mind you,—and we hope eventually to install more adequate baths, a swimming pool, gymnasium and reading room. With what we already have I believe any young man is made a better and more valuable employe by the training he gets in the militia. It inculcates ideas of soldierly obedience in him, and makes him red-blooded and healthy.

RECRUITS ONLY NOW.

Atlanta ought to be proud of her militia men. As a matter of fact, Georgia stands highest in efficiency and equipment among all the southern states. It means something to keep a regiment like this alive in Atlanta. It is a thing Atlanta is proud of. From a civic standpoint it is a good "advertisement" for Atlanta and is a plain business proposition; it is an asset to every business man in Atlanta.

In conclusion, I want to say just one word for my brother officers and myself. We get no pay for being in the militia. It is hard work that we are doing for the civic good, just as other men give their services free to the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations for the upbuilding of Atlanta. The pay that the officers receive for the ten days they are in camp each year does not begin to pay their actual expenses, and there is not an officer in the militia who does not contribute his money as well as his time to the cause.

I feel that this ought to be said so that it may be plainly understood that neither I or any other officer can have any selfish or personal interest in keeping the militia alive.

I want the business men of Atlanta to think about this proposition. I want them to realize that it is to their own advantage to keep the militia alive. I want them to remember that when they

5,000 Stand in Silence As Ship of Dead Steams in

Bellaventure Arrives at St. John's Bearing 69 Dead and 50 Crippled Survivors of New Foundland Disaster

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Five hundred city police and detectives swept from all sides into a mob of men and women in Union Square today when union and non-union laborers opposed one another at mass meetings. Concealed in buildings fronting the square and mingling in twos and threes in an orderly throng that had gathered to sympathize with the Michigan copper strikers, the police were prepared when a mass of the unemployed, marshalled under banners of the Industrial Workers of the World, marched in from cross streets.

Disturbance after disturbance ensued. Mounted police galloped down on surging crowds. The hidden police sprang from office corridors and store doorways. Detectives began making arrests of I. W. W. men, accused as leaders of the mob, and attempts were made to rescue the prisoners. Here the police drew their clubs and battled their way to the center of the mob to save the detectives from harm.

Nine men were arrested, including Joseph O'Carol, a youthful I. W. W. leader; Adolph Wolff, a sculptor, known as "the poet of the East Side," and Joseph J. Gans, also an I. W. W. leader. The others were a school teacher, a student, a merchant and unemployed men of various trades.

Union leaders, represented by the Central Federation union, had called the Union Square meeting for the union's president, Thomas J. Curtiss, during an appeal on behalf of the copper strikers, repudiated the I. W. W. and unemployed disturbers, saying: "Labor unionists—I mean men who work and are willing to work—do not countenance nor sympathize with the sort of demonstration you have witnessed this afternoon. They do not believe in seeking to accomplish their rights by disorder nor the display of red banners, but are confident that relief is to be found in the ballot. And through the ballot alone will they remedy the ills from which they are suffering."

WOULD REPEAT PARADE.

The city had given the Central Federated Union its fight to gather. The I. W. W. had announced its purpose of repeating the parade held through Fifth avenue a fortnight ago. The Central Federated Union, forestalled this move by obtaining a permit for a parade for today, although the labor union made no arrangements to march. The police were on hand to prevent the unemployed and the I. W. W. from parading; and beside the force of 500 men at Union square, policemen were stationed in the clubs, churches and hotels along Fifth and Madison avenues. Police Commissioner Douglas I. McKay and several of his deputies witnessed the rioting in Union square.

The Central Federated Union announced on placards that the advertised meeting of the unemployed had been postponed for a week, but the unemployed proved the contrary by assembling under red banners inscribed: "Tannenbaum must be freed!" This allusion was to the young I. W. W. leader, recently sentenced to a year in the workhouse for participating in an unlawful assemblage in a church.

MOB FIGHTS POLICE.

Gans who carried this banner, was arrested first, charged with carrying it without a permit. O'Carol's arrest precipitated the wildest disturbance. Hemmed in by a fighting mob the police who held O'Carol prisoner were unable to move until Sheriff Grifenhagan ran his automobile into the heart of the throng. O'Carol and his captors leaped into the car and were borne away as mounted officers charged and scattered the men and women rioters.

During the incident, O'Carol's head was cut. It was charged that the police clubbed him.

"Kill the capitalists!" and "the police are here to persecute us!" were yells that arose from the crowds as they fled. Four persons charged with using such language, or who refused to move of interfered with the police were made prisoners.

SENATORS DECLARE WAR ON SECRECY IN SENATE

Kenyon Begins Hostilities by a Movement to Filter Ban on Publicity

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Open war was declared in the United States senate today against the time-honored rule of secrecy relating to proceedings in executive sessions.

Following the defiance expressed by several senators in closed session on Friday against suppressing debate on the confirmation of Winthrop M. Daniels, of New Jersey, as a member of the interstate commerce commission, actual hostilities began when Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, after a conference with those of his colleagues who are leading in the movement to lift the ban on publicity, introduced a resolution to provide for open sessions on all matters except treaties, unless otherwise directed by unanimous consent of the senate.

The resolution proposing to amend the rules and which was referred to the committee on rules, reads:

"Resolved, That it is the judgment of the senate that all executive sessions shall hereafter be open to the public except when treaties are considered or when the senate by unanimous consent orders otherwise; and the committee on rules is directed to prepare such amendments to the present rules, or to prepare new rules, or both, as may be necessary to carry out the terms of this resolution and present the same to the senate for action thereon."

It was submitted with the backing of Senators Lafollette, Cummins, Borah, Clapp, Jones, Bristow, Norris and Poindexter, who propose as they have notice Friday, to discuss freely executive session debates on the qualifications of nominees for public office before their confirmation, that public should be informed regarding them. These senators were united today in the anti-secrecy campaign and all declare themselves without fear of any attempt being made to unseat them on grounds that they are violating the oath of office.

Even senators who adhere to the most strict interpretation of the senate rules admitted that the senate could not punish members who disclose information relating to presidential appointments, agreeing that observations of secrecy was a matter of appealing to the "individual conscience."

Administration leaders and Republican senators who have long cherished the dignity of senate procedure, expressed the view today that no action would be taken at this session of congress at least. If senators wish to make public debates concerning presidential appointments, they would be privileged to do so without endangering their seats.

Trouble has been brewing for many months over executive session secrecy and an upheaval was threatened recently when Senator Root, in opening general arbitration treaty with Great Britain. In that debate Senators Borah and Gronna engaged in a wordy controversy over the purposes of the Carnegie endowment for international peace. What the senators said on this point was widely published, and in a subsequent executive session a resolution was introduced by Senator Kern, the majority leader, directing an inquiry by the foreign relations committee into the manner in which information regarding secret proceedings are made public. It was referred to the rules committee where it since has reposed, no action having been taken.

TOLLS BILL REPORT IS EXPECTED WITHIN WEEK

Hoke Smith's and Overman's Amendments May Have Some Bearing

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—There was every prospect today that the Panama free tolls repeal bill would be reported in some form from the senate committee on interoceanic canals within a week so that the all-absorbing subject may be formally under consideration. Leaders on both sides of the question asserted there would be no unnecessary delay in passing upon the house repeal bill in committee.

Several senators who oppose the repeal asserted that they would oppose delay in committee, agreeing that nothing could be gained by delay. In view of this attitude the feeling is growing that the house bill flatly repealing toll exemption for American ships will be reported with the committee without recommendation.

Some of the many proposed compromise measures also may be reported in the same manner, leaving it to the senate to determine the whole controversy.

Some senators look upon amendments to the senate rules proposed by Senators Hoke Smith, of Georgia, and Overman, of North Carolina, as designed to have bearing on the toll exemption repeal debate. Senator Smith, who is to be one of the Democratic leaders in the fight for the repeal bill, gave notice today that he would seek the adoption of a rule which would compel a senator to speak directly on the measure before the senate for discussion.

Senators that include appointment supporter of the repeal bill, has introduced an amendment to the rules which would provide that no senator should "directly or indirectly by any form or words impute to another senator or other senators any conduct or motives unworthy or unbecoming of a senator, or in any manner refer disrespectfully or offensively to the president of the United States or to the vice president."

The impression of some senators is that those amendments constitute modified forms of lecture and a fight on them is certain. Although the canals committee will not meet until Tuesday to make up the house repeal bill formally, senators McCumber, Lodge, Thomas, Fosdick and Norris have announced their intention to speak on some features of the tolls controversy during the week.

You'll Crow Over "GETS-IT" for Corns!

It Will Startle You How "GETS-IT" Gets Corns Every Time.

"One, two, three!" That's about as long as it takes you to apply "GETS-IT," the new-plan, simplest, surest corn cure the world has ever seen. Corn fooling is all over.

"This Is No Place For a Crow. Her Corns Are All Gone. She Must Have Used 'GETS-IT.'"

Corns, corn pains and calluses are absolutely done for, from the minute you apply "GETS-IT." Forget the bother of medicated plasters, greasy salves that spread and make toes sore and raw, little doughnut cotton rings that press on corns, forget knives, razors, scissors and the dangers of blood poison from drawing blood, and the contraptions and harness that simply make corns worse. "GETS-IT" never hurts the tenth, never fails.

Since John Quit Drinking

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman,
In all this little town,
And my merry laugh and singin'
Are the talk of all around.
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more,
And the world's just one big smile,
With such happiness in store!

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Moments" the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
So I'll try them and see the game.
So I got GOLDEN REMEDY
(As far as my cost) he
And I mixed it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.

And it didn't taste a little bit
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothest kind of salting
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
(And cried some, too, I guess)
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute,
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as any one,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nicer life.

"Since John he quit a-drinking"
I can't say I like much,
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff,
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Bless GOLDEN REMEDY.

Take Jacobs' Liver Salt on Arising

And You'll Enjoy Your Breakfast

NO appetite in the morning? Bilious' Headache? Best thing in the world for you is Jacobs' Liver Salt. Bad breath, biliousness, constipation, flatulency, daytime drowsiness, wakefulness at night—all from FOOD POISONING. Undigested food, fermented, is poisoning the system.

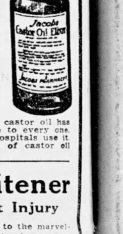
Jacobs' Liver Salt instantly flushes the alimentary tract with water, sending a cleansing stream through it from all parts of the system. Packed, clogging matter is loosened and with the fermentation washed away, pressure is removed, liver and kidneys resume their natural cleansing processes of elimination. No forced action as with calomel and severe purgatives; never a griping pain or nausea.

Take Jacobs' Liver Salt on arising. It is effervescent and stimulating. You feel better at once, a good appetite for breakfast and good digestion, that dull heaviness vanishes and your brain is clear and quick.

Jacobs' Liver Salt keeps one up to the top notch. 25c at druggists, or by mail postpaid.

Jacobs' Castor Oil Elixir

Looks Delicious, Smells Good and You Can Not Taste the Oil



IT is a pure castor oil, the best purgative known, but its color is the clear, translucent green of the beautiful beryl, and its odor is so pleasant you will immediately whiff it again. You can not taste the oil, neither when taking it nor afterwards, as it does not return or nauseate. It has a slightly sweet taste. Children will not suspect it, as the taste is pleasant, and it has not the yellowish color of oil.

It is a pure cold pressed castor oil prepared with aromatics and carminatives, which have a specific action upon the stomach and prevents the usual griping effect of the oil. Two grains phenolphthalein to the ounce increases its efficiency as a mild purgative, and at the same time reduces the dosage to about half the usual quantity of castor oil.

Jacobs' Castor Oil Elixir is the best form in which castor oil has ever been prepared, and the only form that is agreeable to every one. Safe for children of any age. Physicians all use it. The hospitals use it. It is the only truly pleasant and unrecognizable form of castor oil known. 2-oz. bottle, 25c.

Call for Progressive State Convention

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Progressive Party of Georgia held in the Ansley Hotel, Atlanta, on March, 1914, I was instructed, as State Chairman, to issue a call for a State Convention to meet at the State Capitol in the City of Atlanta at noon on May 12, 1914—the purpose of said Convention being to formulate a State Platform, to name a State Committee, a member of the National Committee and to nominate a State Ticket, with candidate for the United States Senate.

The basis of representation will be two delegates and two alternates for each member of the Lower House of the General Assembly.

All qualified white voters in sympathy with the purposes of the Progressive movement are requested to meet in mass convention at some suitable place in their counties at some date prior to May 1 for the purpose of electing these delegates and creating a county committee.

The names of delegates and alternates chosen to the State Convention should be certified before May 5 to William J. Tilson, State Chairman, at 1701 Hurt Building, Atlanta, or Dean F. Ryman, State Secretary, 319 Atlanta National Bank Building, Atlanta.

While the State Executive Committee recognizes that it is not within its province to dictate in district and county matters, it was the sense of the meeting that we should recommend to Progressive voters over the State the propriety of making nominations for Congress in each Congressional District, and candidates for the State Senate and Lower House of the General Assembly in every Senatorial District and County.

This April 2, 1914.

Attest:

DEAN F. RYMAN, Secretary. WILLIAM J. TILSON, State Chairman.

Road and Water Scenes in North Fulton County

How the Use of the Automobile and Road Improvements Have Brought the Country Close to Town

TWO things caused the great rise in the value of Fulton county acreage. One was the growth of Atlanta and its suburbs, and the other was the growing use of the automobile.

Values were discounted on the idea that the growth of the city would soon demand more lots for building purposes, and the use of automobiles made the distances appear smaller.

It used to be that a ten-mile drive into the country was equal to a day's excursion. Now, with an automobile, it is a matter of an hour or so.

Good roads naturally followed. How the average county road is in better shape than the average city street.

The advent of the automobile was a revolution in itself, and the development of good roads was another. The two together, which reduced travel from a matter of several tedious hours to one hour of pleasure naturally made land look mighty cheap in bulk at $10 to $30 an acre, and people began to buy.

LAND VALUE NATURAL.

So there is nothing so very remarkable, when you study it out, in the fact that land values in a few years in north Fulton county have jumped from the farm land basis of $10 an acre to $100 an acre and up.

Many a farmer in north Fulton has become rich simply because he was unable for many years to find a buyer for his land. He was forced to hold on, until finally, when prices began to soar, he was forced to let go.

In the matter of north Fulton, of course, the increase was due to the special advantage of being in the path of the immense residence development on Peachtree and the entire northern section of Atlanta.

A destination ten miles out doesn't seem so far when you approach it between rows of city mansions.

These developments changed farming country from a thing to be traveled through for the sight of woods and fields to a place of residence.

COUNTRY COLONIES.

The first country residences were built out Peachtree Road, where they are still being built and always will be. Then quite a colony was established on the Pace's ferry road. There houses costing a small fortune were built on large tracts of land.

Then houses began to be built on the Roswell and other country roads. Later on large tracts were subdivided into building lots, and these were improved from time to time.

Consequently the country several miles out from the city limits became dotted here and there with homes, and people who began at first to use them as their summer homes, gradually began to live in them the year around.

Another big step taken in north Fulton was the action of the Capital City club in acquiring the Brookhaven club as its country club. Here was a well equipped, exclusive country club, with its golf course, tennis courts and other outdoor equipment.

This led to the opening of subdivisions around the club grounds, where an extensive country colony is now being established.

Another big development that is going on is around Silver Lake and the site of the new Oglethorpe University. There great subdivisions have already been opened, with the immediate prospect of a great colony with the university as its nucleus.

These are the newer developments. There are also the extensive subdivision and home building developments in subdivisions on and adjoining Peachtree road, between the city limits and Buckhead, including new roads opened and recently paved. There has also been an immense development on the Plaster's Bridge road, now known as Piedmont drive, a continuation of Piedmont avenue to Peachtree road and thence west.

All that section at Peachtree road and Piedmont drive was opened as a residence community when the county sold the old almshouse property. Soon afterwards land that had sold by the acre sold at a high front-foot valuation.

RIVER DEVELOPMENT.

A development out of the usual, which already has the approval, has already been put under way, and its accomplishment is a question of only a short time, is the building of the proposed Riverside Drive along the Chattahoochee River.

Here the topography is almost mountainous, and the view of the river from its high embankments is at its best. It is proposed to build a driveway along the river bank on the Fulton county side, extending from above Bull Sluice south to some main county road.

This would afford not only ideal residence sites, but also a most picturesque automobile driveway.

The topography of north Fulton is notable for its variety. Leaving the level ridge upon which Peachtree Road is built, the automobile tourist can take to the hills and depressions of the Roswell and Howell Mill roads, where there is some of the finest scenery in the whole county.

The roads cross and recross in such manner that the automobile driver can cover the entire section and still keep on a smooth pavement and in picturesque scenery. There is no finer road development in the south than in north Fulton.

PRIMARY RULES ARE ADOPTED

COMMITTEE IN FAVOR OF COUNTY UNIT RULE

Primaries to Be Held August 19—Convention in Macon September 1

That the county unit rule shall "invariably prevail in the nomination of all candidates for offices filled by state-wide vote was the rule adopted yesterday by the state Democratic executive committee, which means that this rule shall apply to United States senatorial candidates in the forthcoming state primary as well as to candidates for governor and other state house offices.

The substance of the committee's action, with reference to rules and regulations for the primary, date, etc., was as follows:

Wednesday, August 19, was fixed as the date of the primary; Tuesday, September 1, was fixed as the date for the state convention; and Macon was selected as the place for the state convention. Editor Clark Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution, moved the selection of Macon on behalf of the Atlanta members of the committee, as an evidence of Atlanta's appreciation of the industrious support and hearty cooperation rendered by Macon to Atlanta in the latter's campaign for the regional bank. The selection was unanimous.

Candidates for the United States senate and for governor and other state house offices who receive the largest popular vote in a county shall be entitled to the unit vote of that county in the convention. Where two candidates go into the convention with the same number of unit votes then the candidate receiving the largest popular vote shall be declared the nominee. Where no candidate (in the event of three or more running) has a majority of the unit votes in the convention then the nomination shall be left to the convention.

Committees to Decide.

Congressional executive committees in the various congressional districts, and state senatorial executive committees in the various state senatorial districts, shall determine whether the county unit rule or the popular vote rule shall apply in the nomination of congressmen and state senators.

Judges of the superior court and solicitors general shall be nominated by the plurality vote of their respective circuits.

The rules were written by a rules and resolutions committee of fifteen, of which Albert Howell, Jr., the Atlanta lawyer, was chairman. The committee was appointed immediately after the committee convened, and it had hardly left the room before a spirited fight started on a motion, made by H. J. Boykin that the committee be instructed to report in favor of the unit rule.

Joe Hill Hall, of Bibb county, erstwhile veteran member of the legislature and a candidate for governor four years ago, opposed the unit rule in a vigorous and forceful speech. G. Rufus Hutchens, of Rome, spoke at length in support of the unit rule. The discussion was left up in the air by Mr. Boykin's withdrawal of his motion, and Mr. Hall did not renew his fight when the rules committee's report was put on adoption.

He did make a fight, however, on a rule reported by the committee in reference to the nomination of judges and solicitors, whereby the chairman of the county executive committees comprising a judicial circuit might meet and fix the unit rule instead of the popular vote rule. There were various other speeches and several amendments were offered notably one by H. H. Deaton, of Gainesville, providing for the creation of judicial circuit executive committees. Finally it remained for ex-Gov. Bert Clay, of Marietta, son of the late Senator W. S. Clay, to move a substitute for the whole which was adopted, whereby the plurality vote shall prevail in those nominations.

RESOLUTIONS IN FULL.

The resolutions adopted by the committee are as follows:

Atlanta, Ga., April 4, 1914.

The state executive committee of the Democratic party in the state of Georgia at a regular meeting held in the city of Atlanta on this date, by authority granted it by the Democratic party of said state, hereby directs as follows:

I.—That a Democratic primary election be held on Wednesday, August 19, 1914, in each of the counties of this state for the selection of candidates of the Democratic party for the following offices, to-wit:

Governor.

United States senator for the full term beginning March 4, 1915, to succeed Hon. Hoke Smith.

United States senator for the unexpired portion of term ending March 4, 1919, made vacant by the death of Hon. A. O. Bacon, and, now held under temporary appointment by Hon. W. S. West.

Attorney general.

Secretary of state.

Comptroller general.

Treasurer.

Commissioner of agriculture.

State superintendent of education.

Commissioner of commerce and labor.

Commissioner of pensions.

Railroad commissioner for the term beginning December 1, 1915, to succeed Hon. Paul B. Trammell.

Prison commissioner for the term beginning January 1, 1915, to succeed Hon. E. L. Rainey.

Supreme court justices for terms beginning January 1, 1915, to succeed Hon. H. D. Evans and Hon. H. W. Hill.

Judge of the court of appeals for the unexpired term beginning January 1, 1915, to succeed Hon. R. B. Russell.

Judge court of appeals for unexpired term ending January 1, 1915, made vacant by resignation of Hon. B. H. Hill and now held under temporary appointment by Hon. L. S. Roan.

Judge court of appeals for unexpired portion of term ending January 1, 1915, caused by resignation of Hon. J. R. Pottle, and now held under temporary appointment by Hon. P. L. Wright.

Representatives in the congress of the United States from the various congressional districts of this state.

Judges of the superior courts and solicitors general required by law to be elected in the general election of this year.

State senators from the various senatorial districts.

Representatives in the general assembly from the various counties.

And candidates for such other offices to be filled in the general elections of this year who properly should be selected in the state-wide primary, and the chairman of this committee is directed to include such offices as may be omitted or which, owing to later developments, should be included.

The primary election shall be conducted in accordance with the laws of this state and the customs of the party in so far as those customs do not conflict with existing laws. All white electors who are Democrats and qualified to vote in the general elections who, in good faith, will pledge themselves to support the Democratic candidates for all offices to be voted on this year are hereby declared qualified to vote in said primary, and the act of voting in said primary shall constitute the aforesaid pledge.

II.

It shall be the duty of the Democratic executive committee of the several counties, and especially of the chairmen thereof, to select and properly advertise place or places of voting in each election precinct of each county, respectively; to select capable managers for conducting said elections; to furnish said managers a list of all registered and qualified white voters in the respective districts of such managers; to see to printing and to make all other necessary arrangements for holding such primary election in their respective counties. In selecting managers they shall so far as practical give recognition to all candidates.

IV.

The chairman of this committee shall prepare an official ballot containing the names of all qualified candidates for nomination to the various offices filled by statewide vote and forward the same to the chairman of each county committee at least ten days before the date of said primary; and such chairman of each county committee shall follow the form of said official ballot in having ballots for his county printed, taking pains to see that the names of all qualified candidates for nominations to offices to be voted on in said county at said primary election are printed thereon.

V.

No person shall be deemed a candidate in said primary unless he is legally qualified to hold the office for which he announces, is a valid member of the Democratic party, has been party in both state and national politics, and pays the assessments hereinafter prescribed by the time hereinafter named. The voter shall erase from the ballot the names of those persons for whom he does not desire to vote, leaving on said ballot only the names of those persons for whom he desires to vote. In cases where more than one candidate is to be nominated for a particular office each voter shall vote for as many persons as there are nominations to be made; otherwise, his vote for candidates for that particular office shall not be counted. No ballot shall be counted which does not conform to the official ballot.

Candidates for United States senator, governor and other state officers, including justices of the supreme court and appellate court judges, who receive, respectively the highest number of votes in each county, shall be considered to be entitled to that county and entitled to the full vote of such county on the county unit basis in the convention hereinafter prescribed.

VII.

All candidates for superior court judge and solicitor general are to be voted for only in the counties of their respective circuits; and the candidates receiving the largest number of votes in their respective circuits shall be declared elected for concurrent terms in the same where two or more are to be nominated for concurrent terms in thesame circuit, each candidate in said primary shall be required to designate the place sought by naming the incumbent, and it shall so appear on the ballot.

VIII.

In so far as the primary relates to the nomination of candidates for congress from the various congressional districts, such candidates shall be voted for only in the counties comprising their respective districts; and it shall be left to the congressional executive committee of each district to determine whether the county unit or popular vote plan will prevail; and the Democratic executive committee of each Senatorial district shall likewise determine as to which plan shall prevail in choosing nominees for the state senate.

IX.

Each county Democratic executive committee shall select from among the friends and supporters of the successful candidate for governor in each county delegates to the state convention in the ratio of two for each of said county's representatives inthe general assembly, with alternates, and said delegates shall be instructed to cast the vote of such county for the successful candidates for United States senator, governor, statehouse officers, including justices of the supreme court and court of appeals judges, etc., etc. It shall be the duty of each county chairman in advance of the convention to furnish the secretary of this committee with the names of the delegates and the alternates appointed; and it shall also be the duty of the chairman to provide such delegates and alternates with written credentials; provided that no county shall be entitled to more delegates than votes to which it is entitled in the convention with a like number of alternates.

X.

The purpose of the primary election being to determine the will of the members of the party in the various counties as to candidates and party policies that will, as nearly as it is ascertained, shall be conformed and adhered to.

The unit rule shall prevail invariably in making nominations of candidates for all offices voted by state-wide vote. Those entitled to receive a majority of unit votes for the nomination of such offices shall be declared the nominee of the democratic party for the office in question; and in determining the unit votes of all counties carried by each candidate shall be counted for such candidate.

If any two persons receive, or are entitled to receive, the same number of unit votes for the nomination, the one who received the largest number of popular votes in said primary shall be declared the nominee.

XI.

Each candidate for governor and for United States senator is hereby assessed the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250), and each candidate for state-house office, including supreme court justice and appellate court judges, is hereby assessed the sum of one hundred dollars ($100), which shall cover all assessments against said candidate in said primary election and no other assessment, basis or any other committee shall be levied or collected from them. The payment of the above assessments shall be made to the chairman of this committee on or before noon on the first day of August, 1914, and such payment shall be accompanied by a statement signed by the candidate naming the office for which he enters, and if the office is one for which more than one persons are to be nominated, he shall describe the place for which he is running, the present, or then, incumbent; and he shall so appear on the official ballot. The name of no candidate shall be placed on the official ballot who fails to pay the required assessment and file such signed statement by the time named. The county, senatorial and congressional committees shall levy such assessments as to them may seem proper on candidates not assessed by the state executive committee, and shall fix such dates for paying said assessments as may be deemed proper.

XII.

On Thursday, August 20, at noon, the Democratic executive committee of each county shall meet at the court house in said county and declare the result as shown by the returns made by the various election managers and the chairman of each county committee shall certify the result and transmit same to the secretary of this committee at once, except in the case or contest as hereinafter provided, in so far as said result relates to candidates for governor, United States senators, and all candidates to be formally nominated by the state convention, including judges of the superior court and solicitors general, and it shall be the duty of said secretary to present said returns, with proper consolidation thereof, to the convention hereinafter called.

XIII.

Should any candidate desire to contest the result of said election in any county, he shall file with the chairman of the county executive committee of such county written notice of contest and the grounds thereof by noon on the day following the holding of said primary; and if he cannot locate said chairman, he shall appear at the next regular public meeting at the court house provided for as aforesaid (which meeting shall in each case be open to the public) and file such notice with said committee; and, in case such notice is filed with the chairman or the committee, it shall be the duty of said county executive committee to proceed at once to hear and determine the contest within not more than two days time, and such county chairman shall certify the returns and results in such county as soon as such contest is determined.

XIV.

No candidate in said primary election shall be declared the nominee of the party for any office if it is proven that in the conduct of his campaign for the nomination he violated any law of Georgia, or, in case of candidates for congress and the United States senate, any law of Georgia or of the United States in seeking the said nomination, nor shall any candidate be declared the nominee if he procures that any authorized agent of said candidate violated any law regulating primary elections in promoting said candidate's campaign.

XV.

A state Democratic convention is hereby called to meet at 12 o'clock in Macon on Tuesday, September 1, 1914, in which convention each county shall be entitled to twice the number of votes it has members in the Georgia house of representatives; and said convention shall confirm the results of said primary election in accordance with the rules hereinbefore made and nominate candidates in conformity with said results, select a new state executive committee, announce a platform and attend to such other business of the party as may be brought before it.

ELECTRIC FAN'S WIRES START SMALL BLAZE

A slight blaze on the second floor of the Fourth National bank, said to have been caused by the short-circuiting of wires in an electric fan which set fire to some papers, called out all of the downtown fire apparatus at 7 o'clock Saturday night.

A passerby, on Peachtree street, saw the flames and turned in the alarm. When the engines arrived, the fire was out. The damage was trivial.

Seeks Another Term

AUBURN, N. Y., April 4.—Representative Sereno E. Payne, dean of the Republicans in the lower house of congress, announced today he is a candidate for re-election this fall. He has served fifteen terms.

WIFE REFUSES TO QUIT ALLEGED BANK BANDIT

Fathers' Pleadings Fail to Win Edith Carbraugh from Prisoner

Determined, in spite of pleading letters from her father, to remain with her husband, in his present troubles, little Edith Carbraugh, or Mrs. Edward Marshall, as she insists is her rightful name, has refused again to go back to her home in Piqua, Ohio.

Marshal, once known on the vaudeville stage as "Rhynata the magician," is in the tower under $10,000 bond, awaiting trial as the alleged robber of the Jefferson Loan society 59 North Forsyth street, and as the supposed bandit who tried to rob the negro bank on Auburn avenue after assaulting the negro cashier.

Since Edith Carbraugh's release on a writ of habeas corpus Monday from the custody of the Atlanta police, she has been taken care of by the theatrical friends in the city. Every day she calls at the tower, and talks to "Rhynata" in his cell, cheering him with her faith and confidence, refusing to believe that the shadow of guilt should rightfully fall on her husband. For she insists that she married Marshall in Chicago in January, 1913, despite the fact that her father, in three letters to Chief Beavers asserts a year later they came home to run away with Marshall and with a woman said to have then been Marshall's wife.

Chief Beavers told the girl of the recent letters, pleading letters from David Carbraugh, her father, beseeching her to come home to Piqua, Ohio under any conditions. But she insists on sticking by the man she loves, who is jailed as a supposed bandit and robber.

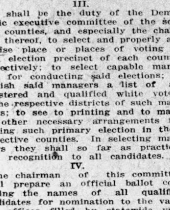
AH! MY TIRED FEET ACHED SO FOR "TIZ"
How "TIZ" eases sore, swollen, sweaty, calloused feet and corns.



Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, sharp-toed, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "TIZ" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "TIZ" bath.
When your feet feel like lumps of lead—like frost-nipped, out-raged "Things" grand—its glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.
There's nothing like "TIZ." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and causes foot torture.
Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" last any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

Notice of Bond Election to be Held Upon the Issuance of Bonds for Grady Hospital. Date of Election Tuesday, May 5, 1914.

STATE OF GEORGIA, COUNTY OF FULTON, CITY OF ATLANTA:

Notice is hereby given to the qualified votes of the City of Atlanta that the mayor and general council of said city have ordered an election to be held at the several voting precincts for holding elections, on Tuesday, the 5th day of May, 1914, at which election the qualified voters of the city of Atlanta will assent, by the requisite, two-thirds majority, to the following bonds, to-wit:

$720,000.00 of bonds of the city of Atlanta, of the denomination of One Hundred (100.00) Dollars each, and $30,000.00 of bonds of the city of Atlanta, of the denomination of Five Hundred ($100.00) Dollars each, bearing interest at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum, the principal of said bonds to be paid in gold coin of the United States of America, of the act of 1875, and the interest on said bonds to be evidenced by coupons bearing the semi-annual and to be paid in gold coin of the United States of the present standard of weight and fineness, and the interest on said bonds to be evidenced by coupons bearing the semi-annual and to be paid in gold coin of the United States of the present standard of weight and fineness.

If said issue of bonds is assented to, by the requisite vote, an annual tax shall thereafter be levied and collected each year for the time running through the next succeeding 29 years and collected by authority of the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta, on the taxable property within said city sufficient in amount to pay the interest semi-annually on said issue of bonds, and for the payment of $25,000.00 per annum of the principal of said bonds, and the fund so raised annually on account of the principal of said bonds shall be applied only to the payment of the said bonds as they mature. The proceeds of said bonds shall be applied exclusively for rebuilding, new buildings and extensions to Grady hospital, waterworks and furnishings for same, and for purchasing such land as may be needed by said hospital.

Voters in said election favoring the issue of bonds for rebuilding, new buildings and extensions to Grady hospital, with modern fixtures and furnishings for same, and for purchasing additional real estate for said hospital, shall have written or printed on their ballots the words:

"For the issue of Seven Hundred and fifty Thousand ($750,000.00) Dollars of bonds for the improvement of Grady Hospital."

Voters opposing the issue of such bonds shall have written or printed on their tickets the words:

"Against the issue of Seven Hundred and Fifty Thousand ($750,000.00) Dollars of bonds for the improvement of Grady Hospital."

Notice is also given that the tax collector of Fulton county, state of Georgia, the registrar of voters for elections ordered by the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta, the books of registration open for the purpose of registering the qualified voters of the city under ordinances and laws governing same, and such registrar will keep said books of registration open from Saturday, March 28th, for ten days of the date of said election, at the office of the said registrar at East Hunter street South Pryor street and Central avenue, in the city of Atlanta, said registrar to be open to voters whose names appear on said registration books, as qualified to vote in the city elections for the present year and on said bond issue, and shall be present at the polls on election.

This notice is given in pursuance of an ordinance calling for said election, approved on the 1st day of April, 1914.

Given under the official hand and seal of said city and by the authority and at the request of the mayor and general council of said city, and likewise by authority of and in the name of the city of Atlanta on this the 2d day of April, 1914.

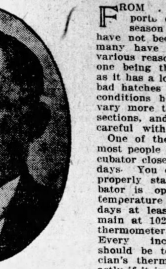
Artificial Incubation



FROM a large number of reports of hatches made this season with incubators they have been as satisfactory as many have expected. There are various reasons for this, the main one being the weather conditions as it has a lot to do with good and bad hatches with incubators. Our conditions here are different and vary more than they do in some sections, and one has to be very careful with their incubators.

One of the great troubles is most people do not watch their incubator closely on the first to fifth days. You cannot get the germs properly started unless the incubator is operated at a uniform temperature during the first five days at least, and it should remain at 102 to 103. Often the thermometer is not accurate. Every incubator thermometer should be tested with a physician's thermometer to know exactly if it is right or not. It should be placed with the bulb resting about half way between the eggs. Then you can get the exact temperature, but you cannot do so otherwise. A great deal depends on this thermometer, but several thermometers should be used in different parts of the incubator and see that all parts of it register alike. Eggs cannot hatch unless they are kept at the proper temperature, and when the weather conditions vary it is impossible to keep your incubator regulated unless you watch it very closely, and your incubator should be in a house with a uniform tempeeature.

Another thing, a great many eggs have not shown the strong fertility as usual on account of the old chickens being kept too closely confined and not made to take sufficient exercise.

If a person gets a fifty per cent hatch with incubators or with a lot of them set, this is about the usual average, and they should be satisfied. Of course there are many cases where they hatch far better than this, but as a rule a large number of eggs set show something like a fifty per cent hatch.

The average incubator requires more or less moisture some time during the hatch, and my experience has been that it is best to start with moisture and keep it up throughout the entire hatch. A pan of water put under the incubator or if the floor is kept sprinkled around it will answer practically the same purpose as if water is kept in the incubator. Eggs will absorb just what they require and no more if it is kept close to them all the time. It is far better to do this than it is to put the eggs in water or add water to the incubator during the last few days as most manufacturers recommend; they absorb too much water when this done.

The main thing to watch in artificial incubation is the air cells in the eggs, which should show from one-third to one-fourth on the 17th and 18th day. This space can be increased or decreased either by airing the eggs or by the control of the ventilator on the incubator. If a large amount of air is allowed to circulate through the machine they will dry out much faster than if a small amount is admitted. One of the great troubles comes in getting the eggs dried down sufficiently without weakening the chick, and when water is supplied regularly there is no danger of this trouble ever occurring.

Artificial incubation is a study and the only way one can get the best results is by actual experience and by keeping the incubator regulated to a uniform temperature. A machine should never be placed in a room where a direct draught blows on it, or where the temperature varies too much in the house. If so you cannot expect good results. There are thousands of little chickens hatched now that would not be were it not for incubators. We are almost compelled to have them, and when one learns to operate them successfully they are one of the greatest pleasures connected with the business. And, without them it would be impossible for us to supply enough chickens to fill the wants of people in this day and time.

Yours very truly,

Grigsby Barron

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

Ashland, Ga.

I come to you for some advice in regard to purchasing a male Barred Plymouth Rock. I want to know what to considered a perfect bird. Tell me how to judge in regard to comb, color, light or dark barks. Is a light bird as good for stock bird as a dark one? I had two males last season. I want to get my yard stocked with perfect, thoroughbreds by next year. I am not going to begin on a big scale, but want the best stock I can have some thorough eggs setting. Please tell me the kind of bird I should get. I want to get it first and next year's service.

The hens that I have are almost thorough, though not exactly. If I had a fine male to them would the eggs be what I could advertise? Please answer very early as I am anxious to get started. I am anxious to know if a light bird is as good as a dark; will the marks be good, and just tell me how to judge a bird for a good bird.

I thank you now for I feel that you can tell me what I want to know.

MRS. A. J. L.

ANSWER.

In mating Barred Plymouth Rocks for exhibition purposes what is known as double mating has to be practiced to get a large per cent of birds fit to win in the shows nowadays. In the double mating a standard colored dark male bird should be mated with extra dark narrow barred females that show more or less black feathers in them, and too dark for show purposes. This is the only way to produce exhibition females.

The exhibition females should be mated with a very light male, too light for show purposes, but a bird of this kind must be used to produce the clean standard colored females with yellow legs and dark beak. When the females from this mating are placed in a show pen with a male from the dark mating they will match in color, and are the colors required by the Standard of Perfection. Therefore, both study the colors and properly mate them.

It would be impossible for you to breed thoroughbreds from the hens that you now have, even though you had a very fine male. They would not be such as you could advertise or sell eggs from as thoroughbreds or for fancy birds. The best thing to do would be to buy some eggs from some reliable Plymouth Rock breeder who has been exhibiting for years, has line bred his birds, and then you will start in that you know is right. You can never accomplish anything by using the hens that you refer to with a firstclass male, and it is better to start right in the beginning and know what you are. And it is better to select just one of the lines, either the light mating or dark mating and breed one line just as good as the other, but it requires lots of skill to breed both.

JOURNAL AD GETS ORDERS FROM SASKATCHEWAN.

Atlanta Journal, City.

Sirs:—Sometime during the latter part of February or first part of March I inserted a three-line classified Ad in The Journal, offering some stock of my "Marquise" Black Leghorns and sold all the surplus stock I had. I followed this with an offering eggs from my Madison Square Garden winners. This was also productive. Today I have an inquiry from Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Canada, in reference to the eggs.

This is a long ways from home, but shows the fact that The Journal's Circulation is not confined to our own country.

Thinking this might interest you, I am,

Yours cordially,

MISCELLANEOUS

CONKEY SAYS:

The minute a chick leaves the protection of its shell it demands constant care and watchful eye, for all the dangers that menace them, perhaps the greatest is White Diarrhoea and you need to be prepared to prevent serious loss.

You are equal to the emergency if you have on hand

CONKEY'S White Diarrhoea Remedy.

Simply place it in the drinking water as a preventive measure. Chicks doctor themselves and save you the trouble. Sufficient stock with its convenience and effectiveness that no poultryman can afford to take the risk of being without it. Get a package today. 25c and 50c.

The problem of just what to feed little chicks to get the best results is settled by

CONKEY'S STARTING FOOD for BABY CHICKS

It's a perfectly balanced and modified food that chicks eat readily and digest freely. They thrive on it and grow strong and active. For the first three days you are safe in feeding nothing else. If you want lively, sturdy chicks, free from weakness, get a package of this scientifically prepared food and use it according to directions. Inexpensive and saves trouble and worry. 3 lbs., 25c; 6½ lbs., 50c; 14 lbs., $1.00.

Don't run any chances on bowel trouble among your chicks. Conkey's Cholera Remedy is a convenient preventive measure if placed in the drinking water. Reduces the fever and assists nature in throwing off the disease. Good for old or young birds. Money back if not satisfactory. 25c and 50c.

More about best ways of raising little chicks in Conkey's 80-page Poultry Book. Any dealer will gladly supply you with a copy.

St. Charles Ave. "Bungalows Deluxe"

ST. CHARLES AVE, is one of Atlanta's newest and most beautiful residence streets, and there is not a section where homes are enhancing in value faster. We have two of the most artistic bungalows of 6 and 7 rooms and sleeping porches that were ever built in the South. The finish and conveniences are equal to any that you would find in a $25,000 home. The lots are 50x180 to alley. Prices $6,850 and $7,000, on very reasonable terms. If "class" interests you, let us show you these.

Woodland Hills

WE HAVE sold Lot 3, Block A, in Woodland Hills to Mr. M. P. Greenfield, on which his future homes goes. This lot is at the corner of Cheshire road and Woodland road. Both streets are 80 feet wide. Mr. Greenfield takes option on lots 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6. One of the most beautiful hills around Atlanta.

Woodland Hills

A 400-ACRE TRACT cut up in large lots. Every lot having a frontage of 100 feet and cannot be made less for 25 years. It is laid out correctly.

$12.50 Per Foot

WE ARE selling these lots at $12.50 per foot, on easy terms. At the same time we know that they will bring $30 per foot in a short time and within three years we predict they will bring $40 to $60 per front foot, and why not? The same distance out Peachtree they sell for $150 per foot. The same distance out Ponce de Leon they sell for $100 per foot. Cheshire road is cherted, and just as wide.

Woodland Hills

WE ARE really giving you something for your money. Think of it! $12.50 per foot, with water, sewer and cement walks, and on terms of $250 to $300 cash; yearly payments. It's just one chance in a lifetime. Say what you please; think what you please—but we say that every dollar you put in Woodland Hills, that dollar will draw 50 to 100 per cent. We know it, and no argument will change our minds.

Woodland Hills

WE HAVE a dandy corner lot 170 feet front, 250 feet wide in rear, and about 300 feet deep, at $1,800, on easy terms. A young farm, where you get water, sewer and cement walks.

Plats Ready

CALL UP Ivy 8311 and get a plat—they are ready. We will gladly send you one. Pick you out a nice large lot; put in your $250 or $300; forget about it. That little $250 will very likely bring you $1,000 cash in one year. You plant $250 and reap $1,250.

Building Homes

WE ARE prepared to build you a nice residence on Virginia avenue. We have some lots that will appeal to you surely, in price and location.

OF COURSE WE GOT THE BANK

We Atlanta folks knew all the time we ought to have it. But we have the added satisfaction now of knowing that it is proven to the world. Folks like it back a Winner. They will flock to our town in bigger droves than ever before. And they have to have lots to live on. ALL of them won't be satisfied with apartments.

The cry of a growing town is for lots. Lots to fix places for folks to live. Lots are growing scarcer all the time. Lots of them all the new homes will HAVE to be built in outlying sections.

This will make the few close in lots very valuable. You could not find anything better to put your money in

We are offering on Lucile avenue—very beautiful 50-foot lots at prices you cannot duplicate. Just try to find anywhere else a lot like this for $1,350, and you realize how cheap these are. this property is as level as a floor, covered with handsome trees. Gas, water, sewer, sidewalks, and paved street are paid for. Pretty little bungalows spring up all around, and not an undesirable looking house anywhere in sight.

The terms are easy, and if you want to build, the owners are ready to make concessions on the terms that would enable you to put up a home with very little actual cash.

IT'S FUNNY TO ME---

THE WAY MY Bungalows are selling at LAKEWOOD HEIGHTS; but it should arouse a CURIOSITY on your part to find out the REASON for this. The following are trades I have closed THIS WEEK: Mr. V. W. Keheley, bungalow, $2,000; Mr. W. J. Grogan, bungalow, $2,500; Mr. E. A. VanNorden, bungalow, $2,500; Mr. M. W. Barge, cottage, $2,750; Mr. W. M. Braswell, bungalow, $2,500. These were all sold before they were completed. If you will get on the car and go out to Lakewood Heights and take a look, you will see the reason they sell at a glance. They have five rooms each and they are perfect BUNGALOWS. They are DIFFERENT from anything you have seen in Atlanta. There is a sentiment of home life about them that makes you want one the minute you see it, and when you do see it you will agree with me that there is a vast DIFFERENCE between a BUNGALOW and a BARN. Will have two more completed in about ten days. Price $2,100 and $2,200. Get off the car at Adair Avenue, it is just TWENTY-TWO MINUTES to CALIFORNIA via LAKEWOOD HEIGHTS. P. B. The Real Estate Field

Crescent Avenue, Williams Street, Capitol Avenue and Several Other Small Sales Reported Yesterday — Extensive Space Leased in the Hurt Building—Public Sales — Many Building Operations Soon to Be Started

The past week showed a distinct improvement in real estate, both in sales and building announcements, particularly the latter. There was some interesting new development nearly every day.

Building is still behind the period since January 1 of last year, but three large permits, which will doubtless be taken this month, will throw the year far ahead.

These will be for the office building which Reuben R. Arnold and Harvey Hill will build on the old city hall property; the new quarters of the John Deere Plow company, on Nelson street, and the Swift-Mackle apartment house on Juniper street, which will aggregate something like $200,000.

There are several other operations of smaller size which will further swell the increase.

Three or four insurance companies, and several individual lenders, figure in the loan transactions every day, and there has been a pronounced improvement in money conditions.

The lumber mills are putting on more men and report much more demand for material. The year will be notable for many new residences in all sections, and particularly in the suburban localities.

There is a pronounced better feeling all around since the regional bank decision, and agents report that inquiries are much better than they have been.

REAL ESTATE SALES.

Several small sales were reported on yesterday afternoon.

A. J. and H. F. Atwood sold for John B. Thompson to Mrs. Helen Oppenheim the property of No. 17 Crescent avenue, which is between Peachtree, Ivy and Tenth street, and was formerly the home of Horace McCall. The price was $8,000.

This consists of a 12-room brick house, that formerly faced Peachtree street.

The same agency sold for the J. A. Atwood estate to Mrs. Dorothy Hutchins a lot 60 by 190 at Williams and Fourteenth streets for $2,700; and to the Atlanta Land Investment company for the same owners a lot 50x190 on the west side of Williams street, 460 feet south of Fourteenth street, for $2,200.

The county is now at work grading and paving Williams street from Tenth to Fourteenth streets.

The West agency sold also to William L. Jones a house and lot at Stewart avenue and Pearce street, for $3,250.

Thomas and Hancock sold for M. Harris to Mr. Saul the corner of Capitol avenue and Love street, renting property, for $6,250, and for Miss B. Rosenberg to Mr. Boorstin No. 298 Capitol avenue for $6,150.

P. B. Hopkins reports the sale of $25,000 worth of homes at Lakewood Heights since the first of the year. He has sold bungalows to V. W. Keheley, $2,000; W. J. Grogan, $2,500; E. A. Van Norden, $2,250; W. M. Braswell, $2,500; and W. M. Barge, a cottage, for $2,750.

HURT BUILDING LEASES.

The Gulf Refining company has leased for a period of years over half of the sixth floor of the Hurt building, comprising sixteen offices.

The Commercial Fertilizer," publishers of trade journals, have leased six offices on the sixth floor of the same building. The management reports a satisfactory leasing activity.

OGLETHORPE PARK SALE.

S. B. Davidson, sales manager of the Edwin P. Ansley agency, announced yesterday that on tomorrow he would inaugurate the sale of Oglethorpe Park.

About forty tracts will be offered, but there will be sixty to seventy in all. They will be offered in sizes ranging from one to ten acres.

The whole tract comprises 600 acres, extending from the northern boundary to the golf links of the Brookhaven club, where there is 2,300 feet of frontage, to the Oglethorpe University site.

A fine boulevard, known as the Oglethorpe University road, is being opened through the property. It has been a good while since a more ambitious subdivision project has been developed around Atlanta.

HEMPHILL SALE.

Two close-in parcels of the W. A. Hemphill estate will be offered at the courthouse at public sales on Tuesday next by the Edwin P. Ansley agency.

One will be the northwest corner of Alabama street and Central Avenue, with railroad frontage at the old depot, and the other will be across the street at Nos. 51-3 East Alabama street.

This property is right in the geographical center of the city, and both parcels are improved. They will be offered on terms of one-fourth cash and the balance in one, two, three, four and five years, on or before.

DEKALB COUNTY SALE.

William S. Ansley, agent for J. R. Wells, administrator, will on next Tuesday before the DeKalb county court house offer various parcels of property in DeKalb county.

Some of the parcels front on the Stone Mountain car line and Georgia railroad, and some in Clarkston. The terms will be a fourth cash and the balance one, two and three years.

JOHN M. GEORGE MOVES.

John M. George, who handles real estate, loans and building, announces that he has moved to quarters at No. 1015 Healey building, where he will be glad to see his friends.

A PANTHER IN HORSE EXCHANGE.

W. E. Perry and E. W. Clapp, of the Smith & Ewing agency, sold for H. O. Reese to A. A. Perry, No. 495 Spring street, a four-family apartment house on a lot 55x160, for $17,000.

Mr. Reese took as part payment No. 71 Virginia avenue, a residence property, which was valued at $9,000.

Benton McMillin Enjoys Life in Republic of Peru

New Minister Writes Interesting Letter of People, Climate, Earthquakes, Revolutions and Various Other Things

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Ex-Governor Benton McMillan, of Tennessee, who is now minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary to the Republic of Peru, has written an interesting letter to a member of the Tennessee delegation in which he discusses the people, politics and products of Peru.

The letter, which was written early in March, follows:

"We are all very well, like Lima, and enjoy life here. Of course, we miss greatly the association of you and other friends who contributed so much to our life and pleasures at home.

"We find the people here refined, hospitable, kindly and well disposed toward the United States. The work is very congenial, and, withal, I am pleased with it.

"The climate is peculiar, but delightful. It is hard to imagine that it would be so pleasant when so different from all to which we have been accustomed. It never rains, thunders, nor storms. The thermometer is never above 85 degrees and seldom 80 degrees, and never below 49 degrees.

"The hills and mountains to the east are all verdureless. The coastal plane, varying from a few miles to eighty miles wide, is desert except where the streams from the mountains flow through it to the Pacific, but these are numerous and afford irrigation for a very considerable territory. The land is intensely fertile and when watered produces almost everything that can be produced in any climate.

"Corn, like that which the Cumberland and Tennessee river valleys produce, is grown here. Sugar cane, superior to any known in the states, is one of the staple crops. It is much higher in saccharine than our cane and requires planting only once in seven to ten years.

"While one part of the plantation is being planted another is being cut and ground. The consequence is that it requires a much smaller plant to produce a given quantity of sugar here than anywhere in the world I have seen. Rice and tobacco are also extensively grown in many parts of the republic.

"TRIP OVER THE ANDES.

"I have made the trip across the Andes over the Oroya road, which reaches the highest elevation of any broad gauge railroad in the world. The ascent is 15,665 feet is made in about 108 miles, and a hand car from there carries its freight and passengers by gravity to the foot of the mountain, 20 to 30 miles from Lima.

"This mountain is often made by tourists and is the event of a lifetime. Many are made sick by the rarefied air, the malady here being called 'soroche'—which is like intense seasickness, but much worse. My family and I escaped this, and yet felt very strangely; our eyes felt pained and our heads light. We found it impaired our ability to calculate heights and distances. Mt. Tello tunnel, the crest, Mount Meigs, rises 1,700 feet above you, but it did not look more than 200 feet.

"Near this is the Cerro de Pasco copper mine owned by Hargin and other Americans, and one of the richest in the world. They have just installed a 10,000-horsepower hydroelectric plant, which will work a saving to the company of $250,000 a year.

"We have had five earthquakes and one revolution since we arrived. In an earthquake you feel utterly helpless. You gaze at those around you and they at you, and say but little. You never get used to them; the last one is as impressive as the first one, and you realize your own insignificance more fully than at any other time.

"The revolution, unlike the Mexican revolt, came and went in a day, but was very exciting while it lasted. President Billingshurst was in full power February 3. The morning of the 4th at 4:30 the palace was stormed by the troops who had revolted, many of its guards killed, the president made a prisoner, put in the penitentiary, tried before night congress had assembled and appointed a junta to take charge of the government and adjourned.

"The president's family took refuge in an adjoining house and his wife was badly shot up. His wife and three daughters asked asylum in our legation, which was accorded them after pressure and they stayed with us a week. After ten days he was sent out of the country. Everything is now quiet, so far as the activities of the city were concerned in forty-eight hours and continue so.

"Congress met yesterday and there is a controversy on as to whether, being first vice president, will be permitted to serve the term, or general elections ordered. There are a number of prospective candidates for the presidency.

"I wish to congratulate you and the other members of congress on the splendid manner in which you have met the great responsibilities devolving upon this congress and administration. Mr. Wilson is making a great president, and if you all succeed as well with trust legislation as you have with the tariff, income tax and currency laws, his administration will be renowned for generations.

"I am much pleased with McAdoo's work in the treasury department. The blocking of the panic threatened when your great work was in progress by saying $500,000,000 gold was locked up and drawing currency; his charging interest on the government money deposited in banks, and his placing money in the crops in localities where the crops were moved instead of following the custom of dumping it into the big banks of New York to be doled out as speculations dictated, all show that he is the right man in the right place, and justifies the act of congress in conferring upon him so prominently with the new currency scheme.

"Remember me to our senators and representatives, and to them as well as to others who urged my appointment, return my grateful thanks."

ASQUITH PAYS TRIBUTE TO ARMY OF ENGLAND

Premier Discusses Crisis In Opening Speech of Campaign in Scotland

(By Associated Press.)

ADYBANK, Scotland, April 4.—Premier Asquith today opened his election campaign in this village.

The elaborate telegraphic arrangements for the circulation of the premier's address throughout the United Kingdom testified to the importance attached to the speech in political circles.

President Asquith, who has just assumed the duties of secretary of state for war, quickly approached the subject of the army crisis. He had felt it his duty to assume his new office because "a grave situation had been created both in regard to the discipline of the army and in connection with its relation to the civil power."

The premier paid a tribute to the army and turning to exceptional circumstances in which the army might be called upon to assist the civil power said:

"It is the duty of the soldier and of the civilian to comply with the lawful demand of the civil power. The doctrine promulgated lately by the leaders of the Tory party struck at the very root, not only of army discipline, but of democratic government.

"The British army can be counted on from the highest to the lowest rank without qualification or reserve to undertake all the duties it is obliged to require it to discharge. The army is not, and I pray may never become, a political machine."

WANT WILSON TO STAY AWAY FROM SERVICES

Methodists Adopt Resolution Protesting His Attending Thanksgiving Mass

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—The New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, last night by a warm debate, tabled a resolution requesting the president of the United States to discontinue the custom of attending Thanksgiving mass at the Roman Catholic cathedral in Washington. The motion to table was carried by a vote of 89 to 72. The resolution said:

"Inasmuch as that service has been widely construed at home and abroad as the official thanksgiving service of the United States, we, members of the New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, most respectfully suggest to the president the propriety of discontinuing the practice."

Dr. Thomas S. Bond, of the Morris Heights Methodist church, the author of the resolution, and several supporters, in the debate over the resolution, said no one took exception to the president attending any church he chose as an individual, but when he attended the Catholic church with his official family the event could not help assuming a national significance. It was the opinion of those who supported the resolution that President Wilson was inconsistent in issuing a proclamation urging people of the United States to assemble at their own churches on Thanksgiving day and then attending himself a church to which he did not belong. Those in favor of the resolution thought that the cabinet should divide up and visit the various churches.

The resolution was opposed by George E. Hecksman, editor of the Christian Advocate, who protested that President Wilson's attendance at the Catholic mass merely a traditional practice followed by McKinley, Taft and Roosevelt, and that he could be depended on to choose his own church without a resolution.

ASQUITH STARTS ON HIS RE-ELECTION CAMPAIGN

Protests Against Use of Army and Navy to Force Home Rule Bill

LONDON, April 4.—The week closed with two important political events, both tending to clear the air and show where the two great parties stand on the home rule issue.

The prime minister, Mr. Asquith, opened his campaign for re-election with a speech at the village of Ladybank, Scotland, while many thousands of unionists of London and the provinces assembled in Hyde Park for a demonstration of protest against use of the army and navy to force the home rule bill on the Ulster covenanters.

Premier Asquith and Unionist leaders all expressed a desire for a compromise and an agreement, but while the Hyde Park speakers demanded the submission of home rule to a direct vote of the people, the prime minister expressly denied such possibility.

"The army will bear nothing of politics from me and I shall expect in return to see nothing of politics from the army," was his summary of the issue which had brought him to his new office of secretary for war.

The premier recommended his temporary exclusion plan as having the great merit of avoiding coercion and expressed his belief in the eventual unity of all the Irish factions.

The prime minister will return to London immediately to resume the party leadership and will leave the campaigning to lesser lights, unless e Unionists decide to nominate a candidate to oppose him, which seems improbable.

FREIGHT RATE HEARING COMING TO A FINISH

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Officials of the Interstate Commerce Commission expressed confidence today that the long hearing on the general 5 per cent increase in freight rates sought by the railroads of official classification territory would soon see the final stage with the opposition of the lake and rail shipping interests begun today before chairman Harlan and commissioner McChord. This last direct testimony, it was thought, might take two or three days, the shippers basing their objections on a belief that differentials now enjoyed by middle western interests would be disturbed.

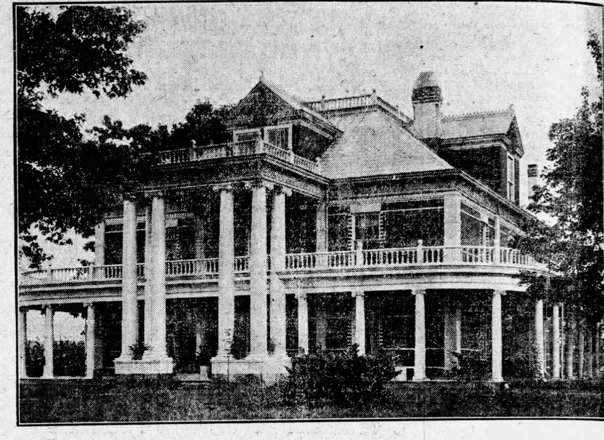
THIS HANDSOME HOME FOR SALE

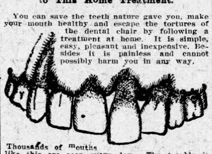


This handsome residence situated in Dalton, Whitfield county, Ga., together with the eight acres, more or less, of land upon which it is situated, will be sold at public outcry on the 21st day of April, 1914. Address inquiries to J. N. CAYLOR, Trustee Mrs. Mary F. Bishop, bankrupt, Dalton, Ga.

Sore Teeth Foul Breath

Discolored, Sore Teeth, Gum Disease and Foul Breath Yield Quickly to This Home Treatment.

You can save the teeth nature gave you, make your mouth healthy and escape the tortures of the dental chair by following a treatment at home. It is simple, easy, pleasant and inexpensive. Besides it is painless and cannot possibly harm you in any way.



Thousands of mouths like this are seen every day. The trouble is known as Pyorrhea or Riggs Disease. These soft, discolored bleeding, foul-smelling and receding gums, loosened and sensitive teeth can be made firm, strong and healthy by this simple Home Remedy.

A simple home treatment which we are placing before the public will bring you the relief and comfort you desire. Stop spending money with dentists who do not help you. Don't waste your money on drug store remedies that are invariably as you know, disappointing.

Write to us today and learn more about this painless, speedy inexpensive remedy that you can use at home, so there will be no further need for you to undergo the long, painful or expensive dental treatment. Bridges, Crowns and False Teeth are unsightly and rarely satisfactory, and through this treatment of the causes of bad and sensitive teeth, gum disease and foul breath they should be unecessary.

If you are suffering with Pyorrhea or Riggs Disease, gingivitis, receding gums, elongated or loose teeth; soft, discolored or spongy gums; if your breath is foul; if your teeth pain while eating; if you are subject to bad tastes—then, for your own sake, send for Dr. Willard's book and learn how easy his method is—how painless and speedy—how this simple remedy quickly and permanently gives sound, healthy teeth.

Just sit down NOW and write us for this free book. A few minutes will convince you that Dr. Willard's common-sense, simple Home Remedy is what you are looking for. Don't wait. There is no pain connected with it. We have received scores of letters from people saying they would have given hundreds of dollars had they known of Dr. Willard's Home Treatment in time. Address Dr. F. W. WILLARD, 3407 Temple Court Bldg., Chicago. (Advt.)

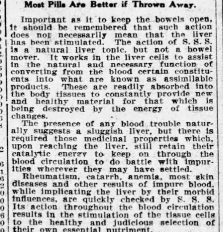
The Liver as Aid To Blood Purity

The Natural Stimulus Required is Not the Purgative Kind.



Most Pills Are Better if Thrown Away.

Important as it to keep the bowels open, it should be remembered that such action does not necessarily mean that the liver has been stimulated. The action of S. S. S. is a natural liver tonic, but not a bowel mover. It works in the liver cells to assist in the natural and necessary function of converting from the blood certain constituents into what are known as assimilable products. These are readily absorbed into the body tissues to constantly provide new and healthy material for that which is being destroyed by the energy of tissue changes.

The presence of any blood trouble naturally suggests a sluggish liver, but there is required those medicinal properties which, upon reaching the liver, still retain their catalytic energy to keep on through the blood circulation to do battle with impurities wherever they may have settled.

Rheumatism, catarrh, anemia, most skin diseases and other results of impure blood, while implicating the liver by their morbid influences, are quickly checked by S. S. S. Its action throughout the blood circulation results in the stimulation of the tissue cells to the healthy and judicious selection of their own essential nutriment.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it.

Take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist, address The Swift Specific Company, 526 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

DAY'S WORK IN ATLANTA OF A SALVATION ARMY LASSIE

By Ward Greene

It was an April morning when Rheba Crawford began her day's work as a daughter of the army. From her open window she could look across the street into the sunlight and shadows of Grant park, at the squirrels scampering back and forth between grass plot and stone bridge and oak tree, at the brilliant flash of the blue jay's wing through the green branches.

The breeze that whipped across from the cool park and fluttered the window curtains was soft and fresh with the call to come and play in the great world of out of doors.

But there was work to be done, work that even April morning, especially a Saturday morning, cannot halt; so the sunshine and the fresh breeze but served to spur her with desire to seek the day's road where sorrow and toil and adventure fled hand in hand.

For Rheba Crawford is the youngest and most enthusiastic girl of the army in Atlanta. A student of the Girls' High school five days in the week, the rest of her time she gives to the army with all the eagerness and compassion of the daughter of a brigadier, which she is.

So, like a true girl of the army, she began this April Saturday with a talk to God—you could hardly call it a prayer—but a short talk, in which she told Him just how beautiful He had made His world today and just how hard she would work to put a little of its sunshine into the hearts of His people.

Visit to the Old Blind Man.

When she left the house and turned her face eastward, a basket on her arm, the sun was 8 o'clock high. She hummed as she walked along, for her heart was singing and she knew what waited her at the first house.

He was not an old man, but the blindness had brought out deep lines of pain across his face and stamped upon it the dead hopelessness that comes only of waiting long and lonely in the dark.

He lived some six blocks from her home, the first stop on the daily round of visits. The door of his little house was shut against the spring breeze and the window blinds were drawn against the sunlight, but he called "Come in!" in answer to her knock.

She found him alone in the darkened front room, slumped patiently into a chair, his sightless eyes turned toward the door, the endless, questioning line between his brows.

When she hailed him merrily, his face broke into sunshine, he smiled and the deep-cut lines melted. Where had she been these long days? he asked her. It had been a bad time, a lonely time, and he was very tired of sitting there by himself.

So she sat down and began to talk to him. No, she didn't talk to him about his soul or heaven or religion, but she told him of the world's doings outside, of the bear that had been shot at the park and the little cub which whined in the tree all night, and the new driveway they were fixing.

He listened greedily; but pretty soon the line between the questioning brows began to show again, and the drumming with his fingers, which he had stopped when she first came in, sounded swift and nervous.

Sings to Him.

No, he didn't need anything to eat, he told her; his brother had come home again and had given him a new coat; there was plenty of coal in the cellar, and the woman next door was good enough to come in and chat with him sometimes. But he was lonely. Perhaps if she would only sing—

So she thought a minute and then began "Old Black Joe." The words were the words the army had put to them, but the tune was the same old plantation melody. As her young voice rang sweet and clear through the darkened room, the blind man stopped his drumming and sunk back into his chair, lines vanished and face relaxed.

She sang three verses and then stopped and rose.

"I must be going now," she told him.

"So soon?" he said. "You must come again as often as you can. When you sing like that I can almost see the sunshine."

Outside the little house she paused a minute and then continued east across the park. The sun was higher than before, and now quite warm. Up the hill and out between the archway and down three streets brought her to the mill district.

Here they knew and loved her. Dirty little children tumbled out of broken-down houses and clung to her skirts. She gave them candy and they paved her with sticky fingers. One towsle-headed little boy stubbed his toe and sprawled in the grimy alleyway; so she must stop and pick him up and wipe the tears away from his thin, sooty face and comfort him with kisses.

They demanded a story, but she didn't have time today, she told them. Perhaps tomorrow, Sunday. Today she must find Mrs. Smithers' house. The army had been told that Mrs. Smithers, beaten by a drunken husband and deserted, was sick and starving "somewhere in the mill district."

Old Granny Smithers.

Could any of the children tell her where she lived?

Could they? Tell where old Granny Smithers lived? Well, they should guess yes. Why, only yesterday she had driven off two of the boys from her front porch and threatened a kindly neighbor with the police when the good lady had offered her a loaf of bread and some milk.

Rheba Crawford's heart sank. She had heard of these cases, hard women who would rather die than accept "charity," men who drove the army people from their doors.

But she knocked bravely enough at the door of a broken-down hovel, pointed out to her as "Granny Smithers' place" by the awed children, who waited, trembling and respectful, at the corners.

The door opened a crack and a baleful eye peered out at the young girl.

"Whatcher want?" croaked a voice.

"Why—" began the daughter of the army. "Well, we thought—You see—"

Then she smiled at the baleful eye beseechingly.

"I've just come to see you," she said.

"Humph," growled Mrs. Smithers, but the door swung back slowly and the old woman, a rag shawl thrown around her shoulders to hide the split-seamed dress, shuffled to the porch. The hard old face was withered and pinched, the eyes empty with hunger.

"Set down." She motioned to a rickety chair. The girl sat down. It was hard work talking to this old woman, and she had to draw on her every resource; but the two finally hit on a congenial topic, the weather.

Yes, admitted Mrs. Smithers, the recent cold snap had been a hard one. It was right after Joe left, she told the girl, and there hadn't been a stick or a thing to eat in the house.

"Ain't had a bite in three days," said Mrs. Smithers, with more of a quaver than a growl in her voice.

Rheba Crawford, daughter of Brigadier A. W. Crawford, of the army

The girl was horrified, but she forebore to mention the basket.

"You're Pure Sunshine."

But when she rose to go ten minutes later she motioned to it.

"I'll just leave it with you," she smiled. "It's a present—from me."

The old woman frowned. For a moment it looked as if she would refuse. Then a wintry smile crossed her face and she stuck out a rough hand. The girl took it.

"I like you," said Mrs. Smithers. "You're pure sunshine. Come agin."

It was three blocks' walk from Mrs. Smithers' house to the car line, three blocks more of hot sun and alley smells and dirty children and grimy smoke. Rheba Crawford heaved a sigh of relief when she sank into the street car seat and asked the conductor for a transfer.

Ashby street was way on the other side of town, she reflected, but the girl who generally called Saturdays on the couple that lived there wouldn't be able to get around today, and Rheba knew the old folks would be looking for somebody.

She had been given the number and decided that a Whitehall to West End car would be the best to take. By the time she had transferred and caught the car and alighted at Ashby street it was high noon.

She found the number within two blocks and then discovered with horror that it was South, not North, Ashby she wanted. Over a score of blocks lay before her. She couldn't take another street car. So she set out walking, although the sun by this time was quite hot enough for broiling August.

It was a very warm and tired and hungry little Salvation Army lassie that rang the door bell on the porch of a house covered with honeysuckle vines. Slow, shuffling steps sounded inside and a benevolent old man welcomed her kindly.

Seemed to Be Forgotten.

He escorted her to the dim parlor, where an old lady sat with folded hands and dreamed away long days. They told her of their children, grown up, married and living in distant cities.

"The neighbors we used to know have all moved away," said the old lady, rather wistfully. "And the new ones don't seem to have time to remember us. Mr. Simpkins, next door, came over to borrow the lawn mower yesterday. He's the first caller we've had since September, when he returned the lawn mower—except, of course, you girls. You don't know what a blessing you are, my dear. And, now, won't you read to us a little?"

So Rheba Crawford took the worn Bible off the table and read to the old couple for nearly half an hour. They insisted on the Old Testament, preferring the book of Kings in its most iniquitous moments.

Rheba was rested a little when she left the honeysuckle house, but still very hungry. Also, she began to understand that she did have nerves.

But the calls weren't over yet. She would just have time to stop by another house on her way to town. Mrs. O'Nolan and family were sure to need her.

Indeed, they needed her very much, as she found on her arrival there. O'Nolan was a brick layer, a hard-working, hard-drinking Irishman, whose patient wife mothered his numerous children to the furthest his scanty wages allowed, coupled with what she made as a washerwoman.

But the first thing the girl of the army learned when she had waded through a stream of young O'Nolans in the yard and the doorway and the passage was that Mrs. Nolan had been forced to stop taking in washing.

"It'll not be a month now," the woman told the girl. "'Tis the 9th, ye know, and 'twill be a by, I'm thinkin'. 'Tis not about meself I'm worryin', but for him. When the last o' the childer come I used ivery scrap in the house for clothes, an' now there's not a single rag here. The ithers are fair nekked now and 'twould not do to take theirs. For the last six months I've been meanin' to save some o' Nolan's wages, but you know how 'tis, Miss Rheba, what with coal and wood and stockin's for the young uns, why, we have as much as we kin do a-keepin' up with Hvin' ivery day. If I only had the cloth I'd have time meself to make the little he'd be needin', but I have nather cloth nor the money to buy it wi'."

Flowers for the Sick.

So, when Rheba Crawford left the O'Nolan home and started on her walk to town she made a mental note, "Clothes for Mrs. O'Nolan's expected baby." For that is part of the work of the army.

The girl of the army was hotter and more tired than she had ever been in her life, she thought, when she finished her dinner at 3:30 o'clock and hurried off to the hospital. But the day's work was not half over yet.

She had called by the army hall on Marietta street and arrived at the hospital gates with a great bunch of wild flowers in her arms. Her eyes, despite the blue rings that began to form beneath them, shone bright with sunshine still above the white plum and pink peach blossoms.

The pale-cheeked patients, listless on the long rows of cots, looked up with eager, wistful smiles at the blossoms and the glowing faces behind them. Here and there she scattered the sweet-scented bunches, and with them a kind word and a bright smile.

She lingered longest in the children's ward, stopping such a time to tell a little crippled boy a story about pirates, that the sun had long been down and blue-gold electric lights were winking into the misty city streets when she tripped down the hospital steps.

Pool Rooms and Saloons.

But she was in time to meet another girl when they started the rounds of the poolrooms, saloons and restaurants for the evening collections.

The two of them stopped for a moment on Marietta street, where other soldiers of the army were holding open air services. Rheba Crawford joined her young voice in the singing but she was so very tired that even the time-honored method of standing for two minutes on one foot and then two minutes on the other didn't seem to help a bit.

It is not the duty of a girl of the army to take collections at night as well as visit by day, but tonight was Saturday, the army was short-handed and, besides, the other girl had asked her to go around with her, and, after all, there was still some of the morning's sunshine left in her despite the factory kids and the long walks and Mrs. O'Nolan and Granny Smithers and missing supper because a little crippled boy wanted to hear about pirates.

So she cupped her tambourine under her arm and followed her comrade into the first saloon. It was filled with men and smoke and the smell of beer, and so were all the others that followed; but the badge of the army is the safest shield in the world.

Nickels, dimes, an occasional quarter, tinkled into the tambourines. The bartenders, the men that lined the rail, the poolroom proprietors, the players—not one but greeted her with a smile, and gave.

Once, near the door, a man stopped her. He glanced around, embarrassed, his haggard face tinged red for a moment. "I just want to tell you that just seeing you makes me ashamed of myself. I'm going home now to the wife and kids." He turned and vanished out of the door.

Rheba Crawford continued into the saloon. At a table near the end a man sat with his face buried in his hands. The girl touched him on the shoulder. He looked up, with racked face and miserable eyes.

Man She Helped.

"Can't I help you?" said the girl.

The man stared at her as if he was asleep and dreaming. "Help me? Why do you want to help me? Nobody wants to help a man like me."

But she smiled at him encouragingly. "You come out of here. Go to the army hall on Marietta street. Go now."

He rose slowly, hypnotized with hope, and while she walked beside him, stumbled out the door. She pointed up the street to the crowd around the drum.

"Tell the captain I sent you." And the man went.

Again, in a restaurant, she was stopped by a cabaret singer. The singer, a sad-eyed, painted girl, looked at the other girl, compassionate, and grasped her hand.

"I am not happy here," said the cabaret singer. "I am wretched, miserable. You are good. Pray for me, won't you?"

And she went back to the piano, where a smooth-haired youth was striking the first notes of "Down in Chattanooga."

It was 10 o'clock when Rheba Crawford got back to the hall on Marietta street. The services had just ended and most of the army folk had gone. But as she entered the captain stood near the door talking to a woman.

"She is dying," said the woman. "And she would have nobody but the army. Can't you come? She begged for you, begged as if it was the last thing she would ever have a chance to ask for."

The captain had a harassed look in his eyes, but he turned to Rheba with hope. "It is a girl," he said. "A bad girl, I believe, but she is dying in a house near here and she wants some of the army to come to her. I was telling this woman that they have nearly all gone. Can you and I—?"

Rheba Crawford's little feet were almost numb with weariness, but she smiled brightly. "Sure," she said. "Come on."

The woman led the captain and the girl of the army through dark streets, past darker houses, until she paused before one where a faint light flickered in an upstairs window. When she opened the door a flight of stairs led up into a black well of darkness.

They found the girl lying wide-eyed on a dirty-quilted bed. The flush on her carmined cheeks and the straining cough that racked her thin clad body told the story. She gasped out a pitiful history, as old as it is heart breaking.

And she said: "I felt that the army people were the only ones who could help me. God knows I have suffered enough, but I am not ready to die, not ready to leave here in the sin and sorrow I have lived for years. I think if you would pray—"

So there, in the little upstairs room, the girl of the underworld died, with nobody with her save the captain and the other woman and the girl of the army.

The other woman crouched back by the door and did not speak; but the captain sat by the girl's side and held her hand and smiled comfortingly.

Tobogganing Down The Andes

By Frank G. Carpenter

(Copyrighted, 1914.)

Lima, Peru.

A TOBOGGAN SLIDE down the Andes!

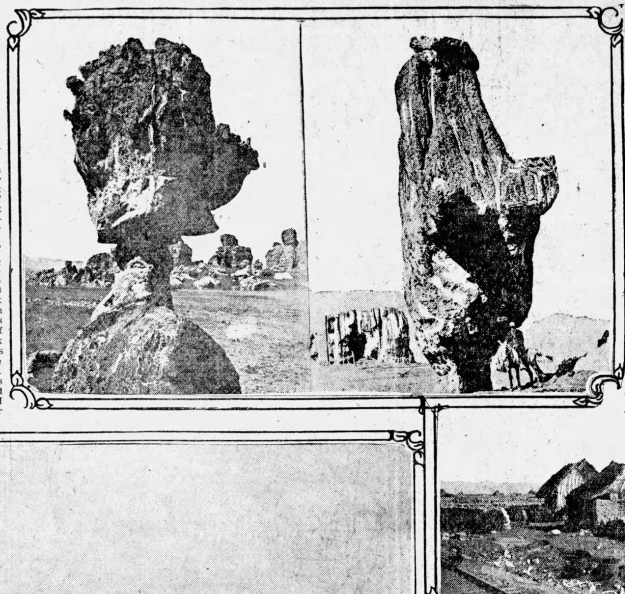
Coasting on a gravity car from the highest mountains, over the steepest railroad of the world to the level of the sea!

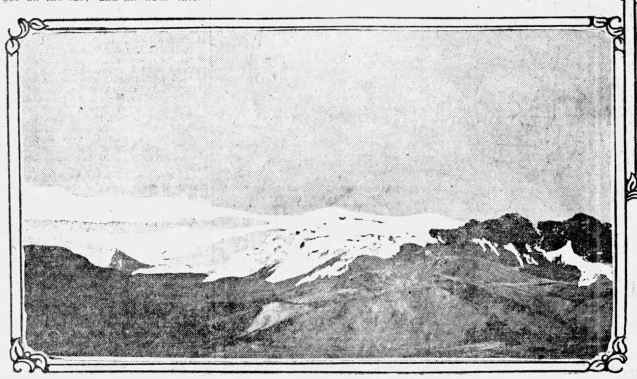
Dashing out of the clouds to find clouds below you!

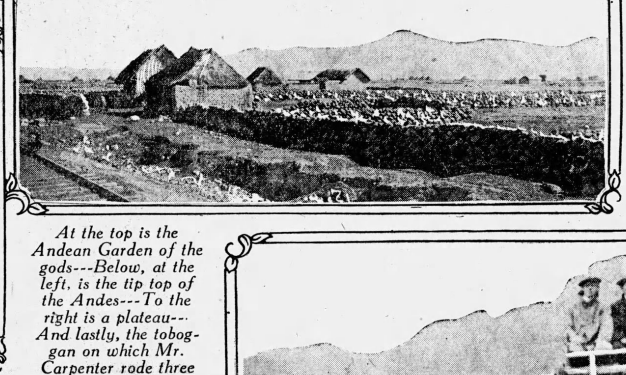
Now in the blizzard, where the hail and snow are so thick you cannot see a stone's throw in front, and now under the blue sky with the air clear all about you!

Hanging to precipices, flying on spiderweb bridges of steel over frightful chasms, whirling about curves in the midnight darkness of winding tunnels and coming out into the light of day with a shudder as you look at the depths far below you.

This, in a nutshell, is the story of my trip from the glacial snows, three miles straight above where I am writing. It gives only a faint idea of the journey. The dangers were awfully real, and as I look back it seems a miracle that I am here today to describe them. It is a miracle. The ordinary ride of this kind taken with a dry track and the sunlight, is so dangerous that travelers who risk it are made to sign a paper, swearing that their heirs will claim no damages if they are killed on the way. I signed such a document before I got on the car; and an hour later it seemed to me that the railroad authorities were sensible to require such protection.







At the top is the Andean Garden of the gods---Below, at the left, is the tip top of the Andes---To the right is a plateau---And lastly, the toboggan on which Mr. Carpenter rode three miles to the sea

We started at Tiello, at the very top of the pass, where the Andean waters divide, some running down the western slope into the Pacific, and others making their way across the continent through the Amazon, into the Atlantic. We were almost at the level of 16,000 feet. We were fully three miles above the surface of the ocean, and we were to slide down over the rails, through a winding distance of 100 miles clear to the sea. The Central railway goes to the top of the Andes, without one inch of down grade. The most of the way the ascent is about four feet in 100, and you can start a car at the glaciers and it will fly straight to the waters of the tropical ocean.

Our toboggan was the private gravity car of Mr. Meiggs, the general manager of the Central railroad. It was a low platform on wheels about two feet in diameter. It had no motive power, and it was controlled only by two brakes, one on each side of the front. Upon the platform were seats wide enough for three persons, and as we took our places I sat in the middle, with my stenographer at the left and Mr. Russell, of the operating department of the railway, at my right. We had also a Peruvian Cholo who understood the business to act as a brakeman. We had to run upon schedule time, for the track is a single one and we had to pass trains going up and down on the way. We were to get our orders from the telegraph operators at the principal stations.

We started amid the glaciers. The sky was clear, and we could see the great masses of ice as they were imperceptibly moving down the mountains. Just above us was Mt. Meiggs, over 17,000 feet high, and all around were mighty peaks kissing the clouds. The sun shone brightly. The rails were dry, and Mr. Russell said we would have no trouble controlling the car, as the only danger came from the rain or snow, which make it difficult for the wheels to hold to the track.

This was the case at the start. We shot out of Ticlio, and flew at the rate of twenty miles an hour down the road. We had hardly started, however, before the sky changed, and the winds began to roll up the gorges. The air grew cold, and within five minutes we were in the midst of a snowstorm. A moment later the snow turned to hail. The stones were as big as marrowfat peas, and they bounced like rubber as they fell on the track. With the hail came thunder and flashes of lightning. The air was so rare that our ears fairly cracked with the sound, and the lightning made more visible the dangers about us.

As we went on the rails became white and the rocks were hidden in snow. Our car was half full of hail, and the wheels were flying over slippery tracks. Then the wind increased to a blizzard, and Floeckher, who was sitting beside me, taking his notes on wet paper, notwithstanding the storm, all at once cried out that his hat had blown off. Very foolishly we stopped the toboggan, and started our Cholo conductor back up the track. At this time we had only ten minutes leeway of a train that was coming behind. We waited five minutes and the Cholo did not appear. Then Floeckher went back and found the hat on the edge of a cliff 400 feet high and about 200 yards from the toboggan. The Cholo had disappeared. We waited for him two minutes longer, and then hearing the whistle of the down-coming train, we knew we should have to manage the toboggan ourselves. Mr. Russell took hold of one brake and Floeckher grabbed that of the other, and we began to coast down through the storm. The cold was piercing. The winds went through our bones and the great hailstones cut our faces. At times when the clouds were the blackest we could see only a few feet at the front, but could look down the sides of the cliff to which the track hung and see the snow-clad walls far below us. Now we would go flying into a tunnel, and here were the safest of places, for the rails were dry and the brakes made the wheels grip the track. Indeed, we almost prayed for the tunnels and were glad when we dashed over a bridge through the blinding sleet into the darkness.

We had made eight or nine miles when we met two trains standing at one of the switchbacks on a siding. They were waiting for us, and the engineers said another train must pass coming up before we started down. At that time we were chilled to our bones. Mr. Russell's face was blue with the sleet and the cold, and Floeckher's hands were frozen holding the brake. We climbed out of our car and into the cab of one of the oil-burning engines. The heat of the boiler soon thawed our blood, and within a short time our clothes, which had been wet by the snow, had dried off.

We were still in the storm when we left the switchback. The rails were covered with sleet and we could not be sure of the tracks. At one place we passed a gang of trainmen who were working on the road, and at another time narrowly escaped a drove of llamas that was crossing the track in the storm. As they saw our toboggan the animals began to run and they went along on kangaroo jumps with their Indian drivers, trotting behind.

At every hamlet along the way we had to look out for the dogs. The scurvy curs ran out and barked at the car and snapped at us as we flew by. The great danger was that a dog might get in front of the car and by being run over throw us down the sides of the mountain.

We were going too fast to watch out for slides. When it rains in the Andes this track has to be watched daily for the masses of earth and rock that fall down upon it, and for this reason a handcar is always sent five minutes in front of the engine to flag it for slides.

By and by we passed Casapalca, and there lost the storm. The sun came out, and the sky straightway was blue with white clouds. We could see for miles. The track dried, and we coasted along at great speed through some of the most wonderful scenery on earth. Now we would ride for miles between walls of rock that extended upwards for thousands of feet, and now hang over gorges below which a thousand feet down, the rushing Rimas flowed foaming. Now we would enter a tunnel high up on the side of a cliff and looking down see another tunnel almost directly below us. We rushed out of one tunnel into the Infernillo, a slender bridge of iron which joins two great walls of rocks. On the other side of the bridge we would see the black hole pierced by the track. Above us through the narrow slit of the rocks was the blue sky of heaven, and below was the gorge which these people call the Little Hell. The bridge there spans a chasm which is 2,000 feet deep, and we trembled at the thought that there might be a train in the tunnel beyond.

The whole of this wonderful road seems blasted out of the sides of the mountains. Here it hangs to the cliffs, there it bores through the rocks, and again it zigzags in great V's as it climbs. Some of the tunnels are so close together that they made me think of the road between Monte Carlo and Nice, which has been described as riding through a flute and looking out of the holes. The only difference between that and this road up the Andes is that each of these holes gives you a moving picture show of magnificent grandeur.

I wish I could show you some of the formations of the Andes. They surpass in their wonder the Alps and the Rockies, and I have seen nothing like them in the Himalayas. We have a little patch of four hundred acres in Colorado at the foothills of the Rockies which we call the Garden of Gods. Not far from Cerro de Pasco in the heart of the Andes, looked down upon by mountain peaks from 17,000 to 20,000 feet high, is a similar garden, which covers tens of thousands of acres, and with a hundred formations where the Colorado garden has one. In the Andes, there is one rock called the King, a gigantic figure as big as a house, with a crown on its top poised upon a neck not more than three feet in diameter, and so long that it carries the great head high above all its surroundings. There is another rock known as the Turtle, a gigantic block the shape of a tortoise that is believed to uphold the world. A third looks like a great steamboat perched on a pedestal, and a fourth is a mighty tower chiseled out by the gods. In this same region is the Rock Forest, consisting of hundreds of acres of columns which stand individually out on the plain and which in the distance look like a great woods.

And then there are castles, palaces and grand fortifications. With a little imagination you can find almost any kind of architecture or the model of any great structure. I have seen a table rock which hangs over the harbor at Cape Town in South Africa. There are table rocks of marble here in the Andes which look as though they had been cut by a sculptor.

Going to Cerro de Pasco I saw rocks like those of the Giant's Causeway, although they were not of hexagonal shape, and in riding through the mountains I have seen castles of the purest white marble which in their grandeur excel those mighty ruins, the work of man, on the Rhine. These mountains have all the colors of the Colorado canyon. Now the rock is blazing white above and a marble palace seems to have risen out of the golden rocks below, which in turn remind one of the rusted marbles of the Parthenon at Athens. Here the rocks are brown, further on they are blue, red or gray. The gray is the most prominent color close to the sea. Much of the formation is limestone. Here the mountains are ragged and rough. Further on they rise into ruined cities. I saw some the color of old red sandstone. They made me think of the grand fortifications of Delhi in India. I saw others which had spires like the cathedrals of Cologne and Milan. These spires were as white as Carrara marble, and they glistened like snow under the sun. Other rocks were dome-shaped, and others extend in great waves showing the folds in the earth, forming curving walls of wonderful beauty.

The vegetation of the Andes is wonderful. I have already written of the Rimac valley, which broadens out into an irrigated plain at the sea and climbs its winding way through narrow gorges, with patches of soil here and there to the top of the coastal range to a height of almost three miles. This has sugar cane, cotton and orchards at the base. Higher up are alfalfa and grass, and higher still are small grains of various kinds. Fruits can be grown all the way to the top. For the first two miles of altitude the mountains about are almost altogether a desert. Then comes a sprinkling of green, with many wild flowers. Higher still the green deepens, and after going over the pass and reaching the high plateau which is upheld by the two mighty ranges of the Andes nearest the coast, you come into a land which seems to be a bed of green moss with tufts of grass here and there. This is the vegetation of the high plateaus, which covers millions of acres and supports vast herds of llamas and sheep.

I rode for about a hundred miles over those plains, passing flock after flock of fat sheep, with tails as big around as my arm. To my eyes they seemed to have nothing to eat but they live on the moss and the thin fuzzy grass and grow fat. Some of the sheep are owned by rich capitalists. There is one firm which has 36,000, and another near Cerro de Pasco which owns 60,000 and more. There are also hundreds of squatters, Indians or Cholos, who have small flocks. They live in little houses about fifteen feet square away out on the plains. Their houses are of mud or sod, with thatched roofs held down by rocks. Near them are corrals for the stock. They are fenced with stone, and each pen contains an acre or so. Some of these squatters have great flocks of llamas, ad others of donkeys. Now and then you see a double corral with donkeys in one pen and llamas in the other. All of the stock are herded. Every flock has its man or woman, who stands and knits or spins as she watches it. Some of the herdsmen are children, little boys and girls of ten or twelve years of age, who knit or spin as they care for the sheep.

The great haciendas of the high Andes yield considerable money. There is one near La Foundicion, which produces tens of thousands of pounds of wool every year. It belongs to Duncan, Fox & Co., of Lima, and it is managed by a Scotchman whose name is McKenzie. The farm has 36,000 sheep, which are kept in fenced fields and handled by shepherds from Scotland. The manager is making many experiments in introducing new blood into the flocks, and he has Scotch collie dogs, which he has imported and is crossing with the native dogs of Peru to produce a breed especially fitted for sheep raising on the high Andes.

I see many cattle feeding on the plateau. They are comparatively small and not very fat. There is an Italian named Fernandini, who is experimenting in bringing in fancy stock. He has a number of large haciendas and expects to supply the meat market of the coast. This same man is said to own thousands of llamas and donkeys and the largest control of the freighting about Cerro de Pasco. I understand that the government is experimenting with the grasses of the high Andes and that attempts are being made to improve them.

The climate at 12,000 feet is not cold in comparison with that of some other sheep countries. It is warm during the day and even in the coldest weather the nights do not fall below zero. The sheep and cattle can feed out of doors all the year round. It snow falls, but the sun is so hot that it never lies more than an hour or so at a time. Almost the most dangerous features of the weather are the big thunder storms, with the accompanying lightning. The latter often strikes, killing people and sheep. As to the general features of the climate, the plateau has two seasons, dry and wet. The wet season begins in September or October and lasts until April or May. At that time it is usually clear in the mornings with rain or snow in the afternoon. The dry season, which is from May to September is delightfully clear. The sky is always blue and the tropical sun makes the weather much like Indian summer in the Virginia mountains, which I believe is the very best weather on earth.

Selling Wild Horses in the West; Scheme for Easy Money

OMAHA, Neb.—The venders of gold bricks, the "wire tapping" 50 per cent boys (in spite of distinction to those who are willing to split it 50-50) and the lightning rod agent who can change a farmer's "contract" into a promissory note in the twinkling of an eye—all these have given way to the stockman who sells you wild horses for delivery "on the range."

The federal authorities last week arrested three of these "plainsmen" and they are out on bail. Three more in the same gang are to be arrested as soon as they can be located.

The conspirators approach their victims with the statement that the ranges of the West are covered with their horses, which they offer for sale at ridiculously low prices, subject to "range delivery"—that is, the buyers must catch their own horses. The victims pay their money in advance.

"Range delivery" is not an unusual method of purchasing Western horses, so no suspicions are created. The horses are described as being on the range in Arizona. The victim is given a bill of sale calling for a certain number of horses from three to six year of age, now on the range, subject to range delivery, and the general section of country is contained in the description. In all cases so far discovered this is Coconeno county, Arizona.

The horses are there, just as described in the bill of sale, the range is in Coconeno county, and the purchaser is at liberty to go out and catch his horses, place them on board freight cars and get them to market. But, so far, the government agent have not yet discovered a single man who has been able to catch a horse. Coconeno county is as "big as all outdoors" and the horses are just a shade wilder than the proverbial "buck."

In fact the horses are the original "wild horses" of the Western plains. They are the descendants of horses which escaped from the early Spanish conquerors, and for nearly 400 years they have known no master. In an earlier day the Navajo and other Southwestern Indians had ways of running down the young colts and raising them to maturity, and it was from these wild herds that the red men secured their supply of horses. But it has always been impossible to catch the horses once they are grown old enough to have full strength and speed. With hundreds of miles of wild country over which to run, the purchaser of these horses stands about as much chance of catching them as he would of catching a wild buck from horseback. And as for dimensions, that of a hyena is angelic in comparison and he makes a lion look like a lamb.

The "conspirators" claim to own a bunch of these horses and say that their brand will be found on them if any one cares to investigate. So far no one has been able to disprove their claims. The brands may be there all right, but inasmuch as none of the buyers have got within miles they cannot say for a certainty that such is not the case.

On the other hand the government says there is fraud, but its agents are a little bit at sea in deciding just what the men arrested have done. The horses were purchased "range delivery" and they are certainly there for delivery whenever the buyer can catch them.

One of the victims told this story to the United States district attorney:

"I bought on contract eighty head of these horses and was to go down to Arizona and catch them on the range. I was told they were very wild and that it would be no easy job to catch them, but I knew a lot about horses. I've "cut out" range horses for years and years and I didn't believe there was a horse on the prairies that I couldn't get. So, armed with my bill of sale, I went down to Flagstaff and prepared to go out and pick up my horses. I was to have eighty head between the ages of three and six years, and could take my pick.

"I noticed there was something of a smile from a gang of loafers at the livery stable in Flagstaff when I went around and wanted to engage an outfit with which to go out and catch eighty horses whose brand was described in my bill of sale. I didn't have any trouble, though. The livery people had an outfit that could start at once, so I engaged it. There was a camp wagon and half a dozen men, including a cook. I thought it would take us about three days, so I engaged the outfit for that length of time.

"We went out on the range and we were out there for more days than I care to admit. We saw some wild horses, and they certainly were wild. In fact, to me they were only clouds of dust across the prairie. We worked around the country with the crew 'eating their heads off' and seemingly a little reticent about definite promises, until it finally dawned on me that there was something wrong.

"Those horses were so wild a fellow would have had to hire an army of cavalry to surround them. When I became convinced of that we went back to Flagstaff. As our outfit entered the town we met another one going out 'to catch a bunch of range horses I thought,' as explained by a sucker in charge. I let him go on. I saw him a week later. He didn't have any horses. He saw the dust, just like I did.

"Those animals have been sold dozens of times but no one ever catches one of them. We suckers all have the same experience. There are some horses there, all right. I don't know whether or not they belong to the man who sold them to me. In fact, they are wild and belong to any one who can catch them.

"I played the game, fell sucker and lost. But the next man who sells me horses in Arizona will have to catch the animals himself."

Better Babies For Georgia.

By Angus Perkerson

"A GOOD many babies will die this summer that ought to live," said Mrs. James R. Little, in an interview last week at her home on Peachtree road, in which she explained the plans of the Georgia Mothers' Congress to make an educational campaign for "better babies." "That will happen here and everywhere else.

"Don't you think the city of Atlanta could give us $500 to help our effort to save human life? We need that much to organize the mothers of Georgia into groups to which doctors could lecture every now and then.

"Not many people know just what children need. We want to teach them by lectures from competent doctors, and by commonsense pamphlets distributed among mothers.

"The Georgia Mothers' Congress has set out to improve the quality of our babies, and to lower the death rate among babies in this state.

"To do this we must first of all get the women of the state organized, so that we can reach them by lectures and by pamphlets. And to take this first step we are asking for $500 with which to send an organizer through the state.

"Then, we wish to raise $500 with which to have the child's welfare exhibit located permanently in Atlanta. From here it could be taken all over the state, so that every city and town in Georgia could have a part in its benefits.

"Next, we wish to establish milk depots in Atlanta from which we can furnish good milk to mothers.

"After that, we want free clinics here where babies can be taken for treatment.

"And, lastly, we'd like to offer prizes for the healthiest, and the rosiest, and the chubbiest babies you can find anywhere in the state.

"When I say 'we,' I'm speaking for the Georgia Congress of Mothers.

Much Sickness Preventable.

"When I was president of the Congress—I hold no office now," she broke off to explain. "But I am engrossed in this effort to make babies in Georgia healthier—to give them a better chance. But when I was president, as I said, I collected much data.

"Many babies here and everywhere else are suffering from improper feeding—that's a fact that an investigation will prove to anyone. Much of the sickness and death among babies is preventable.

"This state can have stronger and better babies, and so can any other part of the country. I'm not talking eugenics, now, but physiology, I suppose we had best call it.

"The Georgia Mothers' Congress knows that what the little children need are parents better taught in the simple, material things, such as feeding, clothing, fresh air, and a righteous fear of too many soothing syrups.

"And, so, we've set out to provide for talks every now and then by doctors. If we can get the mothers organized we'll have no trouble about the lecturers. Here in Atlanta the doctors—the best specialists we have—have been ready, all the time, to lecture to meetings of mothers and explain to them the simple, commonsense everyday things they need to know.

"The time they've given has been worth ten times over $500. And the results we'd get from a grouping of the mothers—I mean, an organization of them into communities—couldn't be measured in money.

"It would mean the prevention of sickness, the prevention of death—better, healthier babies. That's it.

Want Milk Depots Here.

"And our efforts, you understand, are for the whole state. We want to organize the mothers in every city and town in Georgia, and in the country districts, too, as far as we can; and then arrange as frequent lectures to every group as we can.

"To put it in another way, we want to organize the mothers of Georgia into a big school, and have the doctors act as teachers. Our principal study will be feeding, and the rest of the curriculum will take up teething and measles and all the other interesting things that happened to a baby.

"As I said, we want to establish milk depots here in Atlanta this summer. Mrs. Rowlette did that last year, and supplied over 50 mothers with good milk that their babies otherwise couldn't have had.

"Money for this particular charity was given by individuals, and we hope to get more money in the same way when the hot months come around again. Doctors will tell you that many babies here are poorly nourished, because the milk they get isn't the right sort. We'd like to change that condition. In New York and one or two other big cities, untold good is done by the milk depots for poor mothers.

"They charge the poor but six cents a quart for this milk in New York. I don't know at what price we can sell the milk from our depots. That depends on how much money we have. We'd like to give it away.

"Now free clinics—places where the poor can take their babies and have them examined and treated—are another thing. They are something that is needed, and are a provision that ought to be made.

Child Welfare Exhibit.

"One of our definite aims, as I said, is toward this end. And then come the prizes.

"As for a child welfare exhibit permanently established here, I don't see how we can get along without it. It would be an object lesson, teaching more than any number of lectures and books. Just a glance tells the story when you visit such an exhibit. It's as quick and definite as a moving picture.

"To have it here and to transfer it at our pleasure to any part of the state would be a great help in our educative campaign. And it is by education that we can do the greatest good for babies.

"A year ago the American Medical association, the National Mothers' Congress, and the "Woman's Home Companion" started an effort for "Better babies."

A foreword to a summary of the results accomplished by this movement says: "By honest, sincere and unbelievably hard work, has accomplished in one year what a generation of scattered endeavor could not have brought about."

"That's rather significant, isn't it—it's almost unbelievable when as much is accomplished in one year as had been done before in a whole generation.

Story Letters Tell.

"But the results of this campaign to improve the health of babies are given accurately, and even greater good can be done when the campaign is centered in one state.

"Undoubtedly we can have 'better babies' in Georgia if we simply try.

"The need here and everywhere of free clinics and of lectures is undoubted," continued Mrs. Little. "The way in which care will make babies healthier and will reduce the death rate among them, was proved most strikingly by Dr. Pierre Budin, a doctor in Paris.

"What he accomplished ought to be interesting to everybody in Georgia, because of what the congress of mothers is now trying to do.

"Twenty years ago," says a writer in McClure's Magazine, "Dr. Pierre Budin established his consultanus denourrissons, which were destined to serve as models for baby-saving work the world over.

"The only equipment that is necessary," said he, "is a pair of scales and the services of a devoted doctor."

"Each week the babies were weighed and examined, and the mothers were advised as to feeding and care. Not to cure sick babies, but to keep well babies well, became the motto of the consultations.

"Several years later, his biographer tells us, Budin was 'struck down on the field of honor and of duty.' 'As he was going to a conference on infant mortality at Marseilles, he contracted pneumonia, and died, leaving to his assistants and pupils this letter:

"My Dear Friends: To you I intrust the fate of the little babies of France. I count on you to spread by your own efforts now, and later through your pupils, the necessary propaganda in favor of the consultations with young mothers.'

"BUDIN."

In his memory a hospital was established which has reduced the number of deaths among babies in Paris because of summer disorders, from 30,000 to 17,000.

The method at the hospital is this:

"Once a week the mothers come with their babies into the main reception room; four by four, they pass into the smaller weighing room, where each receives a basket into which to drop her child's clothing. Each baby is then weighed, inspected and redressed, and the mother carries it into the next room, where the doctor looks at the card record, listens to the mother's account of the week's history, gives advice, and prescribes any change in feeding that he may deem wise. If artificial food is necessary the best pasteurized and modified milk is supplied.

"In this way each mother is taught how to care for her own child and how to keep it well; and each becomes a teacher in her neighborhood. Artificial food is never advised or provided unless absolutely necessary; for this was the doctrice of the master."

"Great good can and will be done in Georgia by our effort for better babies," concluded Mrs. Little.

Readers Show Liking for Essays

The third edition of W. E. Henley's "Views and Reviews," attests an enduring if slow demand for what Henley himself called "less a book than a mosaic of scraps and shreds recovered from the shot rubbish of some fourteen years of journalism." None of the essays are long, for in revision and reconstitution the author excised much, and he had a genius for pointed brevity. From London came the notes on Longfellow, Balzac, Borrow, Eliot, and Sidney; from the Athenaeum those on Richardson, Thackeray, Gay, Dickens, Congreve, Boswell, Hood, Dobson, and others; from the Saturday Review those on Dumas and Tolstoy; and from Scots Observer and Vanity Fair others, as Walton, Landor, and Heine. The author's pungency of phrase enables him to be the architect, especially when he is in appreciative mood, of an illuminating comment which consumes no more than three or four hundred words. His incisiveness has its limitations, but he can pack into a sentence that for which others require pages: "The muse of M. de Banville was born not naked but in the most elaborate and sumptuous evening wear that even muse put on"; "I love to think of Jefferies as a kind of literary Leatherstocking;" "He that has the 'Thousand Nights and a Night' has Haschisch-made-words for life."

The faculty was especially his of translating into a condensed picture the whole impression of a volume. Take his enthusiastic comment on the translation of Butcher and Lang:

To read this Odyssey of theirs is to have a breath of the clear, serene airs that blew through the antique Hellas; to catch a glimpse of the large, new morning light that bathes the seas and highlands of the young heroic world. In a space of shining and fragrant charity you have a vision of marble columns and stately cities, of men august in single-heartedness and strength, and women comely and simple and superb as goddesses; and with a music of winds and leaves and waters, of plunging ships and clanging armors, of girls at song, and kindly gods discoursing, the sunny-eyed heroic age is revealed in all its nobleness, in all its majesty, its candor, and charm. The air is yet plangent with the echoes of the leagues of Troy, and Odysseus the ready-at-need goes forth upon his wanderings; into the cave of Polypheme, into the land of giants, into the very regions of the dead; to hear among the olive-trees the song of Circe, the sweet witch singing her magic song as she fares to and fro before her golden loom; to rest and pine in the islet of Calypso; to meet with Nausicaa; to reach his Ithaca, and do battle with the woors, and age in peace and honor by the side of the wise Penelope.

And his picture of Longfellow is quite as good, though it has in it the possibility of many misconceptions, "To him the sea is a place of mariners and ships. In his verse the rigging creaks,the white sail fills and crackles, there are blown smells of pine and hemp and tar; you catch the home wind on your cheeks; and old shipmen, their eyeballs white in their bronzed handkerchiefs, come in and tell you moving stories of the immemorial, uncommunicable deep. He abides in a port; he goes down to the docks and loiters among the galiots and brigantines, he hears the melancholy song of the chanty-men; he sees the chips flying under the shipwright's adze; he smells the pitch that smokes and bubbles in the caldron."

FISHING FOR MAN-EATERS IN FLORIDA

By Bradford Byrd

WHEN Bill Coles, of Tallahassee, arrived at Lanark, Fla., on the gulf of Mexico, to join a camping party he observed a group of tourists listening with interest to the tales of an old salt who sat upon a piling at the end of the pier. Crouched with his bare feet beneath him, the mariner puffed away at a mess tobacco cigarette while his listeners sat in a semi-circle on the pier directly in front of him and frequently interrupted his narrative with a question. As Coles was to the leeward of the group he could catch broken bits of the story and heard the old sailor say:

"Whena da sun he shina big, dena da time. You taka da sloop, carra da skiff, him leetle boat, too. Sailla sou-by-eas to da pass an whena you come to outside da spit sailla sou bout knot you finda deep water and whena you come spot where sloop maka da straight line dees post (slapping the piling upon which he was sitting) and clumpa da grass on spit, den you find it, right now."

Although the mariner spoke in broken English, Coles understood that he was directing his hearers to a certain spot beyond the sand spit, a little island with a splotch of grass in the center, the barrier between Lanark and the open gulf. The tale was too interesting to miss half so Coles decided to drop into the circle and hear the balance of the narrative.

"What's this, another party seeking a lost treasure in the gulf?" inquired Coles as he approached.

"Why, hello, Bill!" it was Bob McTyer, of Atlanta, who spoke. He had been sitting in such a position when Coles first reached the pier that the Tallahassean did not recognize his old partner in many former fishing and hunting camps.

"Been waiting for you for several days, you must have been pretty busy up in Talla recently," McTyer continued, so glad to see his friend that he forgot to answer Cole's question about the old mariner's tale.

John, Alias Pietronie Legorie.

"Meet Mr. Richards, Dr. Stanford and Mr. Beauchamp," said McTyer introducing Coles. "Gentlemen, this is Mr. Coles, Ole Bill Coles, my long-time friend. He has a way of making people laugh when they'd rather cry and many's the time when he with his yarns, jokes and pranks has made me feel like a five-year-old in a rye patch when just a few moments before I'd been sulking and snarling at everything and everybody."

While formalities of introducing a friend to the other members of the camping party were progressing, old John, for that's what the mariner was called, availed himself of the let up in his yarn to roll a fresh cigarette. John's real name is Pietronie Legorie and the reader does not have to be told that he is neither Irish, Swede nor Yiddish. John is a Greek who came from the old country about twenty years ago and on account of his constant association with other Greeks who sail the Florida coast and his manner in secluding himself from the English speaking races, is yet unable to speak English save in broken doses.

He is the typical mariner to be found in that section of the Florida coast, for the Greeks are employed in large numbers by the oyster industries. Each has his own sloop and in the summer months when oyster fishing is abandoned they visit the various resorts along the coast and pick up what spare change they can by taking parties out fishing and sailing.

John is a familiar figure at the Lanark pier each summer, for Lanark is the Carlsbad of Dixie, and people from that section of inland Florida and south Georgia flock there during the sultry months. Although most of the tourists come for the waters from Yoeman's springs, they take advantage of their idle hours to indulge in fishing for the gamest of the finny tribe.

Yoeman's spring, as the water supply for the resort is called, has only recently become famed to the world outside of a 200-mile radius of the place, but within that radius generation after generation has visited it for its wonderful effect on the human system. In the days before the Indians were driven into a reservation at the Everglades a tribe made its home at this spring and today one can walk along the beach where the spring waters empty into the gulf and pick up any number of relics, such as flint arrow heads, pieces of pottery, Indian pipes and tomahawks.

Lair of the Leopard Shark.

Many legends are told of happenings at this particular spot on Florida's coast; Indians, pirates and buried treasure form the center of most of the yarns, consequently it was no surprise to Bill Coles to hear one of the Greek mariners relating a yarn similar to a part of the supposed fable he caught from the tale of Old John as he reached the pier.

When introductions were over and Coles knew what his fellow campers looked like, McTyer turned to the mariner and said, "and this, Bill, this is Ole John. He will take us where we will catch plenty of fish.

"Data him. Da feesh," exclaimed John. "I no talka bout da buried mon, I tella you bout da beeg feesh. When, where, how you catch him. Da man-eater, beeg fellow, him long. him gotta da sharp teeth. Him eata da man, eata me, eata you."

In this way Old John explained that his story a part of which Coles heard was not of buried treasure but directions to the party where to find the big man-eating shark. The lair of the leopard shark, according to John, is in deep water a mile beyond the island in front of Lanark and the warmer the day the better the chances of finding his fish-ship at home. The leopard or man-eating shark does not frequent Lanark bay for fear of shoal water catching him in a tight place when the tide goes down and for that reason swimmers at the resort have no fear of swimming from the mainland to the island, no matter how hot the sun.

Beyond the island, or "outside the spit" as the term is used on the coast, however, master shark patrols the brine as Uncle Sam has been doing the Mexican border since ex-President Taft gave his famous order just before quitting his desk at the White House. The triangle fin can be seen cutting the water's surface most any clear day and that is the signal to keep aboard ship and not try to bathe your toes by dangling your limbs over the boat's side.

"Him," as John called the shark, is the blood-hound of the gulf and once human flesh touches the water it is scented by the leopard's keen nose almost instantly. Of course the shovel-nose or hammerhead shark, the only members of that family which ventures into Lanark bay between the island and mainland, are not vicious. They never attack a human being and are easily frightened away. But when you get out into the deep, the place John describes, the villain of the shark family ,the leopard, the spotted fellow, is not so easily frightened as his ultra-domestic brother.

Their Morning's "Joke."

Fishing for either, however, is good sport, but more venture comes with tackling the man-eater and opportunities are offered for catching other large game fish such as the tarpon, skip-jack and sailor-fish, if one decides to take the trip out into the deep and open gulf.

The McTyer-Coles party listened for an hour as old John explained how to catch the man-eaters and related many daring experiences he had had with the monsters. When John's experiences began to savor of myths one of the party made a move for adjournment and supper. After sniffing the fumes from frying fish and boiling coffee, for an hour it seemed, the meal was finally ready and quickly disappeared.

The party retired to their beds of palmetto palms and moss, which by the way makes a comfortable couch under a tent awning, for a good night's rest, perparatory to an early trip to the shark waters next morning.

Before dawn, the party was awakened by a shout from McTyer, "Help! Snakes, great Caesar; someone come quick, a snake has me! Help!"

Rushing from their tents, the aroused tourists, one with a gun, another with a lantern, some half clothed, entered McTyer's tent.

When the light from the lantern covered the form of McTyer, the party gave an uproar of laughter. There the poor fellow lay entangled in a wet rope and Bill Coles was standing at his head twisting the coil to make it wiggle like a snake.

But Bob's a good chap. He knows how to take a joke and knowing Bill as he did was not surprised to find that his old friend was the perpetrator of the prank.

All hands were ready for start as day began to crack the darkness in the east. John had coffee at a boiling point when the party stepped aboard his sloop and as Bill Coles served the hot beverage and hard tack, the old mariner poled his boat around the pier corner into the breeze of the rising tide and they were off.

Hunt for the Man-Eaters.

Through Dog island channel they sailed out into the swells and then on toward the south until the sun was just breaking through a little place where the sky and water seemed to meet.

"Now we get him!" shouted John.

The party gazed toward the landing pier at Lanark, and sure enough the boat was in direct line with the piling upon which the old mariner sat the afternoon before and the clump of grass on the little sand island which stretched between them and Lanark bay.

When sails were furled and an awning stretched overhead, the party began to prepare its tackle for the day's sport. Bill Coles, as usual, was first to get his hook baited and in the water.

"You don't expect to catch a shark with that thing, do you?" shouted Bob McTyer to Bill, as he untangled a mass of rope. Bill was fishing with an ordinary cutthunk line using rod and reel and had baited a stout trout hook with a live minnow.

"You go along and untangle your ploe line," shouted Bill to Bob. "I'm not after shark yet, I'm going to show you land-lubbers something about what's in this here water. You just watch your Uncle Bill. You may go ahead and begin fishing for shark now but it will be a long time before you get a bite because I don't see a fin in sight. The thing to do is to go ahead and fish for something that will bite right now, have your shark lines ready so that you can drop them over the moment one hoves in sight. Old man shark likes company and when the other fish get to biting good he comes around and sorta butts in. You watch and—whoopee!"

Joy Ride on the Gulf.

Bill's explanation was cut short. He had a bite, a real bite. Something had taken his line cutting through the water at a twenty-knot clip.

"Zizz-zizz-zizz-zizz," sang the reel on his rod. A splash in the water twenty-five yards from the end of the reel told the party that Bill had a tarpon hooked. The tune which the reel kept singing told Bill that he must check the speed of his fish or lose most of his line.

"Quick, John, the skiff," shouted Bill to the old mariner. John was alongside with the small boat almost as soon as Bill had spoken. John, another oarsman, Dr. Stanford and Bill jumped into the skiff and were soon being towed by the huge fish. The weight of dragging a boat over the surface of the water will tire a fish quickly and save one's line and sometimes the fish.

For an hour Bob and Beauchamp watched the fight from the sloop all the while Bill and his party in the skiff were taking a joy ride over the gulf. Now one of these tarpon joy rides is not exactly as the riders would have it, for you can't go just exactly where you wish. To save your line you must let the fish go his own route and drag your boat with him When the old boy slacks his speed, begin winding up your line on the reel so as to have plenty to give him in an emergency sprint.

After awhile Bill had his fish under control and began winding up the slack line preparatory to landing his prize. A few sluggish tugs checked his winding for moments but soon he had the shining silver fish alongside the skiff and each member of the party waited breathlessly to see him haul his prize into the little boat. This did not happen, however, for the tarpon gave one turn and was free.

There Bill sat holding his pole upright, his broken line dangling to the breeze, a swirl in the water showing where the tarpon had whirled and disappeared at a swift gait.

"Durn this luck," exclaimed Bill. "I might have known I couldn't land a tarpon with this tackle. That is one of the most crafty of the finny tribe. He carries a pair of scissors on the side of his jaw and if you haven't got your hook on a wire, chain or piece of raw hide he'll cut it every time you give him slack."

Hooking Sailor Fish.

While Bill was struggling for an hour with his tarpon, Bob McTyer and Beauchamp had been fishing from the sloop. While they were excited at times over Bill's fight they were kept fairly busy attending to their own lines and when the party in the skiff returned to the big boat McTyer and Beauchamp had landed three sailor fish.

This sailor fish is a slim looking fellow and his business end has the appearance of a sword. It is with this keen beak that he pierces his prey, the smaller fish. His dorsal fin is in the shape of a ship's sail and frequently he can be seen taking life easy on the water's surface letting the wind blow him where it may.

While Bill was explaining how he lost the prize fish of the day Bob had had several tussles with skipjacks and landed only one. The rest of the party soon got their lines into the water and for a half hour shouts could be heard from every quarter of the boat. First one then the other was shouting to his companions to look out for a fish coming their way with his line. It wasn't long before the deck of the sloop was literally covered with small fish of every description.

Old John now made himself busy by sorting the fish fit to eat from those which were not. After completing this task and putting the good fish away he took his hatchet and began making a bloody mince of the rest of the fish. When he had two bucketsful of this mince he jumped into his skiff with an oarsman, and while one rowed in a circle about the larger boat the other scattered the mince on the water.

Triangle Fin Sighted.

When John returned to the sloop his work was already bearing results. The water was literally alive with a swirling, chopping mass of fish. The fishermen could not bait their hooks fast enough. Trout, grunts, groupers, black fish, mackerel and blue fish were caught. The mackerel and blue fish soon passed on by, however and the fishing soon became tame.

"Looka," shouted old John, "Data him."

Sure enough the triangle find had put in its appearance and all hands pulled in the small tackle and made ready for the big fight of the day. On the end of a stout plow line a hook with a twelve-inch shank and about a three-inch bend had been placed A whole mullet had been hooked on this and was cast out in the direction of the triangle fin.

The fin turned, circled around the spot where the bait sank and disappeared from the surface.

"Mova da foot froma da rope," shouted John, warning the inexperienced fishermen of the danger of being thrown overboard if the shark took the bait.

Slowly the coils of the rope on the deck began sliding into the water. All knew that the shark had taken the bait but had not yet felt the hook. Suddenly the line straightened and became as taut as a violin string. With a sizzling noise it cut the water's surface and the party felt the boat jolt.

Mr. Shark was hooked good and fast and had reached the end of the rope. At first the old boy was sullen, he quit his hard pulling and evidently went to the bottom. This was no fun for the party so Old John went to the edge of the boat and gave the line several sharp jerks to tease the monster fish. In an instant the man-eater was on the surface and churning the water like a side-wheel steamer. From right to left he tugged keeping the water about him in a white foam, but it availed him nothing.

Sharks On All Sides.

By this time the surface of the water was cut on all sides by triangle fins. The bloody mince which John had spread upon the surface and the churning of the big shark had attracted the whole house of sharkdom. But one big man-eater at a time is enough to have hooked to one sloop so the party rested content to see the big spotted gray fellow battle to free himself as his brothers patrolled all sides of the ship seeking any flesh, alive or dead.

The sun was now directly overhead, it had been seven hours since that party had eaten a morsel so they prepared lunch and with the dance of the shark for their cabaret enjoyed the noonday meal.

After an hour's tugging and splashing the shark gave up the fight and allowed his captors to drag him alongside the boat. A noose was dropped over his tail and with all hands pulling he was strung up to the stays on the side of the mast.

This particular shark was only eight and one-half feet from nose to tip of tail, but that he was a good sized fish, but not by any means as large as other specimens which have been caught in these waters. A twelve-foot man-eater is frequently captured and several fifteen-foot fellows have been reported caught by sailors in that vicinity.

The West Indian black shark does not venture as far north as Lanark but out on the sponge reefs from Carrabelle it is said they have been seen on several occasions, although none have ever been caught there.

The spongers return from the reefs sometimes with one of their party missing and give in harrowing detail how they stood helpless on the deck of the boat and through the clear water saw a monster shark eat one of their divers in two. Sometimes they bring a half of a corpse back with them.

Fishing for man-eaters is great sport but when you attempt it be sure to remember that the shark is stronger than you and with him pulling at one end of a line you have no chance unless the other end is tied to a piling on the pier or to the mast of a boat.

Salvation Lassie's Work

And the girl of the army stopped singing after a while, because her throat felt so choky and because the girl on the bed closed her eyes and, with a smile on her wan face, went to sleep like a child who is weary of play.

When Rheba Crawford reached home that night the park across the street was very dark and the squirrels which had scampered so blithely in the morning were long ago asleep. But for quite two minutes she just lay where she had flung herself across the bed and almost wished she were as dead as she felt.

But the night wind that brushed through the window was cool and comforting, and she remembered how the blind man had looked when he said, "I can almost see the sunshine," and she forgot how sticky the children's hands were in thinking of how tender and clinging they felt. She forgot Mrs. Smithers' hard eyes in the memory of her wintry smile, but most of all she remembered how the girl of the underworld had smiled when she closed her eyes and went to sleep.

For the hardness and softness, you know, are all a part of the army and of the army girl's day's work.

Better Buildings for Schools

BY MRS. J. E. SOMMERFIELD

Women on the school board in Atlanta! A large topic for a limited space. It would surely bring about a revolution in the housing conditions of our schools. And I believe the high schools would command first attention. How many or rather how few people realize the kind of buildings to which our children now go! That the very efficient corps of teachers achieve the splendid results they do accomplish under existing circumstances is a marvel.

On a recent visit to the Tech High school, I sat in a class room, poorly lighted and poorly ventilated, but with the best light and ventilation attainable in this room. In the midst of an interesting geometry lesson, sounds of the anvil and the hammer were heard from a room next door showing that work in the "shop" had begun. These two rooms are separated from each other by a wooden partition.

Conditions in the two girls' high schools are equally deplorable.

Next to where the present Tech High school stands is an empty lot which could be bought for only $45,000. Women would either build the right school here and now or thus to pay rent for an inferior building or they would sell this lot, buy a less expensive one farther out of town and put up a model school.

The city also owns valuable property to be used some day for a girls' high school. Again women would build here at once and not risk the lives and the health of our girls at an age when they need the best care

To Straighten Protruding Teeth

"TEETH like pearls.' I must talk about the teeth to my friends," thought I, when I heard a man use the well-worn compliment when speaking of a girl he knew. In this day of sanitation and hygiene the teeth have received more important notice than ever before among medical men and also among educators, for the latter now realize that many a dull child owes its stupidity to the condition of its teeth. As a consequence, we now have in most cities a regular inspection of the teeth of our school children, and the little folk can no longer be held responsible for the neglect of their parents in this instance. It is to be hoped that the children will grow up with a knowledge of the importance of good and clean teeth, as I fear that some of their parents have not yet grasped the fact. Some of us, it is true, give our teeth a brushing morning and night and after each meal, but are the teeth clean after these sometimes superficial brushings? Usually not, unless we have given the matter more thought than the average person devotes to the mouth and its furniture.

"Bad teeth, bad health," said a prominent physician, and although some scoffed at him at the time, the world is beginning to appreciate the truth of his statement.

Pretty teeth, or, at least, white teeth, are essential to beauty when beauty smiles. "She doesn't keep her teeth clean," exclaimed an old lady whom I know, "so, of course, one takes for granted that she doesn't bathe daily." And there you are.

The teeth of most folk are sufficiently far apart for small particles of food to lodge between them, and if these particles are not quickly removed their decomposition begins, injurious acids are formed, and a decay of first the enamel and then the teeth proper begins. Besides, such decaying particles give rise to poisonous and offensive gases which retard digestion, aggravate the nervous system and poison the blood, making, as you see, radiant health impossible.

The ill-bred custom of using a tooth pick before people is not to be considered for an instant, but it is advisable to retire to one's room or the bathroom as soon after a meal as possible and there use both toothpick and dental floss to remove any particles of food adhering to the teeth, first having brushed them with hot water. One must take care, too, that the brush is the right size. If it is too large it will not reach far back into the mouth and well up to the gums. Have it rather short and not too wide. A good tooth powder should be used twice a day. Two ounces of precipitated chalk and two ounces of powdered orris root, crushed and mixed, make one of the best of home-made powders. It is not only harmless but beneficial. One should exercise great care in selecting a powder for the teeth and to know that it contains nothing injurious. Sometimes there are spots of tartar upon the teeth that do not yield readily to the brush. These can be removed by wrapping a small pointed stick with absorbent cotton moistened and dipped in powdered pumice stone. Very little pumice should be used, and this method should be resorted to but once every two weeks and then with the greatest caution. A collection of tartar on the teeth causes recession of the gums, which become inflamed, and as a consequence the teeth are eventually lost and one is obliged to buy "store teeth" at an early age. Not only should the teeth be well cared for at home, but one should go to a dentist at least twice a year—say, once every six months. Far from being expensive, these semi-annual visits are an economy. Small cavities are filled at less cost than a tooth can be capped for, etc.

Some there are who use salt instead of tooth powder. Salt does not agree with all gums and teeth, but where it does the teeth are hard and white and the gums red, giving a very healthy appearance. If the gums are soft, and even where there is ulceration, tincture of myrrh is an excellent remedy. Dip a small soft brush in the lotion and apply carefully to the sore places.

There is a massage of the gums which stimulates circulation and is thought to make the teeth firm and the gums hard and strong. Take the little finger and rub firmly and gently over the gums once a day.

Protruding teeth are unsightly, and if the teeth are beyond home remedy, a dentist should certainly be consulted and the mar to one's appearance removed. However, first try pressing gently on the teeth to push them into place when reading or absorbed in study. If within several months there is no sign of improvement, a dentist should be consulted.

Are you sure, too, that your breath is not offensive? Unfortunately, we are not able to readily determine this ourselves, but a mother or sister will usually answer such a question truthfully. An offensive breath will cause even a young and beautiful girl to be avoided. Not always are the teeth responsible for this impurity, but frequently they are the chief cause. A physician should always be consulted when the breath is unsweet, as the offensive odor is a warning from nature that the body needs a housecleaning of some sort without delay, and if the warning is not heeded, much suffering now or in the more advanced years may be entailed. A mixture of camphor and myrrh (a few drops of each in a glass of water) is a splendid wash and gargle. If only the myrrh is used in the water, ten drops will be sufficient.

"Good teeth, good health!" I trust you will not forget the concluding motto.

ADVICE ON BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Cocoa Butter

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. Will you please tell me if you think cocoa butter will make up the flesh? Will it cause hairs to grow on the skin?

2. Do you recommend glycerin and rosewater as a help to the fairy group on the skin?

3. My nose is full of pimples. Can you give me of some remedy for them?

4. I wash my hair at least once every week, but it is full of oil before the week is over and sticks to my head. My scalp is fair and without dandruff. ANXIOUS.

1. Cocoa butter is a very good flesh builder, and as it is a vegetable compound, it should not cause the hairs to grow. But if you start a treatment by the rubbing may increase the growth of hair to some extent.

2. No.

3. I advise you to bathe the nose with water as hot as you can bear it, and after gently drying the skin apply the lotion for which the recipe is here given:

Tonic for Pimples

Extract of cucumber	30 drops
Sweet almond oil	1¼ drams
Sulphur precipitated	¾ dram
Lanolin	¾ grains
Oxide of zinc	15 grains

If this local treatment fails, you should go to your physician and have him prescribe for you.

4. When washing your hair add a pinch of washing soda to the water. This will remove much of the oil. Use the lotion made according to this recipe:

Powdered bicarbonate of soda, powdered	¼ ounce
Borax	¼ ounce
Distilled water	3 fluid ounce
	15 fluid ounces

A Double Chin

Dear Mrs. Symes.

What can I do to reduce a double chin? This makes me look ugly and fleshy.

EMMA.

To help reduce a double chin, practice the following exercise: 1. Stand erect, in military position. Place the hands lightly on the hips, fingers forward. Then throw the chin slowly on the collarbone; then throw the head back with a quick, free movement that is not a jerk, but puts all the muscles into quick play. Repeat ten times. 2. Turn the head quickly to the right till the chin is over the right shoulder; then back head to the left in the same way. Repeat ten times. Do not tire the muscles or the neck, but gradually increase the number of exercises daily until you can practice each one about fifty times without after discomfort.

For the Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please tell me what I can do to improve the appearance of my hands? They are so thin and scrawny looking.

ELEANOR.

Skin Food for the Hands

Cocoa butter	1 ounce
Oil of sweet almonds	1 ounce
Oxide of zinc	1 dram
Borax	1 dram
Oil of bergamot	4 drops

Heat the cocoa butter and oil of almonds in a double boiler, and the powders thoroughly blended add the zinc and borax; stir as it cools, and add the oil of bergamot last. Rub into the hands at night.

Biting the Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes.

What can I do with my little girl of 6, who is constantly biting her nails?

MOTHER.

Have you tried the bitter aloes treatment? This is merely the application of bitter aloes to the nails. The taste is so objectionable that the child will hardly care to continue biting the nails. If you have tried this without good results, see if bandaging her fingers will cure her. When it is impossible to break a child of this habit by home treatment, a mother should take her to the family physician and have him prescribe something for the child's nerves, which, most likely, are at the bottom of the trouble.

A Dry Throat

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Can you tell me why it is my throat so often feels dry?

Also tell me what is a harmless solution to use to spray the throat and nose?

MARY.

Mouth breathing will cause dryness of the throat. If you are guilty of this habit, you should correct it immediately. If you have difficulty in breathing through the nose, you should go to a nose and throat specialist and see what is the trouble.

A solution of boric acid, in the proportion of two teaspoonfuls of boric acid to one pint of water, may be used to spray the nose and throat.

Skin Food

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My skin is dry and flabby, and I think the daily application of a skin food will do much to restore it to a healthy condition. Will you kindly give me the recipe for a good one?

MOTHER.

Here is the recipe for a very fine skin food:

Skin Food

White wax	1 ounce
Spermaceti	1 ounce
Benzoin	2 ounces
Cocoanut oil	2 ounces
Orange-flower water	2 ounces
Oil of sweet almonds	4 ounces
Tincture of benzoin	20 drops

Melt the first five ingredients together. Take off the fire and beat until nearly cold, adding little by little the benzoin, and lastly the orange-flower water.

If your skin is exceptionally dry, you should be sure to avoid soaps which increase the dryness. Always rinse from the face any kind of soap you may use. If it is allowed to remain on, it will irritate the skin.

To Develop the Bust

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me what to use to develop the bust?

HELEN.

Following is the recipe for a tonic which you can take to increase the bust measurement:

Dr. Vaucaire's Remedy for the Bust

Liquid extract of galega (goats-rue)	2 fl. dr.
Lacto-phosphate of lime	154 grains
Tincture of fennel	30 minims
Simple syrup (sugar and water 1 to 3) q. s.	1½ ounces

The dose is 2 soupspoonfuls with water before each meal.

Doctor Vaucaire also advises the drinking of malt extract during meals.

For Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please give me the recipe for a lotion which I may use on freckles?

T. L.

A lotion which may be used for freckles or sunburn is made of:

Citric acid (lemon)	2 drams
Hot water	1½ ounces
Borax	2 drams
Red rose petals	1 ounce
Glycerin	1 ounce

Dissolve the acid and borax in the water; infuse the petals for an hour; strain through a jelly bag after twenty-four hours, decant the clear portion and add the glycerin. Apply as often as agreeable.

Toilet Water

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me what to mix with essence of violet to make a pleasant toilet water? GRATEFUL.

The following recipe will tell you what to add to the essence of violet:

Violet Water

Essence of violet	1 fluid ounce
Essence of rose	½ fluid ounce
Essence of cassia	½ ounce
Alcohol	6½ ounces

Tooth Paste

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I should like very much to have the recipe for a tooth paste which is not unpleasant to the taste. MILDRED.

Here is the recipe for a paste which is sure to please you:

Tooth Paste

Orris root powder	8 ounces
Myrrh powder	½ ounces
Oil of cloves	2 drams
Oil of lemon	3 drams
Oil of rose	20 drops

Solution of carmine sufficient to color. Honey enough to form paste.

Brittle Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My nails are very brittle, and it is therefore difficult for me to keen them a decent length. What can I do to correct this fault? JANE.

Use the paste made according to these directions: Take equal parts of refined pitch and myrrh, or of turpentine and myrrh melted. Mix together and spread upon the nails at night. Remove in the morning with a little olive oil. This paste will nourish the nails and make them stronger.

Another way to make the nails less brittle is to hold the finger tips in warm olive oil for five or ten minutes every day and at night apply cold cream to the nails.

Foot Powder

Dear Mrs. Symes:

A friend of mine told me that you sent her a delightful powder to be used on the feet before putting on the shoes and stockings. She lost the recipe and advised me to write for it. K. L. P.

Here is the recipe you desire:

Foot Powder

Burned alum	6 grams
Salicylic acid	5½ grams
Starch	15 grams
Violet talcum powder	15 grams

Dust over perspiring feet, which should be bathed at least once daily.

White Marks on Chin

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. Please favor me with a simple remedy for my chin. It has small white marks, just like water blisters. They are not filled with pus and do not hurt, but they make my chin look rough.

2. Also tell me what to do for red marks that appear on the forehead. They are usually, but once in a while I get them on my chin. Which one is the cause of the other? Can I do to make my skin a smooth fine grain?

3. What shall I do to increase the growth of my eyelashes? HAZEL.

1. It may be that the white marks are imprisoned blackheads. These are what are known as milia and are small collections of sebaceous matter, which have been caught under the epidermis and have dried into hard masses. They can be removed by pricking them with a sterile needle and pressing out the contents. After this treatment the affected part of the skin should be bathed with an antiseptic. If this description does not apply to the marks on your chin, you should consult a skin specialist and have him prescribe proper treatment.

2. As soon as you notice a pimple forming, you should bathe it frequently with a piece of absorbent cotton dipped into very hot water. Bathe the skin gently and use the Fosatti Cream for Pimples, the recipe for which is given in answer to "Anxious" on this page.

To improve the condition of your skin you should not fail to cleanse it every night, before retiring, with an agreeable soap, warm water and a clean washcloth. Rinse it well, and when the skin is thoroughly dry rub in the cream for which recipe is here given:

Kentucky Cold Cream

Rosewater	4 ounces
Almond oil	4 ounces
Spermaceti	1 ounce
White wax	1 ounce

Add the rosewater slowly, so that it will mix well into it, and after ten minutes remove what grease remains with a soft cloth.

Daily exercise in the fresh air, plenty of sleep, sufficient water, moderate eating of nourishing food all tend to produce a healthy and attractive complexion.

3. To increase the growth of the eyelashes apply melted vaseline to them daily. Be careful that none of it gets into the eyes.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chesta Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her Easy Recruit Problems and Difficulties by Letter at any time

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

A WEDDING RECEPTION

AFTER a wedding there is usually a reception, at which the bride and groom receive their friends. To be sure, the mother and father of the bride are the hostess and host, as they issue the invitations; but the reception is given to the newly wedded pair.

If you know the details of a reception given to a debutante you will know how to plan one for the wedded pair. It is almost the same. A caterer will take charge of the wedding breakfast or dinner, and to him it is best to give the arrangement of the menu. He will generally supply the flowers for the table if you wish, but more extensive decorations are given in charge of a florist. Many brides like to decorate the home themselves. If you are one who likes to put this last bit of sentiment into the home, have your bridesmaids assemble and help you in the work.

Green leaves, flowers, bought by the dozen, and smilax and asparagus are excellent for home decoration.

Place on a table, where every one will see them, many white boxes filled with wedding cake, for the guests to have when they depart. Also there should be provision for the cards of the guests. This can be in the form of a tray in a conspicuous place, or it can be held by a butler.

The parents and the bride and groom, together with the wedding party, receive the guests in the drawing room. The bride throws back her veil and is privileged to kiss the near relatives and friends. The guests first greet the mother and father, who should be near the entrance. Then the maid of honor and bridesmaids are greeted, and if any guest is not known, his name should be ascertained by one of the receiving party and be introduced.

When congratulations are extended to the groom and the bride is given all good wishes for her future, there should be a dignified acceptance and thanks. The bride should introduce any of her friends to her husband in a gracious manner.

Not until the last guest has come should the bride leave. That is usually within the time set for the reception on the cards. Of course, the wedding party has been in the dining room before the guests have arrived from the church.

It is the pleasure of the bride to cut the wedding cake and to accept any toasts that are drunk to her. This may be done in pure water, which is just as good as any wine. The main thing is the sincere spirit back of the ceremony.

The bride's father receives with the mother for a little time. He is then allowed to leave and to look over the different parts of the home and to see that everything is going smoothly.

After the reception draws to a close the bride should leave, and, with her mother or one of her best friends, go to her room and don her traveling suit for the wedding journey.

She should not forget to give a loving goodby to her father and mother, who have had the work of the wedding and who can never be replaced.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

A Girl's Wraps

DEAR Mrs. Adams:

What should be done with a girl's wraps when a man takes her to the restaurant?

They may be checked at the cloakroom or she can throw them over the back of the chair and keep her gloves on her lap. Very often there is an empty chair at the table, on which the wraps may be placed.

Leaving Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When one is a stranger in a town and several women have called on her and left their cards, is it proper for her when calling on them to leave her card?

Please describe what is the proper kind of cards for married women to use.

U. F.

Yes, and if you and your hostess are married women you should leave two of your husband's cards as well. If you call frequently on these women it is not necessary to leave cards every time. You should still leave two of your husband's cards, however, if your call is made in return for any entertainment to which he has been asked.

A married woman's visiting card does not differ in form from the cards used by an unmarried woman. Her husband's full name, with "Mrs." prefixed to it, appears on the card. Her address is written in the lower right-hand corner, and, if she has any one day or days that she has set aside to receive her friends, she has the names of the days written on the lower left-hand corner of her card.

Received No Announcement

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it necessary to send a bride a gift when one received no announcement from her? X. Y. Z.

It is not necessary to send a gift, but if one is a great friend of the bride's or groom's it is quite proper to send the bride a gift.

Railroad Fare

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please answer me the following question: If a gentleman asks a lady from a nearby town to go with him to the opera, should he be proper for him to pay her railroad fare?

A. B. C.

It is quite proper for him to do so. He should send her a railroad ticket and not wait until she arrives in the city and then refund the money.

A Party Call

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly explain in your valuable columns how soon after taking a girl to a party should her escort call on the party girl?

The escort does not owe a party call to the girl whom he took to the party, but he should call on his hostess within two weeks after the date of the entertainment at her home.

Keeping One's Gloves On

Dear Mrs. Adams.

1. Is it proper to keep on one's gloves while eating ice cream at a public parlor? Or while making an informal call in the afternoon?

2. When at a friend's house, is it necessary to rise when the maiden enters the room?

3. When eating ice cream in a public place, is it proper to take the water by means of a straw? RITA.

1. One may do as she pleases about removing her gloves while eating ice cream or while calling informally.

2. Yes.

3. Drink the water from the glass and not through a straw.

Sending Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams:

When sending an invitation to commencement exercises for a family who has all friends of my family, should the invitation be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Smith and family, or to the Misses Smith? ANXIOUS.

Your invitation should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, another to the Misses Smith and the third to the Messrs. Smith. All three are then inclosed in one large envelope, which is addressed to Mrs. John M. Smith.

The Prefix "Miss"

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly inform me if the prefix "Miss" is proper before an 18-year-old girl's name on her card which she inclosed with an invitation to commencement exercises? A SENIOR.

Yes.

A Duty Call

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I was invited to and attended an at-home where four women entertained, three of whom only called on me. Should I return to the said three women and will it be proper for me to call on the fourth also?

BROWN EYES.

You should call on all hostesses, but unless your new acquaintances in your town call on you do not extend them an invitation to your entertainment.

To Know Him Better

Dear Mrs. Adams.

If a young woman after being introduced to a man feels she would like to know him better, is it proper to ask him to call or should he make this advance?

It is quite proper for a girl to extend an invitation to a man to call on her. She can arrange to have there one or four of her best girl and men friends to come to her home on a certain evening and she can invite this particular man to come at the same time. This would be very much better than inviting him to call on her alone.

Anxious to Win Her Love

Dear Mrs. Adams:

I am in love with a girl in another city, but she does not care for me in the least. As I answer my letters, but this is because I would like to write for the girl. Please tell me what to do to win her love. NEAL.

The girl's pride has been hurt, no doubt, by your treatment of her, and if you had no good reason for not writing to her you should have overcome the treatment you are getting. However, little misunderstandings will occur and by tact and patience they can very often be done away with. Write her a very kind, sincere, apologetic note to her girl friend, if not, you should do this. If she refuses to accept your apology, you will have to give up for a while and then try again.

At the Bride's Reception

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it necessary for one to remain at a bride's reception until the bride and groom depart? F. G.

It is not necessary to remain until the bride departs. After one has extended congratulations to the bride and groom one may go to the dining room for refreshments and then go away. Or he may depart immediately after offering congratulations.

Mourning Apparel

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly tell me what is the proper mourning for a man to wear after the death of his wife?

For first mourning, complete suits of black, with white linen, black lusterless silk neckties, dull black leather shoes, black gloves, crape links of black enamel and a hat banded with crepe are the rule.

For second mourning, if it is adopted, gray or black clothes, black-and-white silk neckties, gray gloves and white or black-and-white linen are the proper articles.

Acknowledging an Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly tell me what is the proper way to reply to an invitation written on a visiting card?

Such an invitation is acknowledged in the third person. Use note paper for the purpose.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

MORE ABOUT STEPMOTHERS.

THE three letters which follow I print almost unchanged. I believe all will be read with interest and I hope they may call forth further communications on the same subject:

"I would like to say a few words to you on the subject of the stepmother. I am just a plain working girl, 18 years old. I have had a stepmother since I was 7. She has a son five years younger than I am and he has always had the choice of everything, while I have had to take what I could get. If I ever had anything given to me which he wanted it was taken away from me.

"At the age of 11 the humane officer forbid my stepmother ever to strike me again and I have on my face a scar I shall carry for life where she threw something at me once.

"When I was 14 she took me out of school and told my father that I was big enough to work. I wouldn't have minded it so much if it had been really necessary, but my father was earning $85 a week and I thought that was sufficient to support a family of four. My father didn't say anything about it, so as long as I had to earn my living I thought I might as well do it for myself, so I left home. I have never been to my father's house since and I have never had to ask him for a cent towards my support. I have done several different things and am working as a maid now. At the end of the month I get my $20 clear to do as I please with, and I wish to add that the last three and a half years have been the happiest of my life."

Had a Bitter Experience.

The second letter follows the same line:

"I am yielding to the temptation to drop you a line on the stepmother question. Although I must admit they cannot all be alike, I have personally had such a bitter experience at the hands of one that I never can help feeling sorry for any child who misses the love and care of an own mother.

"No one who has not been through the ordeal can have the slightest conception of the heartaches some stepchildren must endure, or how entirely bare their little lives are of love and sympathy. Nor can they know what perfectly fiendish things a wicked stepmother will stoop to do to wreak her hatred on the children of the first wife.

"If I could write the story of the lives led by us two children who were left motherless at the age of 2½ and 5½ years it would make many persons wonder how such things could possibly take place, year after year, without coming to the attention of some one who could interfere.

"Although a stepmother's position may not be an enviable one, still she knows what she is taking upon herself when she marries a widower with a family, and I fail to find any excuse for her mistreatment of the little ones who are there through no fault of theirs. Most small children and some older ones can be conquered a great deal more easily by kindness than by harshness, and since cruelty leaves an indelible stain and sting, surely love and kindness will leave their mark as well."

Like an Own Mother.

After these rather somber letters the third letter is welcome as striking a more cheerful note:

"I have heard many unkind things said about stepmothers and I have known a few who were not particularly devoted to their stepchildren. But if I spoke from my own experience I could say nothing but good.

"My own mother died when I was a baby and my brother only a couple of years older and within two or three years our father married again. From that moment until her death I never felt the difference between her and any own mother I ever knew. She was dear to us in every way and, while she ruled us wisely and made us obey and punished us when we needed it, she always made us feel that her love was there, even when she had to make us suffer for our naughtiness.

"When our little half-brother came when she had been married a couple of years she made us feel that he belonged to us, too, and I could not see as he grew older that she treated him any better than she treated us. We all shared alike.

"I lived at home until my marriage when I was 22 years old and I don't know how I could have received more devotion and tenderness from my own mother than I had from my stepmother. She helped me with my trousseau, she shared all my hopes and plans during my engagement, and my early married life; she was with me when my babies were born. And when, only a few years ago, she went home to her rest—my father died years ago—my brother and I mourned with the desolation very own children must feel."

More Kindness than Cruelty.

I am glad I have this third letter to offset the other two, for they give a depressing idea of the relationship between stepmothers and stepchildren. Personally I have known both kinds, but I really think my experience has been that there is more kindness than cruelty.

One stepmother: I recall whose stepchildren adored her and who was worthy of all the love that could be bestowed upon her. True, she had no children of her own, but even if she had I cannot believe she would have been unkind or unjust to the others. Another I knew who had two stepchildren and two of her own was such a tender and devoted parent that when she died, after they had all reached womanhood, the stepchildren begged the privilege of paying every expense connected with her last illness and burial. "We have never had the chance of doing anything which would begin to show how dearly we loved mother and how much we appreciate all the goodness she has shown us throughout our lives," said one to me through her tears. "This seems so little and yet it is all we can do!"

These are only examples and I could match them with many more, even although I do not for a moment question the statements contained in the first two letters I print. I also indorse the statement of the writer of the second epistle who says that when a woman marries a widower with a family she knows what she is about. If a woman feels that her jealousy of her predecessor is such that she is bound to dislike the children of the first marriage she has no business to make it. I have known of women who made it a condition of their acceptance of the father of a family that the children should be banished and that the wives should not have to live in the house with their stepsons and stepdaughters. My opinion of a woman of this kind is on par with that I hold of the father who will accede to such a request and turn his own flesh and blood out of the house at the bidding of any woman alive.

Also, I may add that I believe that a woman who would suggest such treatment of helpless children, who, to quote my correspondent again, "are there through no fault of theirs," is the sort who would not hesitate to be unkind to them when they happened to cross her will in any way, to interfere with her work or pleasure, or to take anything for themselves which she wanted to bestow upon her own offspring.

Subjected to Harsh Criticism.

Still, let me go back to my defense of stepmothers. They may deserve many of the unkind things that are said about them—that is, some of them may—but there can be no doubt that much blame is bestowed upon them which they do not merit. The old proverb: "Give a dog a bad name and hang him!" fits their case. Certain bad stepmothers have put their class into a bad eminence and all are credited with the faults of the few. Even their good is evil spoken of and the discipline which no one would notice if exercised upon their own children is considered harshness and cruelty if they let their stepchildren have the benefit of it.

Yet what is the stepmother to do? She knows she is subjected to much harsher criticism than an own mother would be and at the same time she understands that if she is too indulgent and her stepchildren turn out badly her lack of training will be blamed. Whichever way she does she is sure to be condemned by some one. I am reminded of the old story of the drunken husband's soliloquy on his way home.

"If my wife's sittin' up when I get home I'll beat her! What business has she sittin' up till 3 come home?" Then, after a few moments' cogitation: "If my wife's gone to bed when I get home I'll beat her! What business she's got goin' to bed before I get home?"

Placed in Hard Position.

Two conversations I had on this topic with friends within the last few weeks were brought to my mind by the letters above quoted.

"My heart aches for that poor child," said an elderly woman of a girl of 14. "Just see the way she dresses and wears her hair. It is frizzed up until she looks disreputable and she wears her skirts to her heels when a child of that age ought to be clothed like a child and not like a grown woman. But I suppose it's all that can be expected from her stepmother. If she were the girl's own mother it would be different."

By one of those queer coincidences which come about now and then the stepmother in question called on me the next day, and naturally enough we fell to talking about daughters and she poured out her mind to me on the girl of the day.

"There is Nannie, for instance," she said, [Nannie is the stepdaughter]. "To my old fashioned eyes she looks perfectly absurd with her skirts that length and her hair frizzed up like a burrah's nest—what ever that may be. But when I try to make her see how ridiculous it all is she says that all the other girls dress like that and I can see she considers me a back number. Of course, if she were my own child I would put my foot down and say she must dress as I think best, but you can imagine the things that would be said about me then as a harsh stepmother. So I just let matters go and hope she may learn wisdom as she gets older."

There is the case. The mother is blamed for her conduct because she is not dealing with the stepchild as she would with her own, and yet all the while she is crying on the side of overindulgence, and she knows she would not be called harsh for rewarding her darling child with treatment that will never be taken as a matter of course with her stepdaughter.

Either way it is a hard position. We have heard something dealing with the stepmother. Can some one give us equally interesting accounts of the attitude of the stepchildren toward the parents? What is their standing and is the stepmother the only one to blame? Are all stepfathers impeccable or do they, too, possess faults in their relations with their stepchildren?

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

Paper Dolls for Small Girl.

"I HAVE seen several requests for paper dolls. I should be glad to send my supply to some little girl who has none to play with. I will also give a recipe for good, easily made custard: One egg, beaten light; half cup sugar, half cup milk, into which has been stirred a tablespoon of flour, tablespoon of melted butter, lemon flavoring to taste. Part of the grated rind and the juice of one lemon may be used instead. This quantity makes one custard. If any one has measures of fiction or silk pieces to dispose of, I should appreciate them, as I am still unable to get about much after an operation.

"C. J."

There is no doubt that there will be more than one little girl—or her representative—putting in a claim for these paper dolls. I already hear the lament of the many disappointed children, since, after all, only one can be blessed by the gift. As to the custard, while I am glad to give the recipe, I would like to ask the cooking contingent among the Cornerites if they have as good results with custards in which flour or cornstarch is used as in those which depend upon eggs alone for thickening. Frankly, I have not. To my taste there is always a flavor of the flour which makes the thickened custard decidedly inferior to the other. I grant all that can be said about the price and scarcity of eggs, but I would rather have one custard without flour than half a dozen with it. Still, I am quite likely to be in the minority, and I would like the opinion of other housekeepers. Does the use of the lemon in flavoring make a difference? My experience has been principally with custards flavored with vanilla. The request of this correspondent for magazines of fiction and for pieces of silk will be put on file and I hope it may receive a prompt and generous answer. She has certainly paid her way by the offer of the paper dolls and the gift of the recipe.

Some Plants to Exchange.

"I want to exchange seventy-five lovely 2 year old privet hedge plants for potted plants, violet plants, and ivy leaf plants. Will some one who is in the gardening line make the exchange?

Miss, J. H."

This request I hope may meet a reply. Now that plants can be sent by parcel post, the expense of transporting them is not severe, and I trust the exchange may be arranged before the best period for transplanting, etc., has gone by.

Trying to Start a Library.

"We are trying to establish a little library in this rural community. Of books there is no end, but of good books alas! there is a great dearth. Knowing that many such good books are stored away and not in use, it seemed to me those might perhaps be philanthropic individuals who would rather the volumes would be performing their great mission than lying idle. We would be truly thankful for any and all contributions of books of merit and would gladly acknowledge them. Only those who are not near libraries can realize the great need of good books to those who are unable to buy and are not in a region where libraries are accessible. This is especially the case in rural communities. Cannot space be given to my appeal in order that this movement may be furthered without delay? You will have the gratitude of the public."

"Mrs. N. D."

This appeal touches me deeply, as I hope it may others.

A Contribution of Pieces.

"I have some pieces of cotton and wool and a few silk ones I could give. Your talk about children in today's paper should be read by every parent. It seems as if the mother is always blamed for the children's conduct and it seems a pity good mothers can't have a little help now and then from kind hearts without the sting of charity. If we can't help by deeds we can sometimes by thoughts and words. We try to teach our boys and girls to be honest and good and sometimes years of training are upset by some bad companion. Often children are found fault with for naughtiness when they need a doctor more than a scolding. My own 5 year old girl had her tonsils and adenoids removed and is better natured since then, sleeps better, and eats better.

R. R."

Thank you for your offer of the pieces. As the correspondents whose names you mention are already supplied, I print the offer, knowing it will be welcome to some of our readers. I am glad if the talk about children was of any help, and I agree with you that the children's naughtiness is sometimes due to physical causes. I have known improvement that seemed almost miraculous wrought by the removal of the tonsils and adenoids in young children and older boys and girls.

Gasoline for Bedbugs.

"Quite recently there have appeared requests for ways of exterminating bedbugs. While all of them may be good, I have never noticed a method which I consider so effective as the use of gasoline. Of course, it must be used with caution. It has the advantage over benzine that it evaporates more quickly and leaves no disagreeable odor. It may be poured right upon the mattress without the least injury, and the best way to clean the bed is to fill a small oil can, such as one has for oiling a sewing machine, and inject the gasoline into every crack and crevice. The user will find that it causes instant death to both insects and eggs. May I ask if there is some one among your readers who has an atlas of the world of not too remote a date? I am asking for this for a family of children, that they may use it at home to aid them with their school work. There are no reference works of any description in this home, and the family is unable to procure any. Such books would be used freely and greatly appreciated.

Mrs. B. C. W."

I trust the atlas and any other reference books which would be of service to a family of studious school children may be forthcoming for the benefit of this family. The gift will be felt well worth while by any one who has been added to get rid of bugs by this correspondent's advice. I know the gasoline is good, but I wish to repeat and emphasize the need of caution in its use. Never must it be employed in a room with a light or fire.

Makes Tough Fowl Tender.

"I have a recipe to give you for smothered chicken. After your chicken is dressed, carve it into regular frying size and have ready a skillet with about a tablespoonful of lard or butter; wipe the pieces of chicken dry and place them in the skillet and keep turning often, but do not brown. This process merely keeps the juice in the chicken. As the pieces are heated through lift them out and put into a stewpan with hot water enough to cover them. When the pieces are finished, put grease and all in stewpan, season with pepper and salt, and boil steadily and slowly until the chicken is done. The time for this depends upon its age. When tender lift out and cook either potatoes or dumplings in the gravy. If potatoes are used, lift them out when done and thicken the gravy with flour and water beaten smooth. If dumplings are cooked no thickening is necessary, as they do the work. The toughest kind of fowl is tender when cooked in this way.

Mrs. F. B. H."

This recipe is from a correspondent who sent us other good recipes. This method of smothering chicken is unfamiliar to me; the dish I know under that name is prepared in a different fashion, but this sounds as though it should be good. We are all grateful for any method by which a tough fowl can be made tender and appetizing.

Flower Seeds to Exchange.

"I love flowers and have several kinds of seeds some one might like as a partial exchange for plants. I will be only too glad to send the postage required for them. Perhaps there could be a little club arranged of flower lovers by which we could exchange seeds, and bulbs, and talks on flower culture. I just make the suggestion.

"Mrs. G. S."

I am sorry that the friend who offered the flowers you would like to have had given them away before your letter came, but I hope some one else may like to arrange an exchange with you, and in that hope I print your letter. I think it altogether probable that we have enough flower lovers in the Corner to make such a club as you suggest a pleasant thing, and if they will write to me giving their addresses, I will be glad to put them in touch with you. This is a good time of year to begin, when gardens are being made and plans are on foot for raising flowers.

Wants Graphophone for Invalid.

"I have just read a generous offer of some one to give a graphophone to some lover of music, and I hasten to apply for it. My wife loves music and flowers. Our good neighbors furnish the flowers, but we have no music. My wife has been a shut-in for nine years, and has been confined to her bed for about eight months. We are both old, and poor, and afflicted, but God has supplied all our needs through our good neighbors. There is nothing that could give her more pleasure than to have music in her lonely hours, and I would be glad to pay the expense of sending the graphophone. I can refer you to our pastor for the truth of my statements. G. of C. D."

Again I have to regret that the gift has been bestowed elsewhere, but I put your letter here because I feel sure there is another graphophone for your wife some where. Such loneliness as hers deserves to be cheered, and I trust you may soon find that there are other good neighbors for you in this world besides those that live close to you.

Bread That Never Fails.

"I can indorse the following recipes I send as good. The first one is for making bread that never fails. Soak one cake of fresh yeast in a half pint of water. Cook three medium sized potatoes in three pints of water, and when thoroughly cooked take from the water and mash fine. Put the water back on the stove and add to it to the scalding hot; in a bowl put one tablespoon of flour, one of sugar, three teaspoons of salt, and one of shortening, if you wish, but not absolutely necessary. Mix this with a little cold water, so it will not form lumps, and stir in the scalding potato water; set to cool, and when cool enough, stir in your yeast. Do this in the morning, when you are doing your morning work. In the evening thicken this and make a medium stiff batter and beat it well. Allow to set until morning, and make into a dough and knead thoroughly. Let it rise until light, . . . your baking pans, say size loaves you may prefer—I like them small—and make five loaves from this amount. Allow to raise again, and bake in a hot oven that is a good even heat. It is no trouble at all after you make it once.

"Here is my direction for making pie crust: Six tablespoons of flour, two tablespoons of shortening; mix the flour, lard, and about one teaspoon of salt together and dampen with the coldest water you can get. It never fails.

"Another that I can recommend as successful is jelly roll. I tried for three years before I got a recipe that I could do a thing with: Five eggs, three-fourths cup of granulated sugar, two teaspoons baking powder, any flour you may prefer. Beat the eggs and sugar together, then stir in the flour a little at a time. It takes about one cup of flour. Last of all, add the baking powder and vanilla or other flavor, and beat hard. Put in a greased pan that has a thin paper in it, with a little flour sprinkled over it. Watch closely, as it cooks quickly, on account of so many eggs. Lay on a dampened cloth, spread with jelly, roll up, and wrap the cloth up around it, and allow to cool that way. This is a perfect recipe.

Mrs. H. A. S."

Thank you for these recipes, as well as for the others you have sent. We have always Cornerites struggling to get a good bread recipe, and I foresee that this one will be more popular even than the others. Let me beg those housekeepers who like the recipes to cut them out and put them away safely, so that in a few weeks I may not receive a chorus of lamentations over the loss of the instructions and a plea to have them repeated.

Two Pairs of Crutches.

"I have seen a request in the Corner for a pair of crutches, and I write to say that I have two pairs of crutches for which I have no use, and would be only too glad to give them away to some one who needs them and will send for them. One pair of them was not used a week.

Mrs. T. A. S."

I wish this correspondent had given some intimation of the length of the crutches, or if they were of the kind which can be extended to suit any height. I feel sure she will be glad to give it to any one who wishes to accept her kind offer.

Student of English.

"Having been in this country only four years I am striving to learn not only the English language but also all that a man in civil life ought to know. For instance, I need to buy a reference book or an encyclopedia which I most of all wish to have. Having had some education in my native land I think I can make good use of such a work if any of your readers would be kind enough to send one that he or she would not mind giving away. I am willing to pay express charges and to tell the giver who I am and my intentions for the future.

"STUDENT."

This is a request I would be pleased to see granted and yet I doubt if an encyclopedia would supply quite the knowledge "Student" wishes. Will not some one able to advise him write for his address and either send him such a book as will be of real help to him or tell him what to do to prepare himself for citizenship?

ATLANTA'S NEGLECTED DUTY TO ITS WORKING WOMEN

UNLESS any person has actually lived the way we do, he cannot possibly have the slightest conception of what it really is. Books do not tell it, and statistics cannot prove it. Actual experience is what one needs.

"You can have not the remotest idea of the wretched loneliness, the utter isolation of a young woman working hard all day and then going home to her tiny furnished room at night."

That is what one working girl says. She lives in New York, the biggest and loneliest city in America; but Atlanta women who have studied what is generally known as "the working girl's problem" say that a great part of what she says is true of this city.

They say that a working girl, who comes to a city of 250,000 population, under present conditions has one chance in a hundred to make one friend out of the 250,000. If she makes two or three, she is fortunate.

Y. W. C. A. Building.

"The one solution to the problem is a new Y. W. C. A. building that will cost about $200,000," said Miss Alice Wingo, secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, in talking of this condition last week.

"The little autobiography one working woman has written in New York, applies here. In fact it's particularly true in Atlanta.

"There really is no provision here for recreation for working women. And certainly there should be. Take the girls living at our Y. W. C. A. home. I know that some of them went to one or two good shows last year, and a few to cheaper theatrical amusements. But most of them spend their evenings in studying or reading.

"We ought to have a big Y. W. C. A. building where we could have moving pictures of the good sort, and dancing, too.

"One of the evils Atlanta has got to combat in the future is the cheap dance hall. They have it in all big cities, and it's sure to come here.

"One of the best ways to stave it off is by arranging for dances under good conditions.

"There ought to be some way by which the young men and women could meet and be together. But the cheap boarding house is no place to encourage companionship. Really, the only thing is a Y. W. C. A. building.

"Few people realize the loneliness and the unhappiness of the girl who earns a small salary, and has no home but a cheap boarding house.

"Only last week the New York Times printed the experiences of a working woman in that big city, which has aroused the attention of everyone interested in sociological work—and everyone who has any humanity. I wish all the people in Atlanta could read it, because Atlanta particularly needs to take it to heart.

An Unanswered Need.

"Here is a paragraph that is striking enough." She pointed to a copy of the New York paper. "Read that."

It began:

"Why not spend just a small fraction of the time, energy and money that is being ungrudgingly given to 'rescue' work in making the life of the honest, hard-working, self-respecting, lonely working girl a little more happy, healthy and endurable?

"I recall one evening," continued the writer, "not so very long ago, when I returned to my room at about 6:30 after an unusually difficult day at the office. I was tired and had eaten a solitary supper at a cheap restaurant, and intended to go to my room and rest.

"Some one right over me was thumping up and down like mad, and a rocking chair at my left, (in the adjoining room, where every movement could be heard), was creaking crazily to and fro. Rest was impossible. I tried to read and sew. The gas flickered and flared; that was impossible.

"So I gave myself over to pleasant reflection, and pleasant indeed it was not.

"Finally I jumped up, seized my hat and coat, and bolted for the door. It was then about 9 o'clock. I fancied the physical motion of walking and the open air would drive away my discontented and unhealthy thoughts. I kept on going until I was exhausted, then I turned back and started slowly to retrace my steps. When I finally got to my room, too tired to try solving any more problems that day, I just tumbled into bed and sobbed myself asleep. This is only one of the thousands of unhappy incidents in the life of the lonely young woman in a big city."

The Cheap Lodging House.

"Isn't that a picture that seems true in every line?" said Miss Wingo. "Don't you know that many girls here could write of the same experience? Here's another paragraph even more striking. It shows that many times there is no good way for young men and young women to meet. A Y. W. C. A. building would change that state of affairs."

"A few weeks ago," explained the writer in the Times, "I was living in one of those little cells for which I paid $3 a week. I nearly froze to death during cold weather, and the water in my pitcher warnings was actually frozen.

"I had to cleanse my face with cold cream. Hot water for a bath was a luxury unknown. One evening two girl friends called on me. We sat and talked with our hats and coats on. Then the 'B' and a young man, the 'beau' of one of my girl friends, called to escort her home.

"The landlady came up and told me there was a man downstairs. I sat 'Can't he come up?'—'Come up!' she reiterated loudly. 'Not in my house. Nothing like that here. I run a decent house for decent people.' With that she self-righteously tossed her ugly head and marched out of the room.

"There we were, three girls all dressed, even to hats and coats. She knew we were all business girls, yet she had the insolence to make such a remark, although I believe she knew in her dense head that her remark was senseless and groundless.

"But she considered she had the right to insult me, because I was a young woman, alone, living in her rooming-house, and for the privilege of paying her $3, I had to stand insult and impudence. For this female dragon provided no parlor for her roomers to entertain their friends; so we three girls had to go downstairs and stand in the hall and talk, as it was too wet and cold to walk around the streets, and yet this particular young man was one of the most harmless of the male species I have ever known.

"After shifting from one foot to the other several times and being very tired of standing, some one suggested that we either go to a moving picture theater or a cafe to have a drink. And there you have it."

Their Loneliness.

"Now read the rest of this" added Miss Wingo. "It is worth heeding."

"You say," continued the writer in the Times, "Why should you be so lonely? Why cannot you have friends as well as we?" That sounds reasonable, but how are we to meet either young men or young women? The people with whom we work are so absorbed in their own homes and affairs and have so many friends, cousins and other relatives, that it never occurs to them that their next-door neighbor is dying with loneliness, and they never seem to think of inviting us to their homes.

"The only chance is to scrape up acquaintances with the young men and young women that live the same lives we do; the young woman who has the room next to ours, the young man who has the room across the hall, and in many instances we wish we had never made the acquaintances and our last state is worse than the first.

"Or again, it is easy to make acquaintances with people who attend restaurants alone and cast a longing glance at your table, as if to say: 'I'm just as lonely as you are, why can't we eat together?'

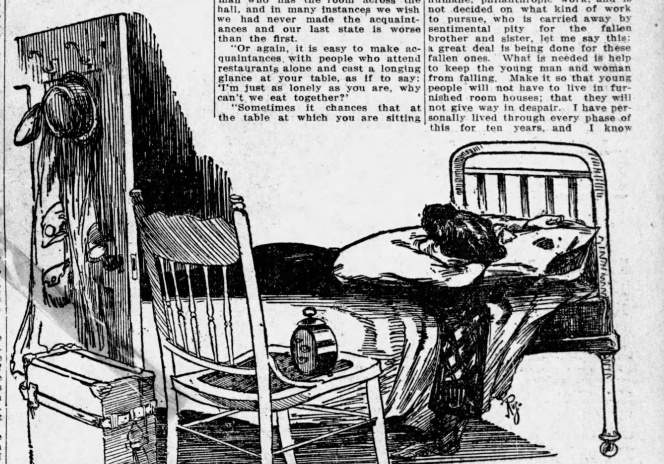
"Sometimes it chances that at the table at which you are sitting alone, a young man will sit also alone, and after requesting the salt, the pepper, the catsup, horseradish and the mustard he will tell you what a lonely place New York is and more often than not you will leave the restaurant together.

"I know so many girls who would be grateful if some one showed the least bit of interest in them. Girls who work very hard every day of the year, who cannot afford to get a new dress except once a year; who never go to a theater; never go to a party, and yet they do not fall. How they would appreciate it if some of these favors and kindnesses were showered on them! How it would encourage, spur them on! How they would continue with redoubled vigor and a new lease on life, as it were, with just a little attention and consideration.

"I think a good girl is more deserving of help, interest and kindness than one who has fallen. Any man or woman who wants to help better conditions, who wants to do humane, philanthropic work, and is not decided on what kind of work to pursue, who is carried away by sentimental pity for the fallen brother and sister, let me say this: a great deal is being done for these fallen ones. What is needed is help to keep the young man and woman from falling. Make it so that young people will not have to live in furnished room houses; that they will not give way in despair. I have personally lived through every phase of this for ten years, and I know whereof I speak."

"Don't you think—doesn't everyone in Atlanta think?" concluded Miss Wingo, "that something should be done here? And can you suggest anything better than a Young Woman's Christian association building?"

"Receive visitors in your room?" she exclaimed. "Impossible."



The despair of loneliness.

"A Wasted Day," a Short Story by Richard Harding Davis

WHEN its turn came, the private secretary, somewhat apologetically, laid the letter in front of the Wisest Man in Wall street.

"From Mrs. Austin, probation officer, court of general sessions," he explained. "Wants a letter about Spear. He's been convicted of theft. Comes up for sentence Tuesday."

"Spear?" repeated Arnold Thorndike.

"Young fellow, stenographer, used to do your letters last summer going in and out on the train."

The great man nodded. "I remember. What about him?"

"Went on the loose; had with him about five hundred dollars belonging to the firm; he's with Isaacs & Sons, now, shoe people on Sixth avenue. Met a woman, and woke up without any money. The next morning he offered to make good, but Isaacs called in a policeman. When they looked into it, they found the boy had been drunk. They tried to withdraw the charge, but he'd been committed. Now, the probation officer is trying to get the judge to suspend sentence. A letter from you, sir, would—"

It was evident the mind of the great man was elsewhere. Young men who, drunk or sober, spend the firm's money on women who disappeared before sunrise, did not appeal to him.

Spear had a letter from us when he left, didn't he?" he asked. "What he has developed into, since he left us—" he shrugged his shoulders. The secretary withdrew the letter, and slipped another in its place.

As his car slid downtown on Tuesday morning the mind of Arnold Thorndike was occupied with such details of daily routine as the purchase of a railroad, the Japanese loan, the new wing of his art gallery, and an attack that morning, in his own newspaper, upon his pet trust. But his busy mind was not too occupied to return the salutes of the traffic policemen who cleared the way for him. Or, by some genius of memory, to recall the fact that it was on this morning young Spear was to be sentenced for theft.

It was characteristic of the great man to act quickly. "Stop at the court of general sessions," he commanded. What he proposed to do would take but a few minutes. A word, a personal word from him to the district attorney, or to the judge, would be enough.

Out of the sunshine Mr. Thorndike stepped into the gloom of an echoing rotunda. With a deprecatory laugh, he explained why he had come. But the outburst of approbation he had anticipated did not follow.

The district attorney ran his finger briskly down a printed card. "Henry Spear," he exclaimed. "that's your man. Court III, Judge Fallon Andrews is in that court." He walked to the door of his private office. "Andrews!" he called.

"Mr. Thorndike is interested in Henry Spear, coming up for sentence in Part III this morning. Wants to speak for him. Take him over with you."

The district attorney shook hands quickly, and retreated to his private office. Mr. Andrews took out a cigaret and, as he crossed the floor, lit it.

"Come with me," he commanded. Mr. Andrews led him to an office, bare and small, and offered him a chair, and handed him a morning newspaper.

Mr. Thorndike refused the newspaper. "I thought I was going to see the judge," he suggested.

"Court doesn't open for a few minutes yet," said the assistant district attorney. "Judge is always late, anyway."

Mr. Thorndike suppressed an exclamation. He wanted to protest, but his clear mind showed him that there was nothing against which, with reason, he could protest. Next time he would send a clerk. But he was not without a sense of humor, and the situation as it now was forced upon him struck him as amusing. He laughed good-naturedly and reached for the desk telephone.

"May I use this," he asked. He spoke to the Wall St. Office. He explained he would be a few minutes late. He directed what should be done if the market opened in a certain way. He gave rapid orders on many different matters, asked to have read to him a cablegram he expected from Petersburg, and one from Vienna.

"They answer each other," was his final instruction. "It looks like peace."

Mr. Andrews with genial patience had remained silent. Now he turned upon his visitors. A Levantine, burly, unshaven and soiled, towered truculently above him.

"You gotta hell of a nerve to come to see me," he commented cheerfully.

"Was it you," demanded young Andrews, in a puzzled tone, "or your brother who tried to knife me?"

"Get out!" said young Andrews, "and don't show your face here—"

The door slammed upon the flying Greek.

A kindly-eyed, sad woman with a basket on her knee smiled upon Andrews with the familiarity of an old acquaintance.

"Is that woman going to get a divorce from my son," she asked, "now that he's in trouble?"

"Now that he's in Sing Sing?" corrected Mr. Andrews. "I hope so! She deserves it. That son of yours, Mrs. Bernard," he declared emphatically, "is no good!"

The brutality shocked Mr. Thorndike. For the woman he felt a thrill of sympathy, but at once saw that it was superfluous. From the secure and lofty heights of motherhood, Mrs. Bernard smiled down upon the assistant district attorney as upon a naughty child. She did not even deign a protest. She continued merely to smile. The smile reminded Thorndike of the smile on the face of a mother in a painting by Murillo he had lately presented to the chapel in the college he had given to his native town.

"That son of yours," repeated young Andrews, "is a leech. He's robbed you, robbed his wife. Best thing I ever did for you was to send him up the river."

The mother smiled upon him beseechingly.

"Could you give me a pass?" she said.

Young Andrews flung up his hands and appealed to Thorndike.

"Isn't that just like a mother?" he protested. "That son of hers has broken her heart, tramped on her, cheated her; hasn't left her a cent; and she comes to me for a pass, so she can kiss him through the bars! And I'll bet she's got a cake for him in that basket!"

The mother laughed happily; she knew now she would get the pass.

"Mothers," explained Mr. Andrews, from the depth of his wisdom, "are all like that; your mother, my mother. If you went to jail, your mother would be just like that."

Mr. Thorndike bowed his head pointedly. He had never considered going to jail, or, whether, if he did, his mother would bring him cake in a basket. Apparently there were many aspects and accidents of life not included in his experience.

Young Andrews sprang to his feet, and, with the force of a hose flushing a gutter, swept his soiled visitors into the hall.

"Come on," he called to the Wisest Man, "the court is open." At a door a tipstaff laid his hand roughly on the arm of Mr. Thorndike.

"That will do, Joe," called young Mr. Andrews, "he's with me." They entered the court and passed down an aisle to a railed enclosure in which were high oak chairs. Again, in his effort to follow, Mr. Thorndike was halted, but the first tipstaff came to his rescue. "All right," he signaled, "he's with Mr. Andrews."

Mr. Andrews pointed to one of the oak chairs. "You sit there," he commanded, "it's reserved for members of the bar, but it's all right. You're with me."

Distinctly annoyed, slightly bewildered, the banker sank between the arms of a chair. He felt he had lost his individuality. Andrews had become his sponsor. Because of Andrews he was tolerated. Because Andrews had a pull, he was permitted to sit as an equal among police-court lawyers. No longer was he Arnold Thorndike. He was merely the man with Mr. Andrews."

A court attendant beat with his palm upon the rail.

"Sit down!" whispered Andrews. "The judge is coming."

Mr. Thorndike sat down.

The court attendant droned loudly words Mr. Thorndike could not distinguish. There was a rustle of silk and from a door behind him the judge stalked past.

"Stand up!" he hissed. Mr. Thorndike did so.

After the court attendant had uttered more unintelligible words every one sat down, and the financier again moved hurriedly to the rail.

"I would like to speak to him now before he begins," he whispered. "I can't wait."

Mr. Andrews started in amazement. The banker had not believed the young man could look so serious.

"Speak to him, now?" exclaimed the district attorney. "You've got to wait till your man comes up. If you speak to the judge, now—" The voice of Andrews faded away in horror.

Not knowing in what way he had offended, but convinced that it was only by the grace of Andrews he had escaped a dungeon, Mr. Thorndike retreated to his arm chair.

The clock on the wall showed him that, already, he had given to young Spear one hour and a quarter. The idea was preposterous. No one better than himself knew what his time was really worth. In half an hour there was a board meeting; later he was to hold a post-mortem on a railroad; at every moment questions were being asked by telegraph, by cable, questions that involved the credit of individuals, of firms, of even the country. And the one man who could answer them was risking untold sums only that he might say a good word for an idle apprentice. Inside the railed enclosure a lawyer was reading a typewritten speech. He assured his honor that he must have more time to prepare his case. It was one of immense importance. The name of a most respectable business house was involved, and a sum of no less than nine hundred dollars. Nine hundred dollars! The contrast struck Mr. Thorndike's sense of humor full in the center. Unknowingly he laughed, and found himself as conspicuous as though he had appeared suddenly in his night clothes. The tipstaffs beat upon the rail, the lawyer he had interrupted uttered an indignant exclamation. Andrews came hurriedly toward him, and the young judge slowly turned his head.

"Those persons," he said, "who cannot respect the dignity of this court will leave it." As he spoke, with his eyes fixed on those of Mr. Thorndike, the latter saw that the young judge had suddenly recognized him. But the fact of his identity did not cause the young man to relax of the rebuke to halt unuttered. In even, icy tones, the judge continued: "And it is well they should remember that the law is no respecter of persons and that the dignity of this court will be enforced, no matter who the offender may happen to be." Andrews slipped into the chair beside Mr. Thorndike and grinned sympathetically.

"Sorry!" he whispered. "Should have warned you. We won't be long now," he added encouragingly. "As soon as this fellow finishes his argument, the judge'll take up the sentences. Your man seems to have other friends; Isaac and Son are here, and the typewriter firm who bought him; but what you say will help most. It won't be more than a couple of hours now."

"A couple of hours!" Mr. Thorndike reared inwardly.

"See that old lady in the front row?" he whispered. "That's Mrs. Spears. What did I tell you; mothers are all alike. She's not taken her eyes off you since court opened. She knows you're her one best bet."

Impatiently Mr. Thorndike raised his head. He saw a little, white-haired woman who stared at him. In her eyes was the same look he had seen in the eyes of men who, at times of panic, fled to him, beseeching, entreating, forcing upon him what was left of the wreck of their fortunes, if only he would save their honor.

"And here come the prisoners," Andrew whispered. "See Spear? Third man from the last."

A long line marched in front and rear, shuffled into the court room, and, as ordered, ranged themselves against the wall. Among them were old men and young boys, well-dressed, clever looking rascals, collarless tramps, fierce-eyed aliens, smooth-shaven, thin-lipped Broadwayards—and Spear.

Spear, with head hanging, with lips white and cheeks ashen, and his eyes heavy with shame.

Mr. Thorndike had risen, and, in farewell, was holding out his hand to Andrews. He turned, and across the courtroom the eyes of the financier and the stenographer met. At the sight of the great man, Spear flushed crimson, and then his look of despair slowly disappeared; and into his eyes there came incredulous hope and gratitude. He turned his head suddenly to the wall.

Mr. Thorndike stood irresolute and then sank back into his chair.

The first man in the line was already at the railing.

Other men followed, and in the fortune of each Mr. Thorndike found himself, to his surprise, taking a personal interest. It was as good as a play.

So great was his interest that he had forgotten the particular deference he had come to serve, until Speer stood almost at his elbow.

Thorndike turned eagerly to the judge and saw that he was listening to the rotund, gray, little man with beady, bird-like eyes who, as he talked, bowed and gesticulated. Behind him stood a younger man, a more modern edition of the other. He also bowed and, behind gold eyeglasses smiled ingratiatingly.

The judge nodded and, leaning forward, for a few moments fixed his eyes upon the prisoner.

"You are a very fortunate young man," he said. He laid his hand upon a pile of letters. "When you were your own worst friend, your real friends came to help you. These letters speak for you; your employers, whom you robbed, have pleaded with me in your favor. It is urged in your behalf that at the time you committed the crime for which you are found guilty you were intoxicated. In the eyes of the law that is no excuse. Some men can drink and keep their senses. It appears you cannot. When you drink you are a menace to yourself—and, as is shown by this crime, to the community. Therefore, you must not drink. In view of the good character, to which your friends have testified, and on the condition that you do not touch liquor, I will not sentence you to jail, but will place you in charge of the probation officer."

The judge leaned back in his chair and beckoned to Mr. Andrews. It was finished. Spear was free, and from different parts of the courtroom people were moving toward the door. Their numbers showed that the friends of the young man had been many. Mr. Thorndike felt a certain twinge of disappointment. Even though the result relieved and delighted him, he wished, in bringing it about, he had had some part. He was moving out of the railed enclosure when Andrews called him by name.

"His honor," he said impressively, wishes to speak to you."

"The law, Mr. Thorndike, is not vindictive," he said. "It wishes only to be just. Nor can it be swayed by wealth or political or social influences. But, when there is good in a man, I, personally, want to know it, and when you prove it yourself, of your standing in this city, come here to speak a good word for a man, we would stultify the purpose of the law if we did not listen. I thank you for coming, and I wish more of our citizens were as unselfish and as public spirited."

It was all quite over, and most embarrassing, but inwardly Mr. Thorndike glowed with pleasure.

The chief clerk and two bank messengers were waiting by the automobile with written calls for help from their office. They pounced upon the banker and almost lifted him into the car.

"There's still time!" panted the chief clerk.

"There is not!" answered Mr. Thorndike. His tone was rebellious, defiant. It carried all the authority of a spoiled child of fortune. "I've wasted most of this day," he declared, "and I intend to waste the rest of it. Andrews," he called, "jump in, and I'll give you a lunch at Sherry's."

RAFFLES—NEW AMATEUR CRACKSMAN SERIES

Le Premier Pas

BY E. W. HORNUNG

THAT night Raffles told me the story of his earliest crime.

The whisky tinkled, the syphon fizzed, the ice plopped home, and we seated there in his pajamas, with the inevitable cigarette, Raffles told me the story that I had given up hoping to hear. The windows were wide open; the sounds of Piccadilly floated in at first. Long before he finished, the last wheels had rattled, the last brawler was removed, we alone broke the quiet of the summer night.

"I had started in a hole. I ought really to have refused the invitation. Then we all went to the Melbourne Cup, and I had the certain winner that didn't win, and that's not the only way you can play the fool in Melbourne. It wasn't the steady old stager I am now, Bunny; my analysis was a confession in itself. But the others didn't know how hard up I was, and I swore they shouldn't. I tried the Jews, but they're extra fly out there.

"Then I thought of a kinsman of sorts, a second cousin of my father's, whom none of us knew anything about except that he was supposed to be in one or other of the colonies. If he was a rich man, well and good, I would work him; if not there would be no harm done. I tried to get on his tracks, and, as luck would have it, I succeeded (or thought I had) at the very moment when I happened to have a few days to myself. I was cut over on the hand, just before the big Christmas match, and couldn't have bowled a ball if they had played me. The surgeon who fixed me up happened to ask me if I was any relation of Raffles, of the National Bank, and the pure luck of it almost took my breath away. A relation who was a high official in one of the banks, who would finance me on my mere name—could anything be better?

"I made up my mind that this Raffles was the man I wanted, and was awfully sold to find next moment that he wasn't a high official at all. Nor had the doctor so much as met him, but had merely read of him in connection with a small sensation at the suburban branch which my namesake managed; an armed robber had been rather pluckily beaten off, with a bullet in him, by this Raffles, and the sort of thing was so common out there that this was the first I had heard of it! A suburban branch—my financier had faded into some excellent fellow with a billet to lose if he called his soul his own. Still a manager was a manager, and I said I would soon see whether this was the relative I was looking for, if he would be good enough to give me the name of that branch.

"I'll do more,' says the doctor. 'I'll get you the name of the branch he's been promoted to, for I think I heard they'd moved him up one already.'

"And the next day he brought me the name of the township of Yea, some fifty miles north of Melbourne; but, with the vagueness which characterized all his information, he was unable to say whether I should find my relative there or not.

"'Yea's a single name, and his initials are W. F.,' said the doctor, who was certain enough of the immaterial points. He left his old pad several days ago, but it appears he's not due at the new one till the new year. No doubt he'll go before then to take things over and settle in, so you'll find him up there and you might not. If I were you I should write.'

"'That'll lose two days,' said I, 'and maybe if he isn't there, for I'd grown quite keen on this up-country manager, and I felt that if I could get at him while the holidays were still on a little cricket-hospitality might help matters considerably.

"'Then,' said the doctor, 'I should get a quiet horse and ride. You needn't use that hand.'

"'But where can I get a horse?'

The doctor thought a moment.

"'I've a mare of my own that's as fat as butter for want of work,' said he. 'It would be a charity to me to sit on her back for a hundred miles or so, and then I should know you'd have no temptation to use that hand.'

"'You're far too good!' I protested.

"'You're A. J. Raffles,' he said.

"And if ever there was a prettier compliment, or a finer instance of even colonial hospitality, I can only say, Bunny, that I never heard of either."

He sipped his whisky, threw away the stump of his cigarette, and lit another before continuing.

"Well, I managed to write a line to W. F. with my own hand, which, as you will gather, was not very badly wounded.

"It was simply this third finger that was split and in splints. Next morning the doctor packed me off on a bovine beast that would have done for an ambulance.

"It was an interesting ride enough. The first thirty miles or so was a good metal road, but after Whittlesea it was a mere track over the hills; a track I often couldn't see and left entirely to the mare. In one place a whole forest of gums had been ring barked, and were just as high they had been painted white, without a leaf or a living thing for miles.

"And the first living thing I did meet was the sort to give you the creeps. It was a riderless horse coming full tilt through the brush, with the saddle twisted round, and the stirrup irons ringing. Without thinking, I had a shot at heading him with the doctor's mare, and blocked him just enough to allow a man who came galloping after to do the rest.

"'Thank ye, mister,' growled the man, a huge chap in a red checked shirt.

"'Been an accident?' said I, reining up.

"'Yes,' said he, scowling as though he defied me to ask any more.

"'And a nasty one,' I said, 'if that's blood on the saddle!'

"'Well, Bunny, I may be a blackguard myself, but I don't think I ever looked at a fellow as that chap looked at me. But I stared him out, and forced him to admit that it was blood on the twisted saddle, and after that he became quite tame. He told me exactly what had happened. A mate of his had been dragged under a branch, and had his nose smashed, but that was all; had sat tight after it till he dropped from loss of blood; another mate was with him back in the bush.

"As I've said already, Bunny, I wasn't the old stager that I am now—in any respect—and we parted good enough friends. He asked me which way I was going, and, when I told him, he said I should save seven miles, and get a good hour earlier to Yea, by striking off the track and making for a peak that we could see through the trees, and following a creek that I should see from the peak. Don't smile, Bunny! I began by saying I was a child in those days. Of course, the short cut was the long way round; and it was nearly dark when that unlucky mare and I saw the single street of Yea.

"I was looking for the bank when a fellow in a white suit ran down from a veranda.

"'Mr. Raffles?' said he.

"'Mr. Raffles!' said I, laughing as I shook his hand.

"'You're late.'

"'I was misdirected.'

"'That's all? I'm relieved,' he said. 'Do you know what they are saying? There are some brand new bushrangers on the road between Whittlesea and this—a second Kelly gang! They'd have caught a Tartar in you, eh?'

"'They would in you,' I retorted, and my tu quoque shut him up and seemed to puzzle him. Yet there was much more sense in it than in his compliment to me, which was absolutely pointless.

"'I'm afraid you'll find things pretty rough,' he resumed, when he had unstrapped my valise, and handed my reins to his man. 'It's lucky you're a bachelor like myself.'

"I could not quite see the point of this remark either, since, had I been married, I should hardly have sprung my wife upon him in this free-and-easy fashion. I muttered the conventional sort of thing, and then he said I should find it all right when I settled, as though I had come to graze upon him for weeks! 'Well,' thought I, 'these colonials do take the cake for hospitality!' And, still marveling, I let him lead me into the private part of the bank.

"'Dinner will be ready in a quarter of an hour,' said he as we entered. 'I thought you might like a tub first, and you'll find one ready in the room at the end of the passage. Sing out if there's anything you want. Your luggage hasn't turned up yet, by the way, but here's a letter that came this morning.'

"'Not for me?'

"'Yes; didn't you expect one?'

"'I certainly did not!'

"'Well, here it is.'

"And, as he lit me to my room, I read my own superscription out of the previous day—to W. F. Raffles!

"W. F. Raffles! We had mistaken each other for W. F. Raffles—for the new manager! I had not yet arrived, but I myself wonder we had conversed at cross-purposes. The only wonder was that we had not discovered our mutual mistake. How the other man would have laughed!

"But I—I could not laugh. By Jove, no, it was no laughing matter for me! I was dumb with horror, hot flash, without a tremor, but with the direst depression from my own single point of view. Call it cultured if you like, Bunny, but remember that I was in much the same hole as you've since been in yourself, and that I had counted on this W. F. Raffles even as you counted on A. J. I thought of the man with the beard—the riderless horse with the bloody saddle—the deliberate misdirection that had put me off the track and out of the way—and now the missing manager and the report of bushrangers at this end.

"I was in as big a hole as ever. What the devil was I to do? I doubt if I have sufficiently impressed upon you the absolute necessity of my returning to Melbourne in funds. As a matter of fact it was less the necessity than my own determination which I can truthfully describe as absolute.

"'Money I would have—but how? but how? was the thing the manager be open to persuasion—If I told him the truth? No; that would set us all scouring the country the rest of the night. Why should I tell him? Suppose I left him to find out his mistake? * * * would anything be gained? Bunny, I give you my word that I went in to dinner without a definite intention in my head, or one premeditated lie upon my lips. I should do the decent natural thing, and explain matters without loss of time; on the other hand, there was no hurry, I had not opened the letter, and could always pretend I had not noticed the initials; meanwhile something might turn up. I could wait a little and see. Temptation already was, but as yet the temptation was vague, and its very vagueness made me tremble.

"'Bad news, I'm afraid?' said the manager, when at last I sat down at his table.

"'A mere annoyance,' I answered—I do assure you—on the spur of the moment and nothing else. But my lie was told; my position was taken; from that moment on there was no retreat. By implication, without realizing what I was doing, I had already declared myself W. F. Raffles. Therefore, W. F. Raffles I would be, in that bank, for that night. And the devil teach me how to play the lie!'

Again he raised his glass to his lips—I had forgotten mine. His cigarette case caught the gas light as he handed it to me. I shook my head without taking my eyes from his.

"The devil played up," continued Raffles, with a laugh. "Before I tasted my soup I had decided what to do. I had determined to rob that bank instead of going to bed, and to be back in Melbourne for breakfast if the doctor's mare could do it. I would tell the old fellow that I had missed my way and been bushed for hours, as I easily might have been, and had never got to Yea at all. At Yea, on the other hand, the personation and robbery would ever after be attributed to a member of the gang that had waylaid and murdered the new manager with that very object. I ask you, was there ever a better get-out? And I saw it from the beginning—saw to the end before I had finished my soup!

"To increase my chances, the cashier, who also lived in the bank, was away over the holidays, had actually gone down to Melbourne to see us play; and the man who had taken my horse also waited at table; for he and his wife were the only servants, and they slept in a separate building. You may depend I ascertained this before we had finished dinner. Indeed, I was by way of asking too many questions (the most oblique and delicate was that which elicited my host's name, Ewbank), nor was I careful enough to conceal their drift.

"'Do you know,' said this fellow Ewbank, who was one of the downright sort, 'if it wasn't you, I should say you were in a funk of robbers? Have you lost your nerve?'

"'I hope not,' said I, turning jolly hot, I can tell you; 'but—well, it's not a pleasant thing to have to put a bullet through a fellow.'

"'No?' said he, coolly. 'I should enjoy nothing better, myself; besides, yours didn't go through.'

"'I wish it had!' I was smart enough to cry.

"And I emptied my glass; actually I did not know whether my wounded bank robber was in prison, dead, or at large!

"But, now that I had had more than enough of it, Ewbank would come back to the subject. He admitted that the staff was small; but as for himself he had a loaded revolver under his pillow all night, under the counter all day, and he was only waiting for his chance.

"Under the counter, eh?' I was ass enough to say.

"'Yes; so had you!'

"'Was I?' I was looking at me in surprise, and something told me that to say 'of course—I had forgotten'' would have been quite fatal, considering what I was supposed to have done. So I looked down my nose and shook my head.

"'But the papers said you had!' he cried.

"'Not under the counter,' said I.

"'But it's the regulation!'

"'For the moment, Bunny, I felt stumped, though I trust I only looked more superior than before, and I think I justified my look.

"'The regulation!' I said at length, in the most offensive tone at my command. 'Yes, the regulation would have you all dead men! My dear sir, do you expect your bank robber to let you reach for your gun in the place where he knows it's kept? I had mine in my pocket, and I got my chance by retreating from the counter with all visible reluctance.'

Ewbank stared at me, with open eyes and a five-barred forehead, then down came his fist on the table.

"Been an accident? said I, reigning up. 'Yes,' said he, scowling as though he dared me to ask any more."

"'By Jove! that was smart! Still,' he added, like a man who would not be in the wrong, 'the paper said the other thing, you know!'

"'Of course,' I rejoined, 'because they said what I told them. You wouldn't have had me advertise the fact that I had improved upon the bank's regulations, would you?'

"So that cloud rolled over, and, by Jove, it was a cloud with a golden lining! Ewbank got out his best brandy; he made me throw away the cigar I was smoking, and opened a fresh box. He was a convivial-looking party with a red mustache and a very humorous face, and from that moment I lajd myself out to attack him on his convivial flank. But he had a treble-seamed, hand-sewn head, and could have drunk me under the table ten times over.

"'All right,' I thought, 'you may go to bed sober, but you'll sleep like a timber yard!' And I threw half he cave me through the open window, when he wasn't looking.

"He did, however, become more and more genial as the evening advanced, and I had not much difficulty in getting him to show me round the bank at what was really an unearthly hour for such a proceeding. It was then we went to fetch the revolver before turning in. I kept him out of his bed another twenty minutes, and I knew every inch of the business premises before I shook hands with Ewbank in my room.

"You won't guess what I did with myself for the next hour. I undressed and went to bed. I haven't told you of half the tight places I was in during a conversation that ran into hours and became dangerously intimate forward the end. You can imagine them for yourself, and then picture me spread out on the bed, getting my second wind for the big deed of the night.

"Once more I was in luck, for I had not been lying there long before I heard my dear Ewbank snoring like a harmonium, and the music never ceased for a moment; it was as loud as ever when I crept out and locked my door behind me, as regular as ever when I stopped to listen at his. And I have still to hear the concert that I myself enjoyed much more. The good fellow snored me out of the bank, and was still snoring when I again stood and listened under his open window.

"Why did I leave the bank first? To catch and saddle the mare and tether her in a clump of trees close by, to have the means of escape nice and handy before I went to work. Pains and patience were required; I had to get my saddle without waking the man, and I was not used to catching horses in a horse paddock. Then I disturbed the poor mare, and I went back to the stables for a hatful of oats, which I left with her in the clump, hat and all.

"As the evil-disant new manager, I had been able, in the most ordinary course, to pump poor Ewbank about anything and everything connected with the working of the bank, especially in those twenty last invaluable minutes before turning in. And I had made a very natural thing of asking him where he kept, and would recommend me to keep, the keys at night. Of course I thought he would take them with him to his room; but no such thing; he had a dodge very like two of that. What it was doesn't much matter, but no outsider would have found those keys in a month of Sundays.

"I, of course, had them in a few seconds, and in a few more I was in the strongroom itself. I forgot to say that the moon had risen and was letting quite a lot of light into the bank.

"I had, however, brought a bit of candle with me from my room; and in the strongroom, which was down some narrow stairs behind the counter in the banking chamber, I had no hesitation in lighting it. There was no window down there, and, though I could no longer hear old Ewbank snoring, I had not the slightest reason to anticipate disturbance from that quarter.

"Well, there were heaps of gold in the safe, but I only took what I needed and could comfortably carry, not much more than a couple of hundred altogether. Well, you think me too cautious still, but I was insanely cautious then. And so it was that, just as I was ready to go, whereas I might have been gone ten minutes, there came a violent knocking at the outer door.

"Bunny, it was the outer door of the banking chamber!

"There was only one thing to be done. I must trust to the sound sleeping of Ewbank upstairs, open the door myself, knock the visitor down, or shoot him with the revolver I had been new chum enough to buy before leaving Melbourne, and make a dash for that clump of trees and the doctor's mare. My mind was made up in an instant, and I was at the top of the strongroom stairs, the knocking still continuing, when a second sound drove me back. It was the sound of bare feet coming along a corridor.

"My narrow stair was stone, I tumbled down it with little noise, and had only to push open the iron door, for I had left the keys in the safe. As I did so I heard a handle turn overhead, and thanked my gods that I had shut every single door behind me.

"'Who's that knocking?' called Ewbank up above.

"I could not make out the answer, but it sounded to me like the irrelevant supplication of a spent man. What I did hear, plainly, was the cocking of the bank revolver before the bolts were shot back. Then, a tottering step, a hard, short, shallow breathing, and Ewbank's voice in horror—

"'My God! Good Lord! What's happened to you? You're bleeding like a pig!'

"'Not now,' came with a grateful sort of sigh.

"'But you have been! What's done it?'

"'Bushrangers.'

"'Down the road?'

"'This and Whittlesea—tied to tree —cock shots—left me—bleed to death * * *'

"The weak voice failed, and the bare feet bolted. Now was my time —if the poor devil had fainted. But I could not be sure, and there I crouched down below in the dark, at the half-shut iron door, not less spellbound that imprisoned. It was just as well, for Ewbank wasn't gone a minute.

"'Drink this,' I heard him say, and when the other spoke again, his voice was stronger.

"'Now I begin to feel alive * * *

"'Don't talk!'

"'It does me good. You don't know what it was, all those miles and then one an hour at the outside! I never thought I should come through. You must let me tell you—in case I don't!'

"'Well, have another sip.'

"'Thank you * * * I said bushrangers; of course, there are no such things nowadays.'

"'What are they, then?'

"'Bank thieves; the one that had the pot shots was the very brute I drove out of the bank at Coburg, with a bullet in him.'

I thought Ewbank was never going to speak again.

"'You're delirious,' he says at last. 'Who in blazes do you think you are?'

"'The new manager.'

"'The new manager's in bed and asleep upstairs!'

"'When did he arrive?'

"'This evening.'

"'Call himself Raffles?'

"'Yes.'

"'Well, I'm damned!' whispered the real man. 'I thought it was just revenge, but now I see what it was. My dear sir, the man upstairs is an impostor—if he's upstairs still! He must be one of the gang. He's come to rob the bank—if he hasn't done so already!'

"'If he hasn't done so already!' muttered Ewbank after him; 'if he's upstairs still! By Jove, if he is I'm sorry for him!'

"His tone was quiet enough, but about the nastiest I ever heard. I tell you, Bunny, I was glad I brought that revolver.

"'Better have a look down here, first,' said the new manager.

"'While he gets through his window?' No, no, he's not down here.'

"'It's easy to have a look.'

Bunny, if you ask me what was the most thrilling moment of my whole career, I say it was that moment. There I stood at the bottom of those narrow stone stairs, inside the strong room, with the door a good foot open, and I didn't know whether it would creak or not. The light was coming nearer—and I didn't know! I had to chance it. And it didn't creak a bit; it was far too solid and well hung; and I couldn't have banged it if I'd tried, it was too heavy, and it fitted so close that I felt and heard the air squeeze out in my face. But I shred of light went out, except the streak underneath, and it brightened. How I blessed that door!

"'No, he's not down there,' I heard as though through cotton wool. The the streak went out, too, and in a few seconds I ventured to open once more and was in time to hear them creeping to my room.

"Well, now there was not a fifth of a second to be lost; but I'm proud to say I came up those stairs on my toes and fingers, and out of that bank (they'd gone and left the door open) just as gingerly as though my life had been my own. I didn't even gallop away, but just jogged off quietly in the thick dust at the side of the road (though I own my heart was leaping), and thanked my stars the bank was at that end of the township in which I hadn't really set foot. And now, Bunny——"

He stood up and stretched himself with a smile that ended in a yawn. The black windows had faded through every shade of indigo; they now framed their opposite neighbors, stark and livid in the dawn; and the air seemed turned to nothing in the globes.

"But that's not all?" I cried.

"I'm sorry to say it is," said Raffles apologetically. "The thing should have ended with an exciting chase, I know, but somehow it didn't. I suppose they thought I had got no end of a start; then they had made up their minds that I belonged to the gang, which was not so many miles away; and one of them had got as much as he could carry from the gang as it was.

"Lord, how I made that poor brute travel when I got among the trees! By Jove, it was no joke, in and out among those trees, and no moon to help with your pace in the mane! I tell you about the forest of dead gums! It looked perfectly ghostly in the moonlight."

"Did the mare carry you all the way back to Melbourne?"

"Bank thieves; the one that had the pot shots was the very brute I drove out of the bank at Coburg, with a bullet in him."

I thought Ewbank was never going to speak again.

"You're delirious,' he says at last. 'Who in blazes do you think you are?'

"'The new manager.'

"'The new manager's in bed and asleep upstairs!'

"'When did he arrive?'

World Needs Small Things Well Done

THE world can find plenty men to handle its big jobs. No trouble nowadays to get folks who'll snip an isthmus or move a mountain or tunnel a river for you.

Accomplishing impossibilities is an every-day trade.

We are thoroughly equipped for Titan tasks. We carry a full assortment of trip-hammers, and steam shovels, and subway drills in our tool kits.

If you can pay the bill there are a thousand quiet, bespectacled gentlemen who will seriously undertake a transcontinental tunnel or a fifty-block hotel.

Big figures don't frighten us—modern arithmetic specializes in tremendous calculations. The new civilization dares to achieve what yesterday feared to dream.

The giants have come back to earth. Cyclops is roaming the universe. His stature, however, is a dimension of brain instead of brawn.

There are a hundred markets from which we can secure competent wizards.

There's a glut of leaders and generals.

The school of progress is educating enough merchant-princes, engineers, inventors and scientists to cope with the demands of the time, but we are short on office boys.

We lack folks who'll do small things in a big way.

There is a weak link in our chain of organization.

We pay too much for errors. Their cost is pro rata to the scale of our calculations.

We have been so eager and absorbed in the perfecting of driving wheels and gears that we have forgotten all about the bolts, nuts and screws. And this very disregard of seemingly trifling details has magnified and multiplied their opportunities of creating harm and play-havoc. A minor mind becomes negatively powerful the instant it is permitted to assume a responsible obligation in a vital undertaking. The moment a valuable letter is entrusted to an errand boy, for the time being he becomes the most important factor in the series of operations which have culminated in the communication delegated to his care. Intrust it promptly and precisely, fulfill his orders, all the effort, ingenuity and intelligence antecedent to his entry into the situation are jeopardized.

Special trains of thought are regularly derailed by the asinine interruptions of incompetent underlings. Long established and profitable accounts are daily lost by bungling employes.

Watch your little people. You are apt to underestimate their capacity for damage. Because they cannot crash you are liable to forget their power to wreck. A crawfish cannot build a dyke, but it can dig a hole that will destroy one.

A half wit isn't capable of constructive work, but he can do a mighty lot of tearing down. The vandals could not raise a Rome of their own, yet they laid waste the city on the "Seven Hills."

Turn your attention to the lower order of your organization and safeguard yourself against the petty depredations of ignorance and thoughtlessness.

Investigate your debits and trace their source, and you will be staggered at the real size of a certain section of your payroll. There are ten thousand institutions in America immediately in need of men and boys to fill five hundred dollar jobs in a five thousand dollar way. If you can get a man at the price, don't haggle—he's worth the money.

Aerial Baptism for Royalty

BERLIN.—Quite a number of foreign royalties have lately been receiving their aerial baptism, but a great deal of nonsense has been written concerning princes who fly. The only actual royal pilots are Prince Axel, of Denmark, and Prince Henry, of Prussia, who learned to fly far from the public gaze. There is no truth in the report that a member of the kaiser's big boy family is becoming an aviator, though the crown prince has in some respects more than found his legs, if not his wings. While recently in London, Prince Christopher, of Greece, was shown round the Hendon Aerodome by Mr. Grahame-White in one of his machines; Prince Charles of Sweden has also tasted the delirium of the air in company with Chevilliard, the master of the chute de cote and other terrifying aerial acrobatic feats.

LONDON.—A royal golf match was held recently between Prince John and Prince Olaf of Norway. The caddies were the queen of Norway and Princess Victoria.

Both the young princes are keen golfers, and Prince John has gained considerable skill in the game. His instructor is the king's pipe-major, who also drills the little prince every morning. Prince Olaf has his "professional" with him, also a Norwegian soldier.

ATLANTA'S CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH IS ONE OF SOUTH'S FINEST BUILDINGS

COMMENCING in 1886 with a few scattered followers, the amazing progress of Christian Science in Atlanta since then is shown by the new church edifice at Fifteenth street and Peachtree Circle, which will be ready for use early in July.

This church building, erected at a cost of over $100,000, will be one of the very finest churches of any denomination in the whole south. It will be the greatest Christian Science church south of Baltimore, and is exceeded in size and beauty by few Christian Science churches in the United States.

Ground was broken for this new building, which now towers far above the beautiful residences in Peachtree Circle, on the first of March, 1913.

Since then the work has been pushed rapidly to completion, so that now the congregation will worship within its walls in July.

The building is constructed on the Italian Renaissance style. Enormous pillars, said to be the largest in Atlanta, except for those of the state capitol, support the ornamental pediment, sixty feet above the ground.

The dome of the huge building rises to a height of 98 feet, and is made of ingot iron, which will be covered with copper paint.

Building of Granite.

The building is made of granite, brick and terra cotta, and is equipped with the latest improvements.

In cold weather the building will be kept warm by heated air, which will also be fresh air. Electric motors of fourteen horsepower will suck fresh air in through an intake flue in the rear of the building. This, heated, will be sent all over the structure.

In warm weather, however, a unique cooling system has been devised. The air, brought in by the motors, will be passed over either water or ice. Water will lower the temperature ten degrees, and ice will lower it twenty degrees or more. But twenty degrees' change from the outer atmosphere is judged sufficient, by the architects, for the hottest days.

The lot on which the new church stands was purchased by Atlanta Christian Scientists in 1909. It is located in a commanding position at the intersection of Peachtree street and Peachtree Circle, and is in the very heart of the present fashionable residence district. In purchasing this site in 1909 the trustees of the church showed great foresight and discrimination.

This lot is 238 feet wide by 350 feet long, thus leaving a large amount of space, to be used as a lawn around the building.

Over 900 people can be seated in the auditorium of the church, and the seats are so arranged that every person will be able to see the reader who is conducting the services on the platform at the rear of the church.

Arrangement of Church.

On the ground floor, to which access is gained by two doors on either side of the large flight of stone steps, is the Sunday school room. This is 87 feet square—the same size as the auditorium above, in which the regular services are to be held.

On either side of the entrances to the Sunday school room are dressing rooms for men and women, and just inside of the entrances is a cloak room, where hats and coats can be checked.

The auditorium, a magnificent room, with a ceiling, the dome, fifty-seven feet above the floor, is reached by the flight of stone steps leading up the front of the building.

Here seven hundred people can be seated. The balcony, overhanging the entrance, seats two hundred more.

Back of the reader's platform, which corresponds to the pulpit or chancel of other churches, are rooms for the first and second readers, the organist, for committee meetings, and for the directors. Also, there are reading rooms and a special room for the superintendent of the Sunday school. The first and second readers of the church at present are Allan A. Dowde and Mrs. Alice Coon.

The building will be fitted up with vacuum cleaner attachments, so that the use of brooms and other antiquated means of cleanliness will be unknown.

Floor of Cork Tile.

The floor of the auditorium will be of cork tile, giving absolute quiet, deadening all footsteps. Like this new Christian Science church, one of the finest buildings of the United States, the new New York Public Library, is fitted up with cork tile floors, which are very expensive.

In the center of the auditorium will be a great electric chandelier, eight feet in diameter, supported by a bronze chain, thirty-four feet long, hanging from the apex of the dome. Throughout the auditorium there will be other lights amounting to 10,000 candle power in all.

There will be four huge decorated plaster arches, one on each side of the auditorium. In the center of these arches, to the east and west, are two huge windows of opalescent glass—each window being eleven feet wide by twenty-eight feet tall. On either side of these windows are two others, themselves not small, eight feet wide by eighteen feet high.

The woodwork in the interior of the church will be oak, finished in dark "cathedral" stain. Around the auditorium there will be a wainscoting of this "cathedral" oak over six feet high.

"The beginning of the Christian Science movement in Atlanta and in this section of the south was in the year 1886," to quote The Christian Science Journal, "and was marked by the healing of a case of invalidism of fifteen years' standing. The patient, imbued with a desire to comprehend the spiritual meaning of the truth which had wrought such wonderful healing, at once began a study of Christian Science, and soon was joined by others.

Growth of Church.

"This little group, assembled at the residences of different students, very soon increased in numbers to an extent which seemed to make desirable the renting of a room where regular public Sunday services might be held. Accordingly, a small room was rented on Peachtree street, and when for a second time increasing numbers compelled removal, larger quarters were secured in a building on Broad street.

"In January, 1893, a charter was secured and the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Atlanta, Georgia, was perfected. Continued growth made necessary another advance, and in January, 1896, a beautiful and spacious hall in the newly completed Grand Opera House building was occupied. To such a devoted band of seekers after Truth, the thought of a suitable church edifice early presented itself, and in April of 1896, a building fund was started. One year later a desirable lot located on West Baker street was purchased, and ground was broken for the foundation of the new church edifice in October, 1898.

"Not without much toil and self sacrifice, and the determined overcoming of many obstacles, was the structure pushed forward to completion, so rapidly that in March, 1899, the first service was held in the basement of the new edifice, and on Easter Sunday in that month, the church acknowledged by all to be a model of architectural beauty, was dedicated with an impressive service, the crowning feature of which was a letter from Mrs. Eddy."

Services at Cable Hall.

These were the beginnings of the Christian Science church in Atlanta—first the meeting rooms in the Grand opera house, then the little church on West Baker street—which has recently been sold to a woman's club—and then, while the great new church was being built on Peachtree circle, meetings rooms in Cable hall, because of the fact that West Baker street edifice was entirely too small to accommodate the rapidly growing congregation.

Every Sunday, and every Wednesday night, the Christian Scientists now meet in Cable hall to hold services. In July, however, they will move into one of the most magnificent churches in the south.

Perhaps much of the encouragement which caused the zealous work of the Christian Scientists in Atlanta was caused by the letter from Mrs. Eddy, sent them in 1899.

"You have met to consecrate your beautiful temple to the worship of the only true God," wrote Mrs. Eddy, "since the day wherein you were brought into the light and liberty of His children, it has been in the hearts of this people to build a house unto Him whose name they would glorify in a new commandment—'that ye love one another. In this new recognition of the riches of His life and the majesty of His might, you have built this house—laid its foundations on the Rock of Christ—and the stone which the builders rejected you have made the head of the corner.

Message of Courage.

"You worship no deity, nor talk of unknown love. The silent prayers of our churches, resounding through the dim corridors of time, go forth in waves of sound, a diapason of heartbeats, vibrating from one pulpit to another and from one heart to another, truth and love, commingling in one righteous prayer, shall encircle and cement the race.

"Be patient toward persecution. Injustice hath not a tithe of the power of justice. Your enemies will advertise for you. Christian Science is spreading steadily throughout the world. Persecution is the weakest of tyrants engendered by their fear, and love will cast it out. Continue steadfast, in love and good works. Children of light—you are not children of darkness—let your light shine. Keep in mind the foundations of Christian Science—one God, and one Christ; keep personality out of sight, and Christ's 'Blessed are ye' will seal your apostleship."

That the advice of Mrs. Eddy gave good fruit was shown in the great growth of the church in Atlanta since the writing of this letter—1899—as shown by the huge and imposing edifice which crowns Peachtree circle.

Edward Emmett Dougherty and Arthur Neal Robinson are the architects for the new church.

Will Preachers and Churches Rob the People of Their Day of Rest?

By Bishop W.A. Candler

VERY many people fail to appreciate Sunday as a day of rest and the worship of Almighty God as a means of rest.

The men and women of this strenuous generation need rest as none who have gone before them have ever needed it, but they seem not to know how to find it. Many thousands of them try the method of worldly amusement, and carry their diversions and sports into God's day that is sanctified and set apart for rest and worship. This is folly. Such a method fools people. It wearies the mind and tires out the nerves. None know better than those who have sought rest in this way how vain and futile it is. He has failed to observe the marks of languor and unrest in the faces of the men and women who pursue diversions as a means of rest? They are nervous, irritable, and restless.

Only less jaded are those business men who carry commercial interests into the Sabbath and never relax their feverish pursuit of gain. When appeals are made to them to attend the services of God's church, they insist that they are "too tired to go to church on Sunday after the hard work of the week."

These men overlook the fact that worship should follow work as the most natural and effective of all methods of rest. This view is justified by the soundest principles of psychology as well as by the most sacred requirements of religion. To spend an hour in the fellowship of good people, uniting with them in the worship of God which is needed most restful exercise of which the human mind is capable, lifts the soul out of the world of care and carries it into the severest atmosphere of peace and tranquility. Nothing is so well designed to bring repose to overstrained nerves and refreshment to overworked faculties. Men consult their highest interest, as well as their duty, when they go to the church for worship on Sunday. They are furthest from rest and the true recreation of their nature when they turn their backs on the house of God and spend their Sabbaths in lazy slumbers or engrossing sports. In neither indolent dawdling nor in worldly sports on Sunday, can tired men find the rest which they need after six days of toil. They need to get away from the world that has worn and wasted them, and to ascend into a higher and holier realm in which alone they can find real rest for their souls. When they flee the services of the church and run after lower things, they forsake the fountain of living water from which they might quench the thirst of their spirits for rest, and run to broken and foul cisterns that have no water in them. Games and golf links can not give the repose and refreshment which God offers to the weary. Jesus Christ invites all men to the noblest renewal of their wasted powers when he says, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." He has made his word good in the cases of multiplied millions who have accepted his invitation to rest in him. Let any man try his promise who will, and the same restful result will follow in every case.

But let it be observed the rest is in Christ; and an exercise in a church which does not bring men and women to Christ, which falls short of worship rests nobody. At this point many preachers and churches are doing something worse than failing. They bring into God's house seeniar excitements which men need to escape on the day of rest. At the very altars which have been set apart to the worship of our God of rest they display pulpit distractions and performances which destroy all repose and dissipate all reverence. They drag the themes of the sociologists and philosophers, the sports of the ball field, the sensations of the newspapers and even the wearying discussions of the political and commercial worlds into the pulpits, and then call such stuff preaching. Referring to their subversion of the day of rest the British Weekly recently spoke as follows:

Even the Church can become infected with this same disquiet spirit. Preachers of the eternal gospel will advertise "attractive" services, and deliver discourses which hrstle with the topics of the hour. James Macdonell, the distinguished journalist, used to say about certain sermons that it was hard to have to listen to a leading article on Sunday afternoon sitting leaning at ticles all the week. Multitudes of jaded souls betake themselves to church in the hope that they may escape from everyday cares and controversies, and find refuge in the God of peace. When will ministers understand that sermons about "the present crisis" carry no specific for the tempests and wounds of the heart? Some of us are old enough to remember a good many crises, and we can appreciate what Wadsworth wrote to his friend at a time of public excitement: "After all, the affairs of the world will be carried on as heretofore—by the foolishness of man and the wisdom of God."

Pulpiteering of this sort drives tired men and women from the churches, who have a right to find rest at God's altars; and it draws into the pews a gaping mob of sensation-lovin' sinners who continue their attendance no longer than the poor show which the preacher offers pleases them. It is really no higher thing than a decent moving picture show and it ministers no more than a comedy to rest and worship. It is a sort of theatre comique, which the public let run on the Sabbath, because it is disguised under the pretense of a religious exercise.

It is not strange that such churches do a good deal of advertising. It is natural that shows and showmen should advertise for patronage. But is a true church or a true preacher of the Gospel in the position of one who seeks the patronage of the world? Has an ambassador of God a high commission to fulfill, or has he something to sell? Is he a preacher, charged with proclaiming the gospel of the Kingdom, or is he a peddler of cheap wares, of his own manufacture, from the sale of which he seeks to get a living?

The great apostle to the Gentiles approached men saying "as the ambassador of God we beseech you;" but these pulpiteers beg the world for its patronage, and offer all sorts of cheap inducements to get it.

Some one sent me the other day a piece of pulpit advertising which is a case in point. I do not know the man who did this piece of advertising in a color card of carmine tints, nor do I know the city or town in which he conducts his business. Hence what I say is entirely impersonal. The party may deserve nothing more than criticism for foolish blundering; but he certainly can not be approved for the method he adopts to get people to hear him. Under a flaming red headline of "The Big League Game," he advertises his Sunday evening series of discourses under the following sub-heads:

"Making the Most of Our Innings."
"Putting Them Over the Plate."
"Fouls."
"Making a Home Run."
"Short Stops."
"The Man Behind the Bat."
"Out-Fielders."
"The Man Who Died on Third."
"The Great Umpire."

These were the topics advertised for discussion during nine Sunday nights, two entire months of the year!

Comment is unnecessary. The case is referred to for purposes of illustration only.

Shall the preachers and the churches unite with the forces of evil to rob the people of their day of rest? If not in the house of God on the Lord's day, where shall the restless multitudes of this strenuous era find rest for their weary souls?

GEORGIA PHILOSOPHER AT 78 IS LEARNING THE TANGO

ROME, Ga., April 4.—Modern dances, those favorite targets for the pulpiteer and the reformer, have at least one ardent defender here in the person of Judge Joel Branham, former judge of the superior court and the Nestor of the Rome bar. Besides being an able jurist Judge Branham is a litterateur, a linguist, an author, a philosopher and a musician, but above all an apostle of sunshine and an evangel of optimism. Though he has passed his seventy-eighth birthday he is still actively engaged in the practice of his profession, and his home, "Bohemia," where he frequently entertains, is the gathering place for a coterie of kindred spirits.

Unlike many other "old men"—indeed Judge Branham objects to that appellation—he does not dwell in the past, but keeps a keen interest in current events. He frequently writes for the newspapers, and any author, preacher, politician or other publicist who takes a dark view of the trend of the times is apt to find himself called to account by the judge.

Judge Branham has little patience with critics of the modern dance. A few days ago, the Rome city council had before it a proposition to increase the license tax levied upon teachers of dancing. The proposed increase was broached simultaneously with the arrival of a woman dancing teacher from New York, who is initiating the gay "younger set" into the mysteries of the tango, the Castle walk, and the maxixe. Tacitly at least, therefore, the city fathers expressed their disapproval of the modern dances; but they did not "get away with it," without a protest from Judge Branham.

First Lesson in 1855.

He says: "I am sorry the dancing teachers are required to pay a license tax. They are ladies working for a living and contributing to the happiness of the young people. Dancing is an accomplishment, a natural instinct. It brings ease and grace to those who learn to dance well. It is required of the cadets of the army at the military academy in West Point, and of the midshipmen at Annapolis as a part of their education. It prevails everywhere, and those who cannot dance lose much of the joy of life. The non-dancer is self-conscious and timid in society. Ladies so lacking, become wall flowers.

"I took my first dancing lessons in 1855, at Madison, Ga. There I danced the cotillion, the Virginia reel, the schottische, the lancers, the fisher's hornpipe and the highland fling. I danced with many beautiful girls, whose children and grandchildren are now ornamenting society in Atlanta, Athens, Rome and other Georgia towns. What beautiful dancers they were in those days!

"Now I have learned that the tango is a graceful dance. I am going to learn that. I am taking lessons now. I have engaged a sylph-like girl for my partner at the next german, and if any of our venerable city fathers can induce any lady suitable to their time of life to join them, I shall challenge them to take a turn or two with me and my partner on the ball room floor. I have been advised, however, by ladies who know, that some of those old sticks will cripple themselves on some of the other dancers.

"On with the dance, let joy be unconfined! 'Why should the children of the King go mournful all their days?'"

The judge also takes sharp issue with ministers in Rome and elsewhere, who disapprove of the new spring fashions. The appointment of an interdenominational church commission in Georgia to wage warfare against modern tendencies in dress, evoked caustic criticism from him. He takes the ground that what the women wear is none of the men's business, and intimates that men's attire is not above criticism.

Fate of the Critics.

Upon this point he says: "Why don't the preachers let the women and their dress alone? Don't they know that a woman or girl, dressed out of fashion, is cowed and humiliated? If they don't believe it let them try it on their wives and daughters.

"I am going to get up a squad of slab-sided, faded women, with the corners of their mouths turned down, wearing poke bonnets and corkscrew curls, with plain black dresses dropping straight down over bosomless chests to spindle legs and ankles for the benefit of those fellows who are criticising the present fashions. They shan't look at our girls, I'll put double green glass spectacles on them or blindfold them as our beautiful girls, full of the joy of life, pass by on the streets. That sort of preachers shall only see and remember ancient females of the last century type. They shall not even peep at our girls.

"These out-of-soap preachers sometimes talk to empty benches and often take advantage at a funeral of weeping females and unoffending congregations to afflict them with lugubrious discourses. They act in this manner under the mistaken assumption that they are pathetic, while everybody is anxious for them to quit, and give the congregation an opportunity to escape from the long and doleful service.

"I have great respect for religion and for the church. I love its holy ministers, but I have no use for sensational preachers. I sympathize with superannuated preachers. They have no contribution box, and get a mere pittance for their support in their declining years, while young and lively pulpiteers get the toast and tea and the collections. I reckon that it is a crime to grow so old that you cannot go alone and defy the world and the devil.

Violating the Scriptures.

"But what about the attire of these critical clergymen? They stretch themselves out in a barber's chair, have their faces lathered and their beards shaved off, contrary to Scripture.

"How did they find out that the women wear slit skirts? Did they look? If so I do not blame them, except for talking too much about it. No one, except perhaps a played-out old man like Solomon in his old age, when he cried out 'all is vanity and vexation of spirit' would skip a good chance. Only dead men decline to peep at a neat foot."

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, recently expressed equally decided views on men's opinions of women's dress.

She agreed heartily that men are impertinent in venturing criticism of fashion. However, she opposed extreme styles.

"It matters not," said Mrs. McLendon, "whether they be business men, ecclesiastical men or some other sort of men. It's none of their concern. I don't like the present styles. But women can manage their own reforms. They don't need the criticism of men.

"Is all that man does right? Is he so perfect himself he can forget his own faults and take to deprecating the width of woman's skirts? Anyway, all these fashions so much condemned by men were designed by men. And, in wearing them, women really are the victims of men.

"I don't want to wear narrow skirts. But if I buy clothes designed by men and sold by men, what else can I get? If a woman isn't clever enough to make her own apparel, she must take the hobbies designed by masculine dressmakers in Paris, and then be railed at by masculine critics here.

"The only trouble is that women don't assert themselves. Most of us are opposed to extreme styles. But we are too much in the habit of accepting things, of making the most of them, and of being silent when we should be saying what we think in a very warm way.

"And, yet, when we begin to be assertive, and speak our minds on what we know and we need to talk about, you hear men regretting the old-fashioned woman and her womanly ways.

"The time is sure to come, though, I am certain, when women will be outspoken upon matters of importance to women, and will regulate their own affairs without the direction of men. I am convinced the matter of dress is even now one that should be left to women.

"I will say this, however, that men have chosen their own styles of dress better than women have chosen or been chosen for. I like your—what do you call 'em—pantaloons, a good deal better than I do our tight skirts. It's easy to get about in them. They are nice looking, and very sensible.

"A man certainly has less trouble with his clothes than any woman, and he looks nice. But all the same, a woman's needs are different from a man's, and I think he has enough to look after as it is without saying how she shall dress.

Women Are Women.

"Just leave that to women. They'll solve the problem well enough. There are lots of sensible women in the world, and I think there are very few who are not modest and good. Talk as much as you please of old-fashioned reserve and gentleness. Women are women, everywhere and at all times. They were good and gentle in the old-fashioned days. But they are good and gentle in the new-fashioned ones, too.

"Hooped skirts weren't any more an emblem of modesty than tight skirts are. Women are just as jealous of their good name today when they put a yard and a half of cloth into their skirts, and a skimpy yard and a half at that, as they were when they bought dresses by the bolt. Besides, cloth costs more now.

"I know some of the styles you see don't seem to bear out my ideas. But they are styles made by men and put on the market where women 'happen' to buy them more than anything else.

"Well, at any rate, the style is begun, and those that don't like the prevailing manner of dress, fall in line because they don't want to be conspicuous.

"But this condition will change without any need of men interfering. Women are going to assert themselves, and as it is they are better able than mankind to decide how they shall dress.

"I believe that when they begin to vote and enter into politics their dress and manner will become simpler and more sensible. They will learn better how to see after their own affairs, and how to prevent such extravagance in styles as the men are now criticising.

"I'd like to tell you more, but that baby's crying and I must see about him. But stress this: It's a piece of impertinence for any ecclesiastical or business man to try to tell women how to dress."

At the time Mrs. McLendon first commented on the attitude of men toward dress, Dr. C. B. Wilmer, rector of All Saints, was asked his opinion about fashions.

"Some styles are objectionable," he said. "A few women seem to dress suggestively for that very reason. Some dress innocently in a vulgar fashion, because it's the style. As for the new dances, while I have seen none of them, I have been told that they may be danced inoffensively by one person and disgustingly by another.

Purpose of the Churches.

"Some of our styles of dress are improper, and some of our dances are done improperly. It seems to me no sane man can deny that. This is what the churches thought when they appointed a commission to create a counteracting influence.

"It is not their wish to lay down rules. They simply want to get up a feeling of opposition to any style in dress that are improper, and to any dances that are objectionable.

"I am now reading to my congregation 'The Pastoral Letter of the Bishop's,' in which reference is made to the tendency that the churches deplore."

As the conclusion to his interview, he pointed out in this letter the following passages, which also were quoted recently by Bishop C. K. Nelson:

"God is in the glad paths of life not less than in the sad; and refinement of manners, gentleness, and reverence are obligations of our religion, to which, we are constrained to say the fashions of the day show scant regard. Even good taste and what used to be called common decency seem to make little appeal to many purveyors of popular entertainments, and in the social life of young people forms of recreation are tolerated which tend to blunt the edge of conscience and tarnish the fine gold of maidenly modesty and reserve.

"Doubtless, in a time like ours, so vital, so earnest, so exuberant in physical and mental energy, we must not be surprised to find frivolous and superficial excitements accompanying the strenuous and stirring activities of life; and men and women seeking relief from care in an excess of amusement and recreation.

"But let us beware lest we forget that the body is, among other things, a measure and index, as well as an instrument for the support and development of moral life and character. Manners are the body's mode of expressing the refinements of life. They are not mere conventional movements of a mechanism. Good manners indicate the respect in which a man holds himself and others. Dress and recreative activities are things to be determined on their merits and not by the dictation of irresponsible leaders of society. All that tends to make the body more fitting as a shrine and instrument of refinement is worthy of support. This applies to amusements and sports kept in due relation to the serious purpose of life. The playground and the drawing room, as being legitimate factors in man's education are a sphere for the activities of Christ. If he is not present often in the social gatherings and amusements of the day it is because there has been a decay of manners and men and women have been led astray into accepting the new, because it is exciting, without heeding the fact that it tends to lower respect for self and others."

Bessie Tift College Notes

FORSYTH.—Thursday was founders' day at Bessie Tift college, the exercises marking the anniversary of the acceptance of this historic school by the Georgia Baptist convention. Invitations had been mailed over the entire state and alumnae and friends of the institution in great numbers responded to the call of their alma mater and came back to witness the impressive exercises.

With the assembling on the campus of the trustees, faculty, alumnae and students in front of Tift hall and the pageant presented by the entire student body under the trees, the exercises began.

At 10 o'clock, in the auditorium, occurred the annual pennant presentation exercises, in which some member of each college class and some representative of each of the classes that have graduated, presented to Dr. C. H. S. Jackson, the pennant of her class, pledging her loyalty and devotion to the institution. To each of the presentation speeches the president responded in behalf of the faculty and the institution.

Then came the song contests, between the members of the various classes. These songs are composed and sung by each of the college classes and a committee awards the prize to the class having the most appropriate and representative song. The rivalry in this contest, though friendly, is intense.

The feature of the exercises was the excellent address of Rev. C. W. Durden, D. D., of Tifton.

Following the exercises in the college chapel the visitors and friends of the institution were the guests of the college at dinner. In the afternoon occurred the annual field day exercises, the tennis matches and the basketball contests, and in the evening the Mercer Glee club gave a concert in the college chapel.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

JUNE, the month of the brides, promises to be a very brilliant one socially this year in Atlanta. The wedding dates for several of the interesting engagements which have been announced during the past few weeks have been set for the month of roses, and rumors are current of many more to be announced in the near future, the weddings to take place in June. The series of entertainments planned in honor of the young couples will commence immediately after opera week, and will fill the calendar of the early summer with brightness. An announcement of today, which will be of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends is that of the engagement of Miss Helen Hobbs, the young daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Greenwood Hobbs to Mr. Edward S. Gay, Jr. Miss Hobbs, who is a beautiful girl, combines with her very striking blonde loveliness, a charm of manner and a grace of personality which have rendered her a great social favorite. Mr. Gay is the second son of Captain and Mrs. Edward S. Gay and is not only prominent in insurance circles, but is a popular member of all the social clubs. The wedding will take place the middle of June and will be one of the very beautiful events of the early summer.

PLANS ARE COMPLETED FOR SUFFRAGE PARADE

A mammoth suffrage parade and rally will be held in Atlanta, Saturday, May 2, when the Georgia Woman's Suffrage league, the Equal Suffrage Party of Georgia and the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association will unite with visiting suffragists to make the event a successful one.

Automobiles will be decorated in the suffrage colors, yellow and black, and the "suffrage hat" will be worn by the ladies in the parade.

Mrs. Beaumont Davison has been appointed by the president, Mrs. Frances S. Whiteside, to secure the privilege of placing young ladies in the department stores, to give suffrage literature, badges and buttons several days before the parade and rally.

These young ladies will be able to inform everyone where the procession will be formed and how to enter the parade.

Prominent men and women will speak from their automobiles while distributing literature.

Governor Slaton, Mayor Woodward, the city council, the Federation of Labor and the Federation of Women's clubs have all been asked to take part in the parade and rally.

The Vital Element in Silver Buying Is Its Initial Selection

SILVERWARE is good in proportion to the artistic knowledge and good taste of the one who selects it.

Whether the article is made in America, in England, in France, in Germany or elsewhere, its merit depends entirely upon the knowledge of and good taste displayed at the point of its first selection.

You are well and conscientiously represented in the world's silver markets by The Eugene V. Haynes Company. We believe that in skillful buying rests our greatest strength.

We call your especial attention to the exquisite patterns the newest designs now on exhibition in our silver collections. Simplicity and refined dignity prevail in the leading patterns of this season, the leading styles being shown in the following popular patterns:

Mary Chilton Paul Revere
Fairfax Chantilly
Louis XV.

We call your especial attention to our silver chests for brides and our plan for starting a handsome collection for every new couple.

Prompt Service and Plentiful Stocks Await the Buyers of Easter Gloves. . . . . Now, Then, EVERYBODY! Clean Up and Paint Up! Make Atlanta THE Spotless Town. Easter Ribbons, Handkerchiefs, Neckwear, Jewelry and Every Clever Dress Accessory . . .

M. RICH & BROS. CO.

A Pellmell Concourse of Boxes---Off Pop the Lids---Fresh from Their Tissue Paper Wrappings Come Our Buyers' Recent New York Purchases---A Graphic Show of

Fascinating Easter Apparel for the Discriminating Woman

HOW we've planned for this Easter! Our buyer spent the entire middle of March in New York conferring and planning with our makers. The Annual Dress Makers' Fashion Show was on; Paquin was staging her models; every contribution to Fashion was on display.

From this modish panorama our buyer selected his styles; our makers have faithfully reproduced or adapted them; the result is here for your inspection.

You will be pleased with endless array spread before you. Captivating garments, each one. Not a hodge-podge assemblage of sale stuff; but critically selected coats, suits and dresses---each distinctively individual.

We Are Citizens of No Mean City

CITIES are where and what men want them to be. Other cities also have a strategetic position geographically; other cities have a fine, equable climate. Few cities, however, have the indomitable Atlanta Spirit that gets what it goes after. We have —A Regional Bank

—Grand Opera
—The Shriners, and other conventions.
—The Ford Automobile Co. coming to increase the city's population an approximate 10,000.
—Increased Postoffice receipts.
—Greater building permits for March.

Truly we are citizens of no mean city

Bloch Baby Carriages and Go-carts. (Annex).

Suits of Individual Charm

—There never was such a variety. Even at the same prices, the models are different. There are serges, gabardines, failles, crepes, shepherd checks, suitings and novelties. Each type seems an artistic creation symbolizing the artistic sense and harmony of color, fabric and form.

$16.75, $23.50, $25, $29.75, $35 to $150.

Street and Party Dresses

—Wonderful silks and chiffons, crepes and tissues are the materials from which these frocks and gowns are developed. Cheruit models with frills and flounces and 1830 apron tunics. Premet creations in bustle, black draped and Louis XV effects. The Polonaise silhouette of the ancient regime. Bouffant and special types and gowns with collars a la Japonaise.

$19.75, $25, $29.50 to $75.

Exquisite Spring Blouses

—A gathering of the best ideas of the fashion artists of Europe and America. A showing notable for styles of subtle charm and refined distinction. There are ever so many of them—and yet there is not a single blouse that does not impress its individuality at first glance—not one but is notable for its character. Waists too beautiful to describe mingle demurely; simple blouses that are exquisitely attractive add luster to an Easter style exhibit of unusual brilliance Monday.

$2.50 to $18.50

P. S.—From the vast stock one easily chooses individual garments that require little or no alteration. To be on the safe side, however, may we suggest that selections be made early in the week?

Easter Silks: Favored of Fashion

THE fashion pageant on Whitehall and the fashionable thoroughfares of Atlanta on Easter, will contain more silk costumes than in many seasons past, so decided is the preference for Silks this spring. The following weaves are most favored—

Black Moires—the world is fashion mad over them. The stock here includes velours, taffetas, crepes and bengalines moired in the Renaissance, antique, regulations and brocaded rose designs. 42 to 44 inches wide. Variously $1.75 $2.50, $3 and $4.50 a yard.

Novelty Silks—these include the candy striped messalines at $1.50; the Roman striped taffetas at $2.50; the printed crepes in the new Mexican shades at $2.50 and $3.

Taffeta Silk—Of extreme softness, to conform to the season's vogue for supple Silks. In our stocks are—Plain-color Taffeta, Glace Taffeta, Taffeta Mousseline, Italian Chiffon Taffeta, Warp-print Taffeta and Taffeta Souple with Roman stripes. 36 in., $1.50 to $2.50.

Crepe Meteor—Its continued popularity is evidenced by our lavish stock of different shades. It is much used this season with novelty Silks. 36 in., $1.50.

Scotch Plaids—Carrying out the vogue for brilliant colors, and here in the most beautiful tones which look best combined with plain-color weaves. 36 in., $1.50.

Satin Souple—And Satin de Luxe, both accepted by Paris. The two are very similar in softness and rich lustre. 36 in., $1.50.

Crepe de Chine—Staple colors and the newest Paris shades in great variety. $1.50 to $2.50.

69c Special—Choice of our entire stock of fresh new 85c and $1 foulards at 69c.

These Stockings Will Walk in the Easter Parade

THEY are of silk, of course; short skirts and spring pumps make silk stockings a necessity. All are perfect; all are full fashioned and finely finished.

Boot silks at 50c—black, white and colors.
Wayne Knit at 75c—black, white and tan.
Silks at $1—black, white and shades to match almost any costume. Choice of lisle or silk garter tops.
Silk Stockings, $1.50—medium or heavy weight, in black, white and colors.
Novelty silk stockings, $1.50 to $10—black, white and some colors. Some are embroidered; some are clocked. Beaded effects are dazzling; hand-painted designs on white are striking.
Holeproof Silk Stockings—guaranteed for three months. 3 pairs $3. Black, white, tan.

(Silk Stockings, Main Floor, Right.)

The Most Important Garment About a Woman Is Her Corset

NOT ONLY does a woman's corset give support and poise to her figure; upon it also depends the success of her entire costume. An ill fitting corset will not only mar the lines of the finest costume ever created, it will also do positive injury to the wearer.

Because of these axiomatic truths, we have enlarged and perfected our corset service.

In January our buyer spent several weeks attending the foremost corset class in America. We have a factory demonstrator here now also, who has thoroughly instructed our saleswomen.

The method is quite interesting.

Corsets are demonstrated to the saleswomen on living models, to show what type of corset is suited to each type of figure, and proper methods of corset adjustment. Wrong corsets are put on, and there is a discussion of their faults.

As a result of this training, Rich's saleswomen are of much more service to you than merely taking your waist measure and giving you the kind of corset you ask for. Mrs. U. D. Taylor—who recently lectured here with the Living Model Demonstration of corsets—says she has never seen a more competent group of fitters in any corset store.

With this new corset service, we stock a new and enlarged list of corsets, including—

Bon Ton $3 to $25
Gossard $2 to $25
La Grecque $1.50 to $12.50
La Banelle $3 to $25
Warner's $1 to $5
Calina $3
P. N. $1 to $5
Nemo $3 and $5
Fleur de Lis $3 to $25
Madame Grace $3 to $8
Royal Worcester $1 to $3
Rengo Belt $2 to $5.
C. B. a la Spirite $1 to $5
Star-Cresc $1 to $3

The New Silverware Section

Duplicating the High-Grade Jewelers' Silverware But At Dry Goods Prices

THE success of a department store lies in its "turn-overs." Turning over a $5,000 stock six times means $30,000 in sales. Turning over a $10,000 stock two times means $20,000 in sales. There's more ultimate profit in the $30,000 sales. It's the old story of quick sales and small profits, and it is on this basis that we shall conduct our new silverware section. We stock only—

Sheffield Plate and Quadruple Plate

The quadruple plate is warranted for twenty years; the Sheffield plate will outwear a human life. The stock is complete with all kinds of articles for the dinner table, serving table and buffet. Many novelties, also.

Special for the Opening Days Are

Three-compartment bonbon or relish dish, in frame, $1.95.
Cheese and cracker set, glass dish for cheese, $1.95.
Marmalade jar, in frame, with shield for monogram, $1.95.
Compote, glass container, in pierced frame, $1.95.
Sheffield bread tray, thread border, at $1.69.
Vegetable tray, oval design, thread border, $2.98.
Sheffield domino sugar holder, at 69c.

All the above are in Sheffield plate, in pattern reproductions of the Old English Sheffield Plate.

(Center Aisle, Main Floor.)

$1.50 & $2 Emb'd Flouncings $1.19

—Soft, filmy fabrics of fascinating sumptuousness. Charming crepes; bodiless batistes and nebulous neiges are bewitchingly embroidered in solid and Irish designs. Fairly captivating for swirling spring draperies. All white, 45 inches wide.

$1.50 Infants' Skirtings at 98c

—27-Inch lingerie skirtings for infants, with soft attached ruffle.

10c to 15c Val Laces Go at 5c

—1 to 3-inch Platte Val and round thread lace edges and insertions.

$1.25 & $1.50 Allover Crepes 89c

News of Women and Society

Dancing Party

An enjoyable occasion among the younger college set was the dancing party at which Beaumont Davison, Jr., entertained fifty young friends Friday evening at his home in Druid Hills.

The long living room and the parlors were decorated with sprays of golden colored blossoms and the dining room table, from which a buffet supper was served at 10 o'clock, had as center decoration a mound of yellow tulips and daffodils.

The punch bowl was placed in the hall parlor and little Miss Margaret Maddox and Miss Virginia Maddox served punch.

Mrs. Davison assisted in the entertainment of the guests.

Lecture at University Club

The third of the University club lectures, followed by an informal reception will be held Tuesday evening, April 7, at 8 o'clock, at which time Dr. Robert Preston Brooks, of the department of history of the University of Georgia will give the second of his lectures in Georgia history, his subject being "The Origin and Development of the Black Belt in Georgia."

In addition to the members of the University club and their friends, the members and their friends of the following organizations using the club for their meetings are invited: The Atlanta Alumni associations of Emory college, the University of Georgia and Yale university; the Unity club, Ten club and Granite club, the Atlanta branch ofthe Southern Association of College Women, Alliance Francais, Brenau club, Atlanta Pan-Hellenic and all other organizations using the club for their meetings.

The officers of the University club and their wives will be assisted in receiving by the officers of the invited organizations.

To Mrs. Simmons

Mrs. J. J. Simmons was given a surprise party by a few of her friends at her home on West Fifteenth street on Thusday afternoon.

Those present were Mrs. O. P. Hodo, Mrs. C .W. Arnold, Mrs. A. H. Adams, Mrs. W. C. Beddingfield, Mrs. T. N. Abernathy and Mrs. Gussie Polk.

Music was rendered by Miss Pearl Simmons.

Club Entertained

Mrs. John Allen entertained the membership of the W. A. S. B. club Wednesday afternoon at her home on Brookhaven avenue.

Mrs. R. L. York and Mrs. A. O. Trout won the prizes of the afternoon.

Those present were Mrs. Irby Cook, Mrs. Edgar Fuller, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. Holcombe, Mrs. J. F. Stewart, Mrs. A. O. Trout and Mrs. R. L. York.

Mrs. Irby Cooke will entertain the club Thursday afternoon, April 16, at her home, 176 Grant street.

Temperance Tea

Mrs. K. L. Reeves entertained the Frances Willard W. C. T. U. Thursday at her home on East Ellis street.

Mrs. McLendon, who has been president of the union since 1887 was presented with a silver water by Mrs. Reeves in the name of the union.

Each guest was given a picture of Mrs. McLendon, as a souvenir of the occasion.

Kindergarten Alumnae

The Atlanta Kindergarten alumnae held its monthly meeting on Friday afternoon with Miss Bigham and Miss Lovelace at Miss Bigham's kindergarten.

The program was as follows.

Personal sketch of Hamilton Mabie, by Miss Flora Parks.

Short sketches on three of Hamilton Mabie's books:

1. "The American Ideals," by Miss Florence Camel.

2. "His Stories," by Miss Leone Smith.

3. "Under the Trees," by Miss May La Fontaine.

One of Hamilton Mabie's stories was told by Miss Louise Fain and musical numbers were rendered by Miss Eloise Allen and Miss Annie Griffin.

Social Club

Mrs. J. N. Causey entertained the Grant Park Social club at her home on Augusta avenue, Wednesday afternoon.

The members of the club are Mrs. Barber, Mrs. Starr, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Lawshe, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Stephens, Miss Alva Barber, the guest of Mrs. Sutton, Miss Leak Clark and Miss Effie Huey.

EASTER EGG HUNT.

The Bohemyers' Club will give an Easter Egg Hunt at Grant Park, Tuesday, April 7, at 2:30 in the afternoon. Children will meet at the Park avenue entrance of the park.

Meet Me At The ANSLEY

A Remark Often Heard In Atlanta.

WHY?

Because the Hotel Ansley is the recognized bright spot in Atlanta.

The management of this hotel caters to the desires and whims of its guests, thereby pleases.

Service and genuine service is the slogan of The Ansley, and because it has been conducted on such lines is why it is so popular with not only the traveling public but all Atlantians.

The Rathskeller is known as the most popular dining place in Atlanta and one of the show places of Atlanta, being conducted as a strictly high class cafe and catering only to the best class of patronage, it has become known that the Rathskeller is where one may take his wife or family and enjoy a good meal, good service and hear the finest music in the city. The only Electric Chime Staff Bells ever installed in the south are now being installed in the Rathskeller and will be in operation next week. Come and hear them.

ATTRACTIVE YOUNG GIRLS

MISS FRANCES DILLARD AND MISS MARY DILLARD.

The charming young daughters of Mrs. Sarah Reese Dillard, of Washington, Wilkes county, who, with their mother, have been spending the week at the Majestic. They were the recipients of charming social attentions during their brief stay.

Library School Entertains Mrs. Howland

Standing against a background of palms in the beautiful room of the Library School, of which she was the founder, Mrs. Max Franklyn Howland, of Boston, received the friends who came to greet her on Friday afternoon.

The occasion was a reception given by the faculty of the Library School in honor of Mrs. Howland, formerly Anne Wallace. The invitations had included as many as possible of the library friends of Mrs. Howland and the friends of the library itself. Therefore it included the men who had been interested in the library movement in Atlanta from the beginning of the Young Men's Library association in 1866 and with them as many of the trustees as it was possible to get together from that time until the present. Included in the invitations were the wives of the trustees and various men and women whose sympathy and enthusiasm had meant much to the library in the days when it was undergoing the vicissitudes of changing from a subscription library into a free public library.

It is almost commonplace to say in Atlanta that much of the success of the library movement for fifteen years depended upon Anne Wallace. This fact Mrs. Howland modestly disclaims and points with gratitude to the splendid succeeding companies of men who were always back of her efforts and without whom she could have accomplished nothing.

It was pleasant on Friday afternoon at the Library School party to see these distinguished citizens of Atlanta come in one by one to express their appreciation to the pretty woman who stood smiling to receive them and to express to them her gratitude for their help in the strenuous old days.

It was really a delightful gathering of old friends who had been united in the past by their common interest in the library movement and who were happy to find themselves together again.

Receiving with Mrs. Howland were the hostesses of the occasion, the faculty of the Library School: Mrs. Percival Sneed, Miss Katharine Wootten, Miss T. D. Barker, Miss Florence Bradley, and Miss Sara Lee Crumley. They were assisted by Mrs. Frank Foster, formerly librarian of the Carnegie Library, Miss Margaret Nutting and Miss Catherine Bleckley the nieces of Mrs. Howland, and the students who comprise the class of the Library School.

The room had been beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms and pink and white spring flowers with bonfable had for its decoration vases of pink and while spring flowers with bonbons and candles in the same colors.

Foulards

---They are here for you.

The new kinds, the scarce kinds, the right kinds, the rain-proof kinds,

---in our Great Silk Department At 79c yd. ---in a Great Monday's Sale

Bear in mind, please, that every piece is new, presenting all of the latest color tones and reflecting new French art in their printings.

Nothing does dame fashion favor so much as the silk, that is, soft, yet has body enough for wear.

This demand is met in Foulards. Their durability, their water and dust shedding qualities make them the most desirable of all spring silk fabrics.

You will find many new colors and many new printings in the lot.

Among the colors are the soft, new blues; delicate plums and prunes, buffs and tans, rich brown, mahogany, turquoise, and all pastel colors.

Some of the designs are very new, being examples of Japanese and Chinese art, and there is a great assortment of conventional, popular designs, in small effects.

This great collection will be ready for you in our silk aisle, tomorrow, at

OUR ASTROLOGER

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

HOROSCOPE FOR MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1914.

In the planet's sway
Find good luck today.

Many good influences prevail today. Astrologers find that the Sun, Mars and Jupiter are friendly and they advise activity in all matters of business.

Jupiter changes in aspect as the day advances, so that financiers and merchants who begin important transactions in the morning may discover that their least promising ventures are successful.

Since Jupiter reigns, as the star which presages good luck in commerce and industry, the time is particularly favorable. The stars announce, for initiative in new enterprises and the establishment of new places of business.

The Sun promises fair return for efforts to interest persons of prominence in investments or schemes that involve financial aid or business influence. There is a fortunate sign for solicitors and canvassers.

The good aspects of Mars tend to awaken ambition and energy. The conditions are said to be favorable for muscular development and athletic exercise.

It is an auspicious time for dealings with contractors, engineers, ironworkers, carpenters, lumbermen and machinists. Building is subject to lucky guidance from the stars.

Those who handle animals, whether in teaching, transporting or buying them, are fortunate under this configuration, which is supposed to bring success to circuses.

Warning is given of increase of pulmonary troubles this month.

It is predicted that a great improvement in business will be experienced next month by publishers. A boom in periodicals and books is indicated. This is said to be one sign of the reaction against dancing and moving picture shows.

Theaters are still controlled by sinister influences. The stars foreshadow many changes in management east and west.

Persons whose birthdate it is are warned against the reckless use of money. They have the prognostication of many benefits from friends and will succeed in business if they are careful in financial matters.

Farmers, builders and sailors should benefit especially. Girls will have advantageous offers of marriage.

Children born on this day have kindly stars to guide them. They will probably be exceedingly generous and will meet with great success. There is a happy augury for marriage.

Bauknight's New Home
The Old Trinity Church Site!

EVERY one of us revels in the thoughts and atmosphere of a home-their-own---their own home place.

It has been the ambition of the Bauknight Furniture Co. since the dawn of their business, just eight years ago, to be located where they could consider it home.

Their handsome five-story business structure---about completed---presents the beginning of the realization --- the introduction of the reality.

This future home has ever loomed ahead as a possibility of greater opportunities, both for themselves and their customers---and about April 15th, the Bauknight Furniture Co. will open wide their doors as a hearty welcome to shopping Atlanta.

The Blouse of Unusual Importance

This is no doubt because of the shortness of the Coats and Curving lines of the front, which brings the waist into prominence. And designers have outdone their past efforts to make Blouses measure in style and charm with the suit fashions. Collars that stand away from the neck—many of dainty, transparent organdie—cuffs that give a pretty finish to the coat—neck effects that emphasize the front lines of the coat—and a general effect that is soft and graceful, are very observant among the new blouses now on display—

$4.95, $5.95, $6.95 and up to $15.00

Cox College Notes

A debate will be given at an early date between the Philologian and Sidney Lanier Literary clubs of the school on the subject of "Woman's Suffrage." Excellent arguments are being prepared on both the affirmative and negative sides, and the debate promises to be one of the most interesting held at the college this year.

Mr. Walter P. Stanley is a recent addition to the music faculty of the college and he was heard in recital on Wednesday morning at chapel exercises. Mr. Stanley is well known as an exponent of the Leschetesky method of piano playing.

A meeting which was very interesting to quite a number of the students, was that held by the College Park Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon in the college auditorium. The subject of "Woman's Suffrage" was widely discussed by Miss Ida May Blount, of Atlanta. Mrs. V. C. Mason was in charge of the meeting for the afternoon and the talk by Miss Blount was followed by musical numbers by Miss Bessie and Miss Genevieve Vorhees and Mrs. Wallace.

A most delightful social and musical event of the past week at the college was the recital and reception on Saturday evening by students of the voice department. The program, which consisted of songs from the old and modern writers, and choruses by members of the choral union, was rendered in a thoroughly pleasing style. The auditorium was taxed to its capacity with a most representative audience, composed of many of the musical people of Atlanta.

Miss Mazie Gantt has as her guests for the week end Miss Martha Greene, of Newnan, and Miss Melba Alvis, of Atlanta.

Miss Rosabel Neal, of Thomson, is the guest of Miss Carrie Mobley.

Improvements on the college buildings have already begun and the hall of the Young Women's Christian association, the club rooms of the College Park Woman's club and the college library have been thoroughly remodeled.

The students and teachers are anticipating with much pleasure the coming of grand opera to Atlanta the latter part of the month. Quite a number of the students have reserved season tickets and it is expected that large parties will attend each performance.

MISS HORTENSE HERMANN.

A lovely visitor of the past week who was delightfully entertained during her stay with Mrs. Frank Winecoff. A series of parties were given for Miss Hermann, prior to her departure for her home in Eastman.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

WHILE very quiet socially, the past week has been marked by a number of small and informal parties given in honor of visitors who are spending the Lenten season in the city, and each afternoon of the early spring the country clubs have been the scene of informal gatherings for 5 o'clock tea.

The large social event of Tuesday evening was the second presentation of the "Genius" by the members of the Players' club for the benefit of the charity fund of the Elks. Much interest was manifested in the performance and a large and representative audience filled the Grand. Almost the entire cast who were seen on the initial occasion took part in the clever play. Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin, Miss Frances Clarke and Mr. Lamar Hill were new members who with the rest of the company received enthusiastic applause for the clever work done. At the conclusion the Players' club were guests of the Elks at a dinner party given at the Elks' club. In between the courses of the elaborate meal dancing was indulged in by the hosts and guests.

ONE of the most delightful events of the week was the dinner dance given Tuesday evening at the Georgian Terrace by Mr. Cator Woolford in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wells. The table represented a miniature Easter garden with tiny chicks, ducklings and bunnies nestled in the smilax festoons, which linked the two baskets, filled with spring blossoms on each end of the table, to the large basket in the center, which was filled with Poetica daffodils and Emperor narcissi.

Mr. Woolford's guests were Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wells, Mrs. Mary A. Cooledge, Miss Alice May Freeman, Miss Cobbie Vaughan, Miss Carolyn King, Miss Caroline Muse, Miss Mary Hines, Miss Lillian Logan, Mr. Norman Cooledge, Mr. F. P. Gamble, Mr. Julian Thomas, Mr. Walter C. Hill, Mr. Palmer Johnson, Mr. Prince Webster, Dr. J. T. Williams, Mr. Benson King, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Peeples, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Prade and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Theison.

INTEREST in the tea dances at the the Piedmont club remains unabated, and Wednesday afternoon society was largely represented in the numerous parties entertained.

A number of guests motored to the club an hour before the opening dance and sat in appreciative groups on the wide piazzas to enjoy the rare spring afternoon and the views of surrounding hills dotted with full-blown peach and plum blossoms and the new green of the trees.

Among those assembling later in the ball room for tea and dancing were Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Remson, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Peel, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Speer, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. C. Pedder, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Collier, Mr. and Mrs. James Jay Smith, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Hopkins, Judge and Mrs. Benjamin Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Thod Hammond, Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Atchison, Mrs. William Tift, Mrs. John Hill, Mrs. Charles Sciple, Mrs. Lee Lewman, Mrs. Max Howland, of Boston; Mrs. Charles W. Strickler, Mrs. George Boynton, Mrs. Henry S. Jackson, Mrs. Rhett, Mrs. G. K. Varden, Mrs. Frank West, Mrs. James Wesley White, Mrs. J. J. Gonzales, Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, Mrs. J. P. Kennedy, Mrs. Frank Spain, Mrs. Marion F. Harper, Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Mrs. W. W. Warren, of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Motte-Fitzsimmons, Mrs. S. Y. Tupper, Jr., Mrs. E. L. Bishop, Mrs. John Sommerville, Miss Ellen Stokes, of Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Ida Grant, of St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Marion Atchison, Miss Helen Darzan, Miss Jennie D. Harris, Miss Mary Helen Moody, Miss Alice May Freeman, Miss Mary Hines, Miss Virginia Bowman, Miss Alma Stanley, Miss Martha Boynton, Miss Max Scott, of Milwaukee; Miss Marie Sciple, Miss Mamie Ansley, Mr. Charles Sciple, Jr., Mr. Eugene Kelly, Mr. Rupert Haynes, Mr. Ralph Regan, Dr. Jere Osborne, Dr. Willis Regan, Mr. Van Astor Batchelor, Mr. Joseph Brown Connolly, Mr. Brooks Morgan, Mr. Joseph Gatins, Jr., Mr. Cator Woolford, Mr. Palmer Johnson, Mr. Stewart Witham, Mr. Clarence Knowles, Mr. J. S. Sliecr, Dr. E. G. Ballenger and Mr. Frank Calloway.

MRS. JAMES JAY SMITH, of New York, was a conspicuous visitor during the early part of the week as the guest of Mrs. J. J. Gonzales, and later shared a number of social courtesies with her husband who joined her Wednesday after- or a short stay in New Orleans.

Tuesday Mrs. James S. Akers gave a small luncheon in honor of Mrs. Smith and her hostess. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Smith was entertained at the Piedmont club by Mrs. James Wesley White, and Thursday afternoon Mrs. Thompson French gave a matinee party at the Forsyth theater in her honor.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Smith were entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Perryman and Saturday evening they were in a party having supper at the Piedmont hotel following the theater.

AMONG the charming affairs planned in honor of Miss Ellen Stokes, of Nashville, Tenn., who spent the past week with Miss Marion Atchison at the Georgian Terrace, was the lovely daffodil luncheon given by Miss Carolyn King entertained in her honor Friday afternoon.

A large Dutch basket filled with Poetic daffodils and narcissi, the handle of which was tied with white and yellow tulle, was placed in the center of the round luncheon table and encircling the basket were small crystal vases holding white and purple double violets. The places were indicated by imported Dutch favors bearing the names of the guests. The bonbons and ices were in the form of daffodils.

Miss Atchison and Miss Stokes were honor guests in small parties at the Forsyth theater Monday evening, and at the Atlanta theater Wednesday evening.

Two other pretty parties given in her honor were the Dutch tea at Hardy Tea at the Piedmont club, and Miss Helen McCarty's luncheon at her home on Piedmont avenue.

Several small parties were given at the Piedmont Saturday evening, and later a number of club members and friends joined the dinner guests and enjoyed the informal dance which followed.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright entertained in honor of Mrs. Max Howland, of Boston, Mass., and Mr. H. A. Lorick and Miss Emma Waldthour were hosts to a congenial group of friends.

Miss Thorn Entertained In Savannah

For Miss Helen Thorne, of Atlanta, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Allan Artley, a charming little sewing party was given by Mrs. A. A. Lawrence yesterday morning. Among the guests besides Mrs. Artley and Miss Thorpe, were Miss Cardo Kreneon, Miss Catharine Charlton, Miss Eliza Schley, Miss Helen Ellis, Miss Katherine Ives, Miss Aimee Battey, Mrs. Eugene Cay, Miss Helene Dixon, Miss Dorothea Karow, Miss Grace Carter, of Albany, N. Y.; Miss Jane Meldrim and Miss Emma Waldthour.—Savannah News.

MISS ELLEN STOKES.

Miss Stokes, who has been a member of the house party entertained by Miss Boyd at her winter home in Florida, has been the feted guest during the past week of Miss Marion Atchison at the Georgian Terrace. The series of parties given in honor of the young hostess and her attractive guest have been bright events of the week.

Happenings in Londontown

LONDON.—A lifting of the pall of pompous solemnity from Buckingham palace seems imminent. There is more entertaining at the present moment than there has been foryear s. The king's small bachelor dinners are to be extended; and a series of dinners given both by the king and queen to their intimate friends will be a feature in the weeks to come.

It is understood also that their majesties intend to visit several West End theaters very shortly, and the most apprehensive and comprehensive precautions are to be taken to ensure that the suffragettes gain no entrance or hearing during the visits. Though what harm can be inflicted on royalty by the fluttering of a handful of bills above the stalls, and the first ten words of a broken sentence, it is difficult to gather.

At Daly's, when the king and queen went to see "The Marriage Market," no one in the management knew anything of their intentions until half an hour before the curtain rose.

The house was nearly filled with gentlemen from Scotland Yard, holding complimentary tickets, of course.

Queen Alexandra was unable to be present at the performance of "Die Meistersinger," though everything had been arranged for her reception, as her majesty was suffering from a cold and cough, but there was a brilliant audience. Queen Alexandra, however, has now recovered and was walking in the park in her usual health, with Miss Charlotte Knollys, a couple of days later.

Some of the papers have said that Queen Mary has been going over all the old rooms in Buckingham palace in order to find art treasures. They were mistaken; the king had already asked Queen Alexandra to make whatever selection she pleased, and nothing now remains of any great value.

King George and Queen Mary paid a visit to the Y. M. C. A. recently, and I am told that the king and queen saw the following verse hung up in the secretary's office:

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song,
But the man worth while is the man who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

"What an excellent verse," said Queen Mary. "Capital," said the king. "It reminds me of the first rule in the navy, 'Always keep your hair on.'" And his majesty was so pleased with the recollection of the rule which governed his life from an early stage in his career, that he repeated it several times for the benefit of others, and with a genial smile for his sailor son, Prince Albert.

Owing to the numerous intermarriages of so many royalties, our own royal family will soon be related to every reigning house in Europe. The engagement of the Crown Prince of Greece and the Princess Elizabeth of Rumania affords an interesting example of the ramifications of the relationships of our royal family. Prince George of Greece is doubly related to our royalties. He is grand-nephew to Queen Alexandra, and his mother was Monsier Andre Bellessort, the noted French lecturer, will address the French Alliance Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Ansley hotel.

This is the first time that the city of Atlanta will have the pleasure of hearing a French lecture in French.

Monsier Bellessort holds an eminent place in the literary domain. He is a critic of great value and has written several books, among them are "La Jeune Amerique," "Lions Invisible" and others. He is a collaborator in the la Revue des deux Mondes, la Revue Francaise and la Revue Bleue.

He is lecturing all over America as the official lecturer of the L'Alliance Francaise. He has already everywhere with great success, principally in New York, where he delivered several lectures before the members of the L'Alliance Francaise who founded the French theater.

The subject chosen by the members of the L'Alliance is "France" and "The Paris that Foreigners do Not See."

The subject will treat on French theaters, the French homes, manners, traditions and customs of the French as a nation.

Monsieur Bellessort no doubt will attract a large audience as he is much sought after by the literary clubs of Paris.

All members desiring to meet Monsieur Bellessort will be able to do so by arriving a little earlier than the time set for the lecture as he will leave for New Orleans immediately after the close of his address.

Outline of Lecture by Monsieur Andre Bellesort

Interesting Gossip of Interesting People

Many original and clever features are being planned for the social side of the biennial, the mammoth meeting of club women to be held in Chicago in June. This assembly is attracting attention throughout the country and much interest is being manifested in the program, advance news of which is appearing almost daily.

"Sanctuary" for the Club Women.

A production of "Sanctuary," Percy MacKaye's bird-masque, is to be one of the main features of the biennial convention of the American Federation of Woman's clubs to be held in Chicago in June. M. MacKaye is receiving almost daily applications for the right to produce the play, as it is admirably adapted for amateur production by dramatic or nature societies. It may be given indoors or out, with a large chorus and elaborate dances, or with a small cast and the simplest dancing. In its book form issued by Stokes, "Sanctuary" contains full directions for staging, while the magnificent color photographs of Arnold Genthe furnish practical hints for costuming and setting.

Diana Watts.

Diana Watts, the Englishwoman who believes she has discovered the secret of the ancient Greek's physical and mental supremacy, arrived in New York on the Lusitania. Being a student of physical exercise, Mrs. Watts, some five years ago, turned to the study of classic sculpture in an effort to find the sources of Greek perfection. Eminent scientists agree that she has succeeded in reconstructing the system of bodily training used by the Greeks and in discovering their radically different method of carriage, together with the vital principles of balance and tension which they understood. As a result she is now able, naturally and easily, to assume the positions of ancient statues hitherto puzzling to scholars and to do with little effort feats that would be impossible for even the strongest gymnasts and dancers trained under present methods. But above all Mrs. Watts holds that the most important result of approximating the Greek ideal is the cleared and strengthened mind that comes from a body perfectly under control.

Mrs. Watts has come to this country to supervise the publication of her book, "The Renaissance of the Greek Idol," and to demonstrate her ideas. Her first lecture will be at the British embassy at Washington. Others at the leading universities and before such clubs as the Colony club of New York, will follow.

Wu Tingfang on American Women.

"The intellect of the American woman is equal, if not superior, to that of the men," says Dr. Wu Tingfang, late Chinese minister to the United States, in "America Through the Spectacles of an Oriental Diplomat." "American women are good conversationalists, and many of them are eloquent and endowed with 'the gift of gab.' One of the cleverest and wittiest speeches I have ever heard was from a woman who spoke at a public meeting on a public question. They are also good writers, and their work shows profound insight and wide culture. Naturally such women cannot be expected to play second fiddle. They exercise great influence, and when married they are their husbands submit willingly to their tactful rule, and gladly obey their commands without feeling that they are servants. I would advise any married woman who complains of her husband being unruly and unpleasant to take a lesson from the ladies of America."

"Fashion is the work of the devil," observes Dr. Wu Tingfang. "When he made up his mind to enslave mankind he found in fashion his most effective weapon. Does woman's dress protect her from the cold? The fact that a large number of people daily suffer from colds arouses the suspicion that their dress is at fault. I do not believe that the wearer of a fashionable costume is either comfortable or contented. As to decency, I cannot say that the American dress fulfills this object. It is very curious that what is considered as indecency in one country is thought to be quite proper in another. During the hot summer many Chinese workingwomen wear nothing on the upper part of their bodies except a chest protector. In western countries women would never think of doing this, even during the season of extreme heat; yet they do not mind uncovering their shoulders as low as possible for a dinner party, or an evening in the ball room or the theater, even in the depth of winter."

To Revise National Constitution Of D. A. R. at Called Meeting

An important session will precede the national conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution to be held April 19 through the 26th in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, of Savannah, will be among the prominent Georgia members who will leave for Washington Tuesday to attend the meeting of the committee which has been named to revise the national constitution of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which work was carried over from last year, as that was the presidential election year.

Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, of Birmingham, Ala., who offered the resolution to revise the constitution, is chairman of the committee on reunion, which includes Mrs. Ammon, of Pittsburg, Pa.; Mrs. Bassett, of Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Sterling, of Connecticut; Mrs. Noble, of the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Morgan. Mrs. William C. Story, the president general, will meet with the committee, and the first meeting is called for Wednesday afternoon, April 8. The different states, through their regents, have been invited to send suggestions of changes which they think advisable, and these will be given consideration by the revision committee, whose work, when completed, will be submitted to a lawyer and when perfected will be presented at the national conference to be held in Washington the following week.

Miss Slaton, treasurer, is now issuing membership cards and the alumnae are requested to send their dues.

Dr. Griggs delighted two very large audiences last spring in his discussion of "Art and the Human Spirit." He will have a cordial welcome and an enthusiastic hearing in his forthcoming lectures.

Whittaker-Haner Wedding Plans

The wedding of Miss Etta Stuart Whitaker and Mr. Carl Haner, Jr., of New York City, will be a brilliant church affair, taking place Monday evening, April 13, at All Saints, church.

Rev. W. W. Memminger will officiate and lending impressiveness to the beautiful Episcopal ritual, will be the full vested chorus which will lead the bridal party.

The wedding attendants will include Miss Louise Massey, maid of honor; Miss Katherine West and Miss Agnes Kime, bridesmaids; Mr. George Bauer, of Savannah, best man; Mr. Stratton Hard, Mr. Stanley Wimbish, Mr. Newton Wing, Mr. Homer Cook, Mr. Walter Aichel and Mr. Allison Marsh, ushers.

A reception to the immediate families and a limited number of friends will follow at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. C. Courtlandt Whitaker, on Greenwood avenue.

The Panama Canal

An illustrated lecture on the Panama canal and its surroundings, will be given by Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, on Wednesday afternoon, April 15 at 4 o'clock in the Sunday school room of St. Luke's church.

The entertainment will be given under the auspices of committee No. 9, of the Woman's Guild, and assisting on the program will be Mrs. Robert Blackburn and the Misses Johnson.

The public is invited.

Not a little consternation was caused at a party recently by a beautiful American debutante who, owing to the tightness of her skirt, had the misfortune to get mixed up in her train and fell down in the royal presence. She was assisted to her feet with some difficulty, and retired almost in tears. Her majesty was very kind and gracious about the matter, but hinted pretty plainly that she had a great objection to these tight skirts which make it so difficult for women to walk, let alone courtesy. As a matter of fact, Queen Mary had laid down rigorous rules as to the width of the skirt which ladies of the royal household must wear.

To My Future Love

(Fashion declares that women shall wear pink and blue hair and paint their faces in various startling hues.)

How shall I praise thee in verses estatical,
Light of my spirit and queen of my heart,
Lady of pulchritude polychromatical,
Ultimate triumph of Futurist art?
Time was I caroled of locks that were aureate,
Raved of your eyes that were limpid
and blue,
Now though I sing with the skill of a
laureate,
How can I properly celebrate you?
You with the hair that is blue or carnelian,

Purple or orange—according to styles—
Making a mock of the well known chameleon,
Beating the spectrum by several miles;
Lips that are yellow and cheeks that are violet,
Eyebrows and lashes a beautiful pink—
How can I lilt them in ballad or triolet
When I have only one color of ink?

Druggists have raided the realms pharmaceutical Seeking for pigments and powders and paint
Which would impart to your hair and your cuticle
Colors to make a kaleidoscope faint.
Yes, you are lovely—and yet I prefer to go
Far, far away from the Futurist guise;
Gazing upon you has given me vertigo—
Lady, you're fearfully hard on my eyes!

A delightful event of Thursday afternoon among the very young set was the party at which little Julia Lowry Meador celebrated her fourth birthday. In the center of the charming group is the young hostess and her little cousin, Susan Broyles. To the left is little Miss Mary Cohen who with Grace Goldsmith assisted in entertaining the little folks.

FEMINISM DEFINED AND OBJECT CLEARLY OUTLINED

The time has come to define feminism.

That is the opinion of Robert Sterling Yard, editor of the Century Magazine, who believes that feminism can no longer be ignored.

"The genius is in the blood of our women," says Mr. Yard in the April Century, under the heading, "The Revolt of the Women." "The principle is in the heart of our race. The word is daily in the pages of our newspapers. The doctrine and its corollaries are on every tongue. The hope of it, often unrecognized and denied, lies inherent in the soul of every woman. The dread of it rests heavily upon the ignorant, the timid, the unduly conservative, and those who have outlived the capacity for unfamiliar thinking.

What Feminism Is Not.

"But what is feminism? Is it, as the superficial allege, the desire of some women to assume the work and the places and the power and the responsibilities and the rewards of men? Some women desire these things, no doubt. But this is not feminism.

"Is it the desire of a few experimental spirits to abolish marriage, and substitute for lifelong monogamy temporary relationships dissoluble at will? This is the dream of a scattered few, especially in Germany, where a small group is experimenting in public. But it is not feminism.

"Is it the suggestion of certain reckless ones to abolish the home and have the state bring up our children in order that women may be free to experiment variously with life unhampered by the schemes of mere nature? This has been seriously set forth by several daring writers, and is occasionally advocated by irresponsible orators at gatherings of the ultra-advanced. But it is not feminism.

"Nor can feminism be defined by any of the numerous other suggestions of impractical imaginations spurred to abnormal activity by sudden release from the thought conventions of the past.

"Granted that most of the so-called feminist writing and speaking so far have dealt with the scheme of visionaries. But visionaries and fanatics are always the first and the loudest in any public cause. The social reorganization now in slow, orderly progress throughout the civilled world was heralded two decades ago by anarchists and nihilists.

"Granted that the opponents of feminism seem to have, in the silence of all others, authority for their assumption that the theories of these hasty irresponsibles are the theories of the movement itself. But the hastily terrified are as fatuous as the hastily enthused. Neither deserves the credence of the seer.

Let Us Fish in Deep Waters.

"Let us, then, ignore these impractical doctrines of the hasty. Let us fish for our definition in the still waters beneath the troubled surface. Let us study the Revolt of the Women not in the souls of the volatile few, but of the earnest millions of wives and mothers and workers who are thinking silently in their homes. Here alone shall we find the attitude upon which to base our substantial definition, for these are the women who eventually will determine the fact.

"And here, first of all, we find that feminism does not mean the usurpation by women of the place and the power of men. Psychological sex differences absolutely must have their way in the end despite prophets and propagands, and none but dreamers will deny it. When women have all the rights they demand, together with the obligations that go with them, still they will be women. They will no more compete then in departments of life unsuited to their strength and genius than they do today. None but a few enthusiastic theorists believe they will.

Women's Spirits Will Be Freed.

"There is this difference, though, and here somewhere lies our definition, that then women's spirits will be freed. For the first time in history, whether in competition with men or not, they will labor without the bond and the stigma of inferiority.

Object of the Revolt.

"To meet life undaunted; to labor, to succeed or to fail, as human individuals only; to feel handicapped by nature only, not by men; to seek their own success in self chosen appropriate paths unhampered by laws or conventions from which men are exempt—these, we take it, constitute the ultimate object of the revolt of the women.

"And that sums up feminism, considered as a great, instinctive human movement. It is another and a very great step toward the realization of human freedom. Freeing the women follows naturally, and in civilization's own good time, upon freeing slaves.

"Feminism, then, is in essence and fact a spiritdal attitude. But it follows, as the night the day, that, to be effective, there is involved the power as well as the principle of freedom. Women must become the civil and the social equals of men. It makes little difference whether or not they shall use this power; the fact that they possess it, rather that they should not be forbidden its possession, is the magic that will break the shackles. The object of feminism is to make women equal stockholders with men in the business of life.

"Like every demand for human freedfact a spiritual attitude. But it follit does come to pass, the human race will attain for the first time its full efficiency. Meantime let us possess our souls in peace so far as concerns those who are proclaiming creeds which civilization never will grant."

Before Easter Plantings

Of all the weeks in the year the week before Easter always shows the most gardening and planting.

Good Friday has always been the first day in the year that it was considered safe to plant beans in and around Atlanta.

All through this week it is safe and timely to plant beets, radishes, spring turnips, lettuce, onions, carrots, etc. Beginning next Friday start beans, squash, cucumbers, etc., as well as the tenderest flowers.

The home garden is a producer, not an expense account. The vegetables from even the smallest of city back yard gardens make an annual saving in the store bills, as well as better health through increased use of vegetables.

This is the right week to start, if you have not already done so.

Clean Up, Paint and Plant

It's a fine idea to clean up and paint up in the effort to have a clean and fresh looking Atlanta for the "Shriners." But that's only for a week.

We are thinking about ourselves and other Atlantians who have to stay here all the year. We want an all-summer-and-fall "Atlanta Beautiful."

A cleaned up look don't stay; the freshness of paint soon dims; but the flower beds you plant in the side and front yards grow larger and better and brighter through the whole summer.

Patch up the ragged spots in the lawn with grass seed; start beds of geraniums, coleus, salvia, etc; fill up the porch boxes and put ferns on the porches. These will make a sure enough, all season "Atlanta Beautiful."

Ferns Fine, healthy specimens. 60c and $1.00 each.

Geraniums Latest introductions. Large size flowers; best shades and colors. 15c cents; $1.50 per dozen.

Big Ferns Magnificent; extra large. $1.50 and $2.00 each.

Pansies Hastings' Pansies are superb. Come and see them. 50 cents dozen.

Tuberose Bulbs Double Excelsior Pearl Blooming size bulbs. 15 cents dozen. By mail, 25 cents dozen.

Gladioli Bulbs Finest new shades and colors. Dozen, 20 cents. By mail, postpaid, 35 cents.

Dahlias Big field grown roots—quick bloomers. Six colors. 15 cents each; $1.50 dozen.

Sago Palms Importation just in from Japan. Bulbs from 1 to 7 lbs. 15 cents pound.

Tomato Plants In fresh every morning from our greenhouses; Hastings' best varieties; early, medium and late. 25 cents dozen.

Free Readings By Famous Paris Psychologist

Awakens New Interest In Strange Science

Prof. Clay Burton Vance, the well known Paris psychologist, is being literally besieged with letters as a result of his recent offer to send post-free to all applicants a test reading of their life and characteristics. Most everyone has some question of personal interest to ask, and in Prof. Vance advises on practically all important matters, such as business, marriage, speculation, partnerships, friends, enemies, journeys, etc., etc. he finds many eager to accept his liberal offer. A noteworthy feature of Prof. Vance's new method of giving readings is his abstinence from the old-time practices of Astrologers, Palmists, and Phrenologists and natural result being that men high in the ranks of these professions viewed the "new-idea" man with more or less scepticism, and it was not until after he gave indisputable proof of the accuracy of his system that the statements of scientific men were forthcoming. The popularity of his method, however, and the fact that the more intelligent classes consult him may be accredited to two important reasons, i.e., the amazing accuracy of his readings, and the fact that all letters addressed to him are kept strictly confidential. It is said that Prof. Vance enjoys the distinction of having been consulted by more European rulers and more people of high social and political position than any other man of his profession.

Prof. Vance, whose address in Suite 705-P, Palais Royal, Paris, France, proposes to continue giving free readings for a short time, and invites all who are interested to write to him. In making application for a free reading be sure to give the date, month, and year of your birth, and state, whether Mr., Mrs. or Miss, also copy the following lines in your own handwriting:

"Your power is marvelous
So people write,
Please read my life,
Are my prospects bright?"

Be sure to address your letter plainly. Postage on letters to France is 5 cents. Those who wish to do so may enclose 10 cents (stamps of your own country) for return postage, etc.

DARKENS GRAY HAIR

You Can Have Beautiful, Dark Hair and Lots of it by Applying Q-Ban—Darkens Evenly.

When your hair turns gray, faded, white or streaked with gray—if hair is falling out or is brittle, or you have dandruff or itching scalp, try the following: On retiring rub "Q-Ban" on hair and scalp like a shampoo. Let hair fall free and dry overnight. The gray disappears and a few more applications of Q-Ban your hair is beautifully and evenly darkened and quickly becomes thick, glossy and lustrous. Q-Ban stops falling hair, promotes its growth, stops itching scalp and dandruff. Q-Ban gives a delightful feeling of refreshment and cleanliness to the scalp—as Q-Ban is not sticky or messy. Darkens hair so evenly and naturally no one can tell. You can't make a mistake in using Q-Ban, as it does the hair and scalp good at any time. A large 7-oz. bottle costs only 50c at Edmondson's Drug Stores, 11 N. Broad St., 104 N. Pryor St., Atlanta, Ga. Out-of-town people supplied by mail: Call or write. (Advt.)

"Brownatone" Tints Your Hair In a Minute

All So-Called "Restorers" That Claim to "Gradually Restore" Color to Your Hair Are Simply Slow Acting Dyes.

The straightest road and the shortest cut to the certainty of an attractive and beautiful appearance is the use of "Brownatone" Hair Stain.

This preparation will instantly change gray, streaked or faded hair to the softest and richest golden brown, medium or dark brown or black—just as you wish. Just comb or brush it into your hair.

"Brownatone" will always give you the most pleasing results and you need have had no previous experience.

Impossible of detection, will not rub or wash off, and needs retouching only as the hair grows out.

"Brownatone" hair stain is far superior to "dyes," and is absolutely harmless in every way.

Sold by all up-to-date druggists, in two sizes, 25c and $1.00. If you are offered a substitute, save annoyance by refusing it and ordering "Brownatone" direct from the makers.

Insist on "Brownatone" at your hairdresser's.

A trial bottle and interesting booklet will be mailed for 10 cents.

The simple way to keep your baby well

See that your baby gets enough fresh air, sleeps a certain number of hours each day, wears the right clothes, and gets the proper food. Then you will have a well baby, a happy baby, a rosy, dimpled baby.

If, in spite of all your loving care, baby loses weight, grows pale and restless, he is not getting the right food. A well-nourished baby is seldom sick.

Nurse your baby if you can. If your milk fails, do not give him cow's milk—the milk intended for strong little calves, not for your delicate baby. Give baby the safe substitute—so like mother's milk that he will never know the difference—

Nestlé's Food

Nestlé's is pure, rich milk from healthy cows, milked in clean Dairies, purified and changed so that the tiniest, frailest baby can digest it. The heavy tough curd is made soft and fleecy as in mother's milk, and the special things your baby needs to build a healthy little body are added. Just add cold water and boil, and it is ready for your baby.

Send For Our "Better Babies" Chart

It tells you all you should know about your baby—how much he should weigh, how big his head should be, what his chest, arms and legs should measure when he should begin to teeth, walk and talk. It tells you how to keep your baby well, how to make him a "Better Baby."

Send the Coupon today for the "Better Babies" Chart, for our helpful Book for mothers, and a big free sample box of Nestlé's—enough for 12 feedings. Don't delay. Your baby's future health depends on the Food you give him now.

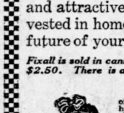
Make Home Bright With "Fixall."

Don't let the contrast between the gay life down town and a dull, unattractive home drive some of the family away and leave the others discontented and unhappy. There's no excuse for rough, unsightly floors, dingy wood work and scarred, unsightly furniture since Fixall has been made so that anyone with the love of beauty and the will to work can use it. Sold at a price that anyone can pay.

FIXALL
"THE FINISH THAT LASTS"

brings back the pleasing appearance of newness to floors, wood work and furniture, makes them bright and attractive—keeps them so. A few dollars invested in home brightening may mean much to the future of your boy or girl.

Fixall is sold in cans holding one-fourth pint to one gallon at 15c to $2.50. There is a right size can for every purpose at your dealers.



"Little Miss Fixall" has prepared a series of transparent illustrations which show just how your room would look finished in the various Fixall colors. These illustrations are a source of information to the housewife who wants the best color effect on floors and wood work and are very interesting to the "Little Miss Fixall" in your home. EATONTON

EATONTON, Ga.—A gala week for the social side of Eatonton Methodism rightly justly characterize the two all-important features of the past week's social calendar. Monday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hearn, on Jefferson street, the ladies of the Woman's Missionary societies were entertained.

Monday evening the basement of the First Methodist church was the scene of rare hospitality, and just such a social gathering as has not assembled in Eatonton in a long, long time before. Mayor L. M. Pennington was a toastmaster of the evening, making a very happy introductory speech, after which Dr. S. A. Clarke, chairman of the board of stewards; Editor H. Reid Hearn, J. E. Reid and T. G. Greene spoke in a happy vein upon the subjects assigned them. Visiting pastors were Dr. R. W. Rehabe, Rev. A. F. McMahon, Rev. J. L. Hall and Rev. C. E. Hughes. The long meter doxology concluded the evening's pleasure, as fully expressive of the joy and thanksgiving of those present.

Judge and Mrs. W. B. Wingfield are spending this week at Oconee Spring.

Miss Chloe Thompson, of Macon, spent the past week end with relatives here.

John W. Nelson, of Emory college, visited his parents here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hudson were recent guests of relatives in Madison.

Miss Eunice Bronson has been delightfully entertained as the guest of Miss Marjorie Kimbrough, at Brenau college; Miss Louise Marshall, at Bessie Tift, and friends in Macon, while en route home.

Mrs. Pierce Jackson left Thursday for her future home at Athens.

Mrs. Will Larned, of New York, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bell.

Miss Leila Turner entertained the Kill Care Klub at "Sleepy Hollow," Monday evening in honor of Miss Ouida Caraker, of Zebulon, who has been a very popular guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. F. McMahon for several weeks. After an interesting series of games of rook, a delicious salad course was served.

Miss Emie Lancaster was at home from Macon for the past week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Marchman and children, of White Plains, are guests of Mrs. Flourney Adams.

Miss Cecil Ingram has returned home after a visit to Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom McKibben and baby, Carolyn, and Rev. A. F. McMahon, visited Jackson Thursday.

Miss Mary Eugenia Reid was a week-end guest of Mrs. Colquit Greer at The Putnam hotel.

Friday evening Miss Dorothy Collins entertained very delightfully, the young social set complimentary to Miss Chloe Thompson, of Macon, a guest for the past week-end.

Miss Lena Lancaster was at home from Bessie Tift for the past week-end.

NEWS OF Women and Society

Third Ward Civic Club

The meeting of the Third Ward Civic club was held Friday at the home of the president, Mrs. John Justis.

Plans were made for the summer's work. Mrs. F. V. L. Smith being made chairman of the committee. An invitation to visit Grady hospital was received with thanks.

An appeal is hereby made to all women of the Ward to take an active interest in "Clean-up Day," April 18, as it is desired to have all citizens help in this good work. The president announced that a contest would be held, from May 1 to September 1, for the greatest improvement in the ward's front yards, and cleanest backyards, the prize being the possession of the loving cup won by the club, some years ago. It is planned to give the winner the right to keep the cup, one year, and all desiring to enter this contest, are requested to send their names and addresses to the Secretary, Mrs. A. S. Wilson, 79 Augusta avenue.

The entire club will make a visit to Battle Hill sanitarium, on Wednesday morning, April 8, for the purpose of planting flowers on the grounds. They will be met at the end of the West View car line by automobile, and be given transportation to the sanitarium. A large number of women will attend the meeting at Clarkston on May 5. Dr. Hooper T. Trimz will represent the club at the biennial at Chicago. At the meeting, will be held the annual election of officers. The nominating committee consists of Mrs. A. S. Wilson, Mrs. F. V. L. Smith and Mrs. C. P. White.

This meeting will be held at the residence of the secretary on Augusta avenue.

To Bride-Elect

Among the affairs given in honor of Miss Ina Chambers, a pretty bride-elect of the week, was the matinee party at which Mrs. Albert Cates entertained at the Forsyth theater Tuesday afternoon, and the luncheon given by Mrs. John Landers Thursday afternoon at her home in West End.

Yellow daffodils and fragrant white narcissi formed the artistic centerpiece of the prettily appointed table, on which covers were laid for Miss Chambers and her guest, Miss Ruth Chamber, of Talladega, Ala., Miss Emma Wallace, Miss Edith Martin, Miss Virginia Withers, Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Roy Richberg, Mrs. Tipton, Mrs. A. L. Cates and Mrs. J. O. Chambers.

Easter Egg Hunt Postponed

The Easter egg hunt and bazar to have been given by the members of St. Elizabeth's guild has been postponed until the afternoon of Monday, April 13, and will be held as formerly planned, at the residence of Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown.

Many plans are being made to make this occasion one of the very delightful events of the Easter season.

Report of Suffrage Meeting

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, Mrs. Woodall, president, announced the reports of the various committees.

These were responded to by Dr. Ware, Mrs. A. C. Daniels, Mr. J. C. Logan, secretary of the Associated Charities, Mrs. Kate Jolly and Mr. Dixon.

Mr. L. J. Grossman was appointed to represent the association at the time of his address to the Federation of Trades in Macon, at an early date.

The following committee was appointed to convey to Dr. Hugh K. Walker, the regrets of the association at his departure for California: Mrs. McLendon, Mrs. Grossman, Miss Eugenia Estill, Miss Koch, Mrs. Kline, Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Hails and Mrs. Moore.

It was decided to hold a "Votes for Women" lunch room during the Shriners' convention in May. It was enthusastically endorsed and the ways and means committees with several other members and all others willing to help, were instructed to begin preparations at once.

The president announced that the association's program for several months to come would be the study of the bills to be presented to the legislature, the first being the sanitary bill to be explained by a physician.

The next meeting will be held Thursday with Mrs. Puckett.

Farewell Concert

Herr de Cortez Wolffungen will make his last appearance in Atlanta in a concert given under the auspices of the music committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, Mrs. William Lawson Peel, chairman.

He will be assisted by Mrs. Carthew Yerteson, Alexander von Skibinsky and Miss Mildred Harrison, accompanist.

The concert will take place Tuesday evening at the Baptist Tabernacle at 8:15 oclock.

Herr Wolffungen will arrange a beautiful program for this last concert.

Make Use of Your Credit

Enjoy Home Comforts While Paying for Them

Nine-tenths—probably more—of the world's business is done on credit. If credit were suddenly withdrawn commerce would collapse. Big business and little business—all depend upon credit.

No less is the necessity of credit in the home life and personal transactions. The home itself is, in most cases, bought on credit. Many luxuries become available through the convenience of credit. Leading automobile makers, even, extend liberal credit to buyers.

Make use of your credit privileges in buying Furniture and Homefurnishings. Our Divided Payment System is the fairest and most liberal credit plan ever devised.

We will furnish your new home or refurnish the old home on credit—making "Terms to Suit YOU." You can be using and enjoying your furniture while paying for it.

So why inconvenience yourself to pay all cash or deny yourself comforts while "saving up to buy"?

Crackers Trim Boston Braves In Second Game

Locals Get Away to Early Lead and Were Never Headed. Gil Price Went Full Route, and Showed Lots of Stuff

By Innis Brown

Pursuing steadfastly the theory that perseverance conquers all things the Crackers realize on the proposition Saturday afternoon, when they climbed abroad the juicy end of a 4 to 3 score with the brave lads from old Boston. For a good portion of two weeks the home guard has been doggedly following the Bostonians, and on Saturday they overtook and passed Stallings' entry in the great Tener handicap.

It may be stated in fact that the Crackers caught up with the visiting cavalcade Friday when they tied the count, and Saturday they began just where they left off the preceding day. You may be quite sure of that fact, for our lads manifested offensive tactics in the very first frame of Saturday's battle. They counted one then, and added another in the fourth. The Braves shoved one over in the fifth, and drew up along side the Cracker contingent in the first half of the sixth. But in the last part of this inning the home talent scored another and still another in the eighth, while the visitors could only squeeze out a third in the getaway inning.

Price Pitched.

Gil Price drew the hurling job for the home folk, and the old boy was there with the proper ingredients in great bunches. The Bostonians raked his crossfire for seven safe wallops, and he issued one base on balls. However, a glance at the score by innings will reveal the fact that the three marks registered by the foe were levied in as many innings, showing that they were having about as much success at hanging their safeties as would attend efforts to elect a Republican governor in Georgia. On just two occasions did the visitors tap Gil for a hit when it would score a run. Maranville punched a Texas leaguer to right in the fifth, counting Gowdy. Schmidt counted Dugey on a clean safety in the sixth. The other run resulted on a force play on which Griffith counted.

Dick Rudolph, one of the most dependable right-handers on the Braves' staff, was thrown in to curb the locals in the final soiree, and, had his support been gilt-edged, he might have turned the trick. However, his co-operating defense split at the seams in a couple of places, and the home boys took advantage of the disintegration in quick style. Martin and Evers were the guilty parties in the opening chapter, when Smith's men counted the first run. Then in the sixth, Dugey, who had been sent in by Evers to relieve the latter, made a misdirected pass, and another run resulted eventually.

Few Features.

There were really few features offered during the game, aside from the fact that both teams were working like beavers to get the verdict. The Braves relished but little the thought of losing to the locals, and the latter were decidedly averse to letting that aggregation get out of town without hooking them for at least one contest. From the first tap to the final out, it was a genuine battle.

If there was any particular feature, it was Flanagan's work with the stick. Four times the Steamer faced the opposing hurlers, and four times he reached first. On the initial attempt, he landed by virtue of the smothering of Welchonce at the plate. His second trip resulted in a triple. The third time he singled, and the last effort ended in a base on balls. He also scored three runs.

As stated above, the Crackers scored in the first round. After Maranville had thrown McConnell out, Harry Holland got on through Martin's error. When Evers dropped Maranville's throw trying to force Holland at second on Welchonce's tap, both were safe. Holland scored on Long's drive to left. In the fourth, Flanagan tripled and counted on Munch's long fly to Collins. Again in the sixth, Flanagan beat out a hunt, and when Dugey tried to cut him off at second on Lynch's roller, he hit the Steamer in the back and both were safe. Flanagan hiking on to third. He counted on another long fly by Munch. Flanagan walked in the eighth, and scored on Lynch's double to center.

Boston scored the first run in the fifth on Gowdy's double down the left field line, and Maranville's Texas leaguer to short right. In the sixth, Dugey singled to left, was sacrificed down, and scored on Schmidt's safe drive to the same field. The third and last run was registered on singles by Griffith and Schmidt, and Holland's fumble on Martin's roller.

Morley Jennings, the young short stop candidate, obtained from Hartford in the Eastern association, reported Saturday afternoon, and was in a uniform but did not get in the line-up.

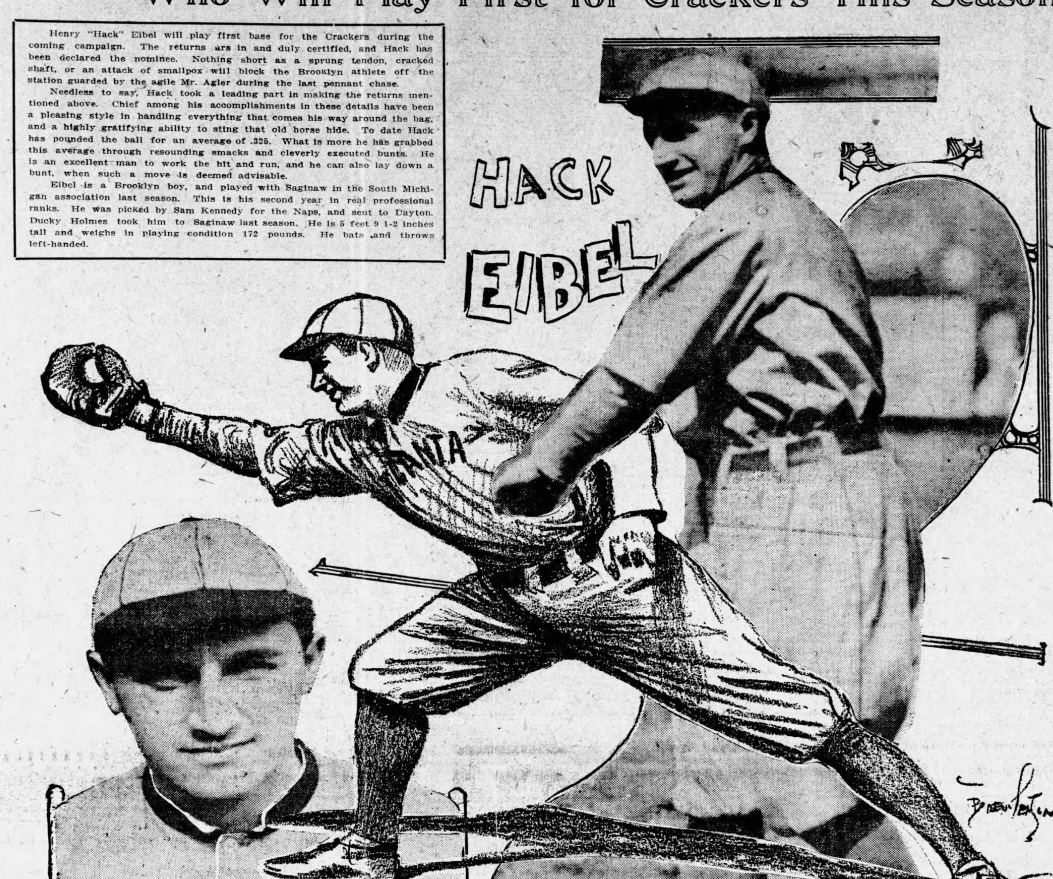
Left-Handed Athlete From the City of Churches Who Will Play First for Crackers This Season

Henry "Hack" Eibel will play first base for the Crackers during the coming campaign. The returns are in and duly certified, and Hack has been declared the nominee. Nothing short as a sprung tendon, cracked shaft, or an attack of smallpox will block the Brooklyn athlete off the station guarded by the agile Mr. Agler during the last pennant chase.

Needless to say, Hack took a leading part in making the returns mentioned above. Chief among his accomplishments in these details have been a pleasing style in handling everything that comes his way around the bag, and a highly gratifying ability to sting that old horse hide. To date Hack has pounded the ball for an average of .325. What is more he has grabbed this average through resounding smacks and cleverly executed bunts. He is an excellent man to work the hit and run, and he can also lay down a bunt, when such a move is deemed advisable.

Eibel is a Brooklyn boy, and played with Saginaw in the South Michigan association last season. This is his second year in real professional ranks. He was picked by Sam Kennedy for the Naps, and sent to Dayton. Ducky Holmes took him to Saginaw last season. He is 5 feet 9 1-2 inches tall and weighs in playing condition 172 pounds. He bats and throws left-handed.



In the games to date, Eibel has shown great versatility both at bat and in the field. He is rapidly making solid with Manager Smith and the fans. He is likely to make them for get Joe Agler.

Motordrome to Open on May 9

D. Noon Hudson Will Have Charge of Board Speedway, First Races Shriners' Week

The local motordrome under the direction of D. Noon Hudson, will open a spring season of motorcycle races on May 9. The first meet will be held during Shriners' week, and will have a place among the scheduled attractions for the large delegation of visitors.

Hudson announces that practically all of the boys who rode here last year will return, and that in addition to these several other stars of the board track have signed for the meeting. Among those who appeared here last season will be Morty Graves, who will captain the riders, Tex Richards, Henry Lewis, Fred Luther, George Lockner, Revel, Schwartz and Flickenstein. In addition to these, the Whittler brothers of Salt Lake City, and the Samuelson brothers of the same city will appear. It is likely that Arthur Chappelle will ride here also.

The track will be put in good condition, and a huge cloth covering has been contracted for to prevent postponements, when the track would otherwise be too wet for riding. A large number of cushion seats will be provided for the spectators. A special added feature for Shriners' week will be the appearance of several crack bands, which will play during the evening's program. Profiting from the experience gained last year, Hudson states that everything pertaining to the game will be handled in the very best shape, and the renewal of the races should prove a popular move.

Vandy Shaded Tenn. in Second

Commodores Evened Series With Volunteers by Winning Saturday's Battle in Ninth

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

KNOXVILLE, April 4.—First baseman Morgan's slashing two-bagger to left field in the first half of the ninth inning with two on won the game for Vanderbilt here this afternoon 9 to 8. Tennessee had been leading the procession in rather strong fashion until the fifth inning when the Commodores hammered Dawsons curves to every portion of the field for a total of five hits and four runs, a double and triple being mixed up in the fusilade.

Tennessee scored one run in the first inning, two in the second and then bombarded Pitcher Lattimer for four counters in the fourth frame. It then looked as though the Vols were in a good way to win, but Vanderbilt came strong in the fifth and all but knotted the score. Thomason again starred for Tennessee both at bat and in the field while Brown, Morgan and Morrison played best for Vanderbilt. Keith catching for Tennessee allowed the ball to get by him twice, Vanderbilt scoring each time.

The game was long drawn out running two hours and twenty minutes. Cold and clear weather prevailed. The score by innings follows:

	R.
Tennessee	120 400 100—8
Vanderbilt	001 042 002—9

Dawson, Hutcheson and Keith; Lattimer, Sikes and Brown.

Sally League Opens Monday

League Has Been Restored to an Eight Club Circuit, With Augusta and Columbia In

The eleventh annual campaign of the South Atlantic league is scheduled to start Monday with games in the following cities: Columbia in Augusta; Savannah in Charleston; Jacksonville in Albany; Columbus in Macon. While Columbia and Augusta will be new additions to the circuit this season, they were formerly in the league but had to drop out because of poor financial backing. The Augusta club played its last season with the Sally circuit in 1911, while the Columbia club finished out the 1912 season.

Last year was one of the most successful seasons the little storm-tossed league has had, and much credit for the success might be given to the league's president, N. P. Corish, of Savannah, who in order to stimulate interest, halved the season. His idea was for the winner of the divided seasons to play a series of games to determine the winner of the pennant. However, as the Savannah team won the championship in each season it was declared the pennant winner for the year, with a record of 78 victories and 38 defeats. However, the Savannah club did not have easy running in the second half of the season, but was given a hard battle by the Jacksonville and Columbus teams. The result was in doubt until the final series of the season.

Stiff Competition.

So much for our entry. Now what about the other side of the question? Every year the league offers a handsome trophy for the city turning out the greatest attendance at the opening game. Atlanta won it last year, and ought to cop it again. But the going is likely to prove heavy. There are seven others to cut in, and more than a few of these are counting strongly on laying hold of the league's offering. Down New Orleans way, Manager Dobbs and his Pelicans have vision of packing the park to its capacity. Over at Birmingham, Colonel Baugh and Gladys Molesworth still remember that we beat them last season. Up at Chattanooga, President Andrews and Moose McCormick figure that an extra good way to open the ball will be to win that attendance trophy. These are a little less than half of the rivals to be beaten.

But then Atlanta has trimmed all comers in stiff competition before, and it can be done again. For instance, the Chamber of Commerce is backing the local club, and President W. H. Leahy has directed that cards be mailed to every member of that organization, urging that if at all possible they close up shop on the afternoon of the 14th and turn out to see the game. What is more, several business houses have announced that they will close up, and some promise to haul their whole force out to witness the opening battle in a body.

Beginning in a few days an active campaign along this line will be launched, and the name of every firm which is willing to climb on the band wagon will be published. Nothing to it. The Crackers won the pennant last year, and Atlanta won the attendance record. Who knows but that the two go hand in hand? At any rate, it will be no bad start to get away running, and the boys will be in there plugging much harder, if there is a big crowd on hand to make a noise.

Yes, lay aside the little job that you had cut out for that afternoon, or stick around a little later the night before and finish it up. You will be needed, and somebody is going to see that you report for duty.

All Aboard! Get Ready--- Season Opens April 14; Atlanta Must Win Again

Climb aboard the band wagon and join the crowd. The date is only a little more than a week away, and the occasion is going to be a gala affair—referring, of course, to the opening of the Southern league season at Ponce de Leon on Tuesday of next week.

For several months, in fact since the curtain was dropped last fall, following the final game with the Lookouts, Manager Smith, President Callaway and others connected with the local club, have been hustling to get together a repeater for last season's array, to carry the flag this year. The bunch has been rounded up, and for some two or three weeks the boys have been cavorting around at the park, getting ready for the fray.

They look good. This much has been demonstrated by the manner in which they have gone after the transients who have stopped over for brief intervals to match wits and prowess on the local lot. The machine is not moving as smoothly as it will be later, and Chauffeur Smith may find it necessary to do a little tinkering on certain parts, but for all that, the old bus is hitting regularly on six cylinders and she looks like a high-powered machine.

Stiff Competition.

So much for our entry. Now what about the other side of the question? Every year the league offers a handsome trophy for the city turning out the greatest attendance at the opening game. Atlanta won it last year, and ought to cop it again. But the going is likely to prove heavy. There are seven others to cut in, and more than a few of these are counting strongly

Yanks Took Series From Dodgers

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 4.—The New York Americans took the lead in the interborough series with the Brooklyn Nationals today by winning the third game, 6 to 1. Despite arctic weather, Frank Chance seemed to have his pitchers going at a great rate, with the team batting and fielding like champions.

Score:	R.	H.	E.
New York	6	11	0
Brooklyn	1	6	4

Keating, Fisher and Sweney; Ragan, Rucker and Miller.

Citadel Found Easy Picking

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 4.—The Citadel team won the first game of the championship from the Colleg eof Charleston today, 8 to 2. The Cadets outclassed their rivals from start to finish. The feature of the game was the excellent pionship from the College of Charleston, who held the enemy to one hit in the nine innings. The college team made eleven rrors.

Score:	R.	H.	E.
Citadel	8	7	4
College	2	1	11

Gibson and James; Lenoir and Jennings.

Tigers Scored Four in First

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 4.—Detroit turned loose a volley of hits today in the first inning of the first game of the series with Louisville and scored four of the seven runs that won the game for them. The Colonels landed on Boehler for three tallies in the fourth, but that was their limit in the scoring line. Cobb got two hits, one for two bases, and stole two bases.

Score:	R.	H.	E.
Detroit	7	11	4
Louisville	4	7	4

Boehler, J. Williams and Stanage, D. Baker; Leverett, Baker and V. Clemens.

Jackets Make Clean Sweep of Second Series

Techites Trim Mississippi College in Second Game by the Score of 6 to 0 – Johnson Made Feature Play in Fifth on Great Catch

The second game of the Tech-Mississippi series ended in a 6 to 0 victory for the Jackets. The game was played Saturday afternoon on Grant field and was replete with spectacular fielding and great base running by the Jackets. The Mississippi nine simply had an off day in the field and three of Tech's runs were directly due to errors made by Mississippi. The concrete stands at Grant field were filled with a regular Saturday crowd and the game coupled up with the excellent music furnished by Frank Roman and his Tech band was enjoyed immensely by the crowd.

Brooks, the twirler who pitched a two-hit game against Alabama last Wednesday afternoon, striking out twenty of the twenty-seven men that faced him, was on the mound for the visitors, and with the exception of a little wildness in the second round, pitched good ball for the Mississippi crew. Brooks only allowed six hits, and deserved a better verdict.

Pitts, who twirled for the Jackets, was in good form, and, although the Mississippi bunch got seven hits, he managed to keep them widely scattered. He was also aided by one of the best fielding games that Tech has ever played.

Thirty-five men faced Brooks during the eight innings that he pitched and out of that number three fell victims to his benders, six hit the ball safely, two were pinked in the slats and three were given free transportation. The twenty-one men that were put out, besides the three that fanned, were put out by the infield as Tech did not hit a single fly to the outfielders, except the ones that went safely.

Thirty-seven men faced Pitts during the encounter. Four were unable to connect with his delivery, seven stung the horsehide for safeties, two took fast ones on the hip, and one drew a free pass. Five of the remaining putouts were made by Jacket outfielders and the remaining eighteen were credited to the infielders.

Johnson Stars.

The outstanding feature of the game was the brilliant piece of fielding pulled off by Rollo Johnson in the fifth inning, which pulled Tech out of a very bad hole. With one gone, Mississippi got men on first, second and third. Then Cupit hit a short fly back of short, which looked to be a sure hit. But Johnson thought otherwise and by uncorking a swell sprint, raced up and caught the pill just before it reached the ground. Then, when Thompson tried to score from third one the play, he completed a neat double by throwing to Witherington. On that play Johnson sustained a sprained ankle and had to retire from the game. However, it was a great catch, and probably saved the day for Tech.

Not a single member of the Jacket crew got more than one safety. T. Montague got one out of two, and otherwise played good ball for Tech. Pound in right also had a good day in the field. T. Montague's single to center in the second round came at an opportune time, three men scoring on the play.

For the visitors, Bethea starred with the willow, connecting safely three times for good clean singles. Lipsey and Jameson played good ball for the visitors in the field. Although the latter had an error charged to him, it was on a hard chance that he blundered.

Princeton Men Offer Trophy

The Princetown Alumni association of Georgia has offered a handsome silver loving cup to the winner of the baseball championship of the preparatory school league, of which Prof. S. G. Spalding, principal of Tech High School, is president. This will be in addition to the cup which will be given by A. G. Spalding Brothers.

In various parts of the country organizations of Princeton alumni are accustomed to make such presentations, and much interest in outdoor sports is the result. This is particularly true of the section adjacent to Princeton, but it is the plan of the Princeton men in every Rear Atlanta to start each year a similar competition.

The cup offered by the state association will be awarded the winner at the close of the season of five games, the first having been played on Friday. The occasion will probably be a banquet at which the victors will celebrate. The Princeton committee is composed of Geo. H. Boynton, Robt. H. Jones, Jr., and Edwin K. Large.

Z. A. C. Beat Orios

The Zebradoze Athletic club defeated the Orios Saturday in a one-sided game by the score of 11 to 3. Batteries for the Zebradoze Athletic club were Hancock and Thompson; for Orios, Looms and L. Race.

Georgia Took Two Games From Auburn

First Game Went Twelve Innings—Corley Held Auburn to Six Hits and Showed Fine Control—Second Game Went Only Six Innings

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
AUBURN, Ala., April 4.—Georgia won both games of a double-header from Auburn today. Both games were decided when the first went 12 innings in a brilliant battle between both teams. Auburn had the first game won apparently until the eighth when Clements bunted safe and Harris fell down in fielding McWhorters long drive which went for a homer. With Davis out Georgia had no trouble in hitting almost at will anything that Auburn could put in the box. Auburn's only chance was to work Davis in both games or otherwise Georgia has a better team.

Corley pitched a fine game for Georgia and had beautiful control. Auburn tried hard to evrn things up in the twelfth and had scored one with the bases full when Harrison cut down Moulton's strong bid for a hit. Harrison played a brilliant game for Georgia taking care of several difficult chances. Harris and Bonner showed up well for Auburn in the outfield.

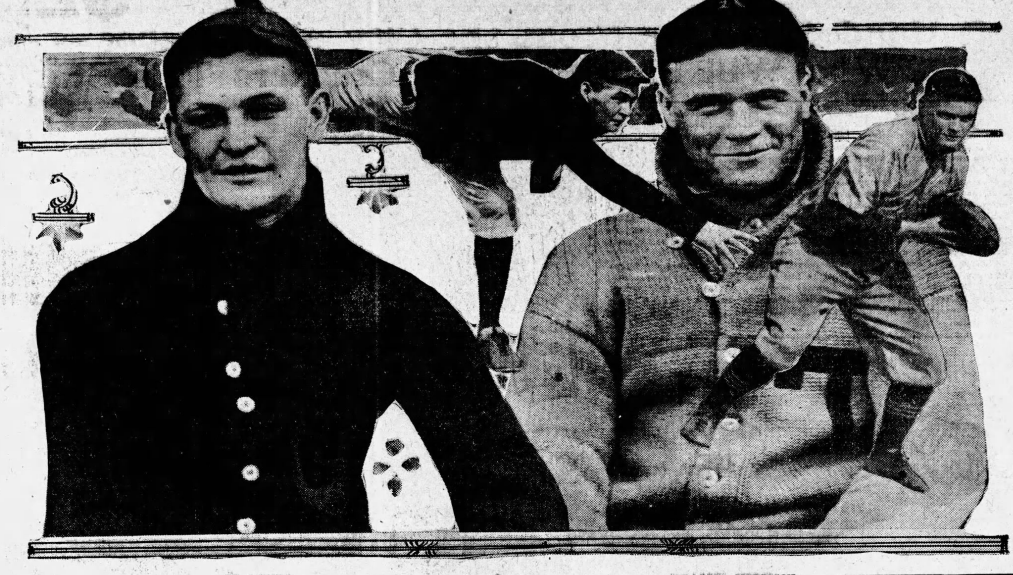
TECH'S "OUTLAW" BASEBALL BATTERY



JIM SENTER. "FROGGY" MORRISON.

A "Federal league" has invaded the college ranks of the south and at present has a hold of Tech. However, do not be frightened. They have not signed up any of the Tech stars, but have organized a separate team that is some club. If the Federals can stand as good a show in the big tent as the Tech federals do against the Tech varsity, they are here to stay.

The Tech Federals are composed of men who are ineligible for various reasons, but who are ball players of the deep water variety. They have organized themselves into a fast club and are playing games all over the city, with teams fast enough to make it interesting for them.

Morrison is the catcher and he is a good player. Last season he caught for the Texas A. and M. baseball team and was a str. He has the big league lug and from present signs, it looks as if some day he will be another Jimmy Archer. He is not eligible this season at Tech on account of the one year rule, but will be seen with the Yellow Jackets next spring, and this fall on the football team.

Jim Senter, the University of Chattanooga boy, is the mainstay in the box. He is the lad that Cleveland tried to take back to the big show. But Jim couldn't give up the call of the moleskin and the hypnotism of the college cheer.

Jim Preas, who needs no introduction, is playing first base and Hal Chase in his prime would not be much ahead of this big fellow. He is ineligible because the S. I. A. A. made him so. Fat Montague captain of the Tech team last year is playing second base and no one needs no comment. Spence, who played on the basketball team, is playing third base. He is as good on the diamond as he is on a court. He is ineligible this spring on account of a difference with the faculty. He is like Talley Johnson, who is playing short for the outlaws. Johnson is as good in baseball as most all the rest of this bunch and he knows how to handle the willow.

Cushman is in right field. He was on both the basketball and football teams, but he has joined the Federals. Carpenter, a big six footer, is playing center field. He is eligible for varsity ball this season but Coach Heisman will not let him play because it would take a year from his football career. "Dutch" Kauder the flying Dutchman from the University of Chattanooga is playing left field. He is ineligible on account of the one year rule.

Fultz Defends Stand Taken by Players Frat.

Explains That Organization Has Not Required Members to Respect Reserve Clause in Contract Because It May Not Be Upheld by Courts

NEW YORK, April 4.—In answer to the charges that the Baseball Players' Fraternity was not observing its obligations to organized baseball in refusing to advise its members to respect the reserve clause of their contracts, President David L. Fultz, of the organization, in a statement today said in part:

"The fraternity has refused to compel its members to regard the so-called reserve rules in contracts of organized ball, for one reason, because we have felt that we would be disciplining our members for not doing something the law might later decide they were not bound to do. And we have taken this step, we would have run the risk of not only being unfair to our members, but to subjecting ourselves to actions at law for unjust disciplinary measures.

"If this very troublesome clause is tested, as now seems likely, we believe the result will prove that we have been wise in the stand taken.

"The reserve clause as set forth in the two major league contracts for the season of 1913, and under which players who have jumped to the Federal league must be held, if at all, are identical and to my mind are unquestionably void.

"There are two alleged defects in the provision; first, its inequitable nature, in that it binds the player for his entire career while the club is bound for only ten days; and second, its neglect to state what salary shall be paid under the contract to be entered into. The Baltimore New York case on the salary point is Metropolitan Exhibition company, et al, vs. Ward, operating the New York Ball club, against John M. Ward, present business manager of the Brooklyn Federal league club, and a successful attorney.

"The New York ball club attempted by a preliminary injunction to restrain Ward from playing with one of the brotherhood teams during the war of 1890. The reserve clause of Ward's contract was stronger than the one of today.

"The court, however, refused to grant the injunction for the reason, among others, that the terms were too indefinite.

"In the case of the Philadelphia ball club against Lajoie, a Pennsylvania case which is looked upon as upholding the reserve clause, the contract provided that the salary under the renewal should be the same, thus doing away with the objection of want of definiteness. It also provided that it could be renewed for a period of three years thus avoiding, to a slight extent at least, the objection of want of mutuality now raised against the present contracts, while I have no limitation to the renewal period.

"It can readily be seen, therefore, that this case can be of little value in upholding the present reserve clause."

Jackson to Stick In Cotton States

JACKSON, Miss., April 4.—Several baseball enthusiasts held a meeting today and determined that Jackson should stay in the Cotton States league, provided the other teams composing the league will agree to certain conditions. Several managed men were at the meeting and the financial end will be taken care of. At the same time a moving spirits will make a canvass of the town for subscriptions to help them out, and as has always been the case the necessary assistance will be secured.

Jackson will insist on a season of 80 games with a salary limit not to exceed $800.

At today's meeting R. E. Harland was elected president, and J. M. McDonald, manager.

Doyle Hit Homer With Bases Full

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Piling up seven runs after two men were out in the fifth inning, the regular New York National league team defeated the New Orleans Southern association team today in the first of a series of four games, 7 to 6.

Doyle got a home'run with the bases filled. Marquard and Hearne were in fine form, allowing a total of five hits.

Talladega Fans Like Prospects

Manager Carl Pace Now on Job – Sizes Up Candidates Who Will Compose Team

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
TALLADEGA, Ala., April 4.—The baseball outlook in Talladega has now taken a decided turn for the best and one is rapidly arising with the arrival of Manager Carl Pace, who hails from Kentucky, but who managed in the Connecticut league last season, his club finishing first.

The Indians this year, for the most part, will be strangers to Talladega fans as Manager Pace has corralled many new men from all parts of the country. When interviewed yesterday in regard to his most promising men he said:

"For my flingers I have Sparks, of Houston, Tex., who bids fair to make a good man. Sparks has already reported and is now getting into condition. He is a husky lad of twenty years and, from all appearances, will make good in class D ball.

"Bedwortz, a product from Louisiana, is another flinger who looks good and comes with a good record. Woodruff and Breckinbridge, two flingers with the Indians last year, will again be on hand. The first named is there with the goods, but owing to his disposition it is hard to tell what to expect. The latter is certainly on the team. Hine, another product from Denison, Tex., will report for a tryout.

"Richards, with Talladega last season, who proved good at backstopping, has been reserved again this year. McHeogan star flinger on the Indiana university this year, will arrive as soon as the college is out and will make a bid at the receiving end. Games, who comes from Rockport, Ind., will also be a candidate for a catcher's position.

"At first base, Clyde Doyle, from St. Edward's college in Texas, looks like a certainty, but he will have opposition from a player by the cognomen of Albrecht, who comes from Columbus, Ga. At second base, Manager Pace is unopposed, and from his records he will be one of the best on the keystone job in the league. "At short, Powers, of last season, has been reserved, but will have opposition from Cope, an Alabama amateur, who is touted as a fast fielder.

"At third base, Danny Murphy, from Louisiana, looks like a certainty, and thus far has no opposition. Camp, who was with Talladega last year, and is a Talladega lad, will play in the outfield gain this season. He was a fierce hitter and fast fielder last year and but for his inexperience would have gone higher. Johnson and McDuffee, from Texas, will also try for the outfield. These three men will likely be unopposed for outfield berths. However, there are many men who are looking for tryouts who may upset their cinch.

"The contract of a pitcher, Binkley, who was with the Cairo, Ill., club in the Kitty last season, was received today. His record was, won eleven, lost five."

There are many others who will come to Talladega at their own expense for tryouts. This is the unknown quantity and possibly out of this lot some may stick for a tryout. This contingent will arrive ahead of the regular contract holders and will be given a trial by Manager Pace. They will report on April 13.

The baseball park is being put into the best of condition and made a model class D lot. Manager Pace is spending his time now in superintending the work on the field.

Arkansas Judge Enjoins Feds

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 4.—Holding that contracts between baseball players and club owners may lack mutuality but that it was not a question to be raised by a third party, Chancellor J. F. Henderson, today made permanent the injunction preventing Federal league agents from interfering with players of the Pittsburg National League club.

The injunction was brought against S. H. Camnitz, agent of the Pittsburg Federal League club.

McQuillan and Vlox members of the Pittsburg Nationals, testified that Camnitz had made efforts to induce to join the Federals. The contracts between these two players and the Pittsburg National club, minus the salary figures, were offered as evidence in the hearing, together with a copy of the agreement between National League clubs.

Counsel for Camnitz contended that the contracts and the agreement are in violation of both state and federal anti-trust laws.

Baseball War on Reserve Clause Now Up to Judge

Arguments by Federals and Representatives of Organized Ball Made Before Judge Sessions at Grand Rapids on Killifer Case

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 4.—Decision as to the winner in battle between the new Federal baseball league and organized baseball, as represented by the National league, is up to Umpire, Judge Clarence W. Sessions, of the United States district court for western Michigan.

Arguments of counsel in the case brought by the management of the Chicago Federal league club to enjoin William J. Killifer, jr., from engaging in the service of the Philadelphia National league club or any other than the Chicago Federal league organization were completed late today and the judge took the case under advisement. He announced he would not render a decision before next Tuesday and probably not for a week or ten days.

While the counsel for the Federal league centered their attack upon the reserve clause of contracts in organized baseball and the so-called ten-day clause permitting a club to dispense with a contracted player's services at any time after a ten days' notice, the talk soon went off at a tangent when Judge Sessions, during the argument, raised the question as to the Federal leagues' moral rights in the matter. Under hypothetical questions directed at counsel for the Federal league, the judge pointed out that Killifer and the management of the Philadelphia club are not parties to the contract containing the reserve and ten-day clauses, and so have said they are satisfied. Perhaps he referred to the Chicago Federal league club as an outsider not a party to the contract, but nevertheless seeking relief from the court on a breach of an original contract which it, by offering larger inducements, might have instigated. He said:

"He who seeks equity must himself come into court with clean hands. To having been a party to the breach of obligation, claim you are entitled to the enforcement of the contract, notwithstanding your action in that regard."

Judge Sessions questioned counsel for the complainant with regard to the knowledge of the Chicago Federal League club magnates of the existence of the Philadelphia contract and reserve clause. He stated plainly that was one of the complexing questions of the case for the court. He added the remedy sought by the complainant is extraordinary in the United States district; that the temporary injunction was not granted except on a showing of absolute right.

In defense of his position that the Chicago Federals had come into court with "clean hands," Attorney Frank H. Gates asserted that, granting the invalidity of the reserve clause, Killifer had discharged all moral obligations under it when he waited until January 31, 1914, before signing with the Federals.

Attorney George Pepper, of Philadelphia, took the other side.

His argument was woven around the epigram: "Should the seducer of an employe be entitled to equity in court?" Pepper, of the National League club took occasion briefly to defend the reserve clause and the ten-day clause.

Counsel for the complainant, Judge Sessions, Attorney Gates and Pepper, of the National League club, and several others were present at the hearing.

Motorcycles to Enter Big Hill Climb Contest

Atlanta Automobile Association Will Provide Special Events for Cyclist in Big Contest Which Will Be Staged in May

The annual hill climbing contest, held under the auspices of the Atlanta Automobile association, will take place during the latter part of May. It is the intention of the officials of the association, on account of the large increase in the number of motorcycles ridden in Atlanta and vicinity, to enlarge upon the program by arranging several contests for motorcycles. At every meet which has been pulled off in the past, the attendance has been large and the officials have noticed that the motorcycles attract and receive a great amount of attention.

At the next regular meeting of the association a committee will be appointed to arrange for the events in which the motorcycles will take part. There will be the speed contest – ascending Stewart avenue hill, the weight contest, coasting contest, and several other very attractive features. The fact that the association this year will specialize in motorcycle events will be of good news to riders in and about Atlanta, as already there have been quite a number of impromptu contests that have attracted considerable interest in motorcycle circles. For instance, on the Buena Vista hill, just off of South Pryar street, almost every week some three or four owners of different machines have private tryouts for small wagers. With the prospects of a regular contest held by the Atlanta Automobile association, under the rules of the F. A. M., all contestants will be on their mettle to win some of the splendid prizes that have been offered.

With the announcement of this contest for the near future, two very prominent Atlanta riders have already made known their intention of entering all the events. These are Johnny Aiken, of the Southern Motorcycle company, and A. Parrish, who is the only rider of the two past endurance runs to make a perfect score and whose Harley-Davidson motorcycle easily negotiated the Altoona and York mountains.

The record for speed on the Stewart avenue hill is at present held by Harry Ford, who last year made the ascent in 32 seconds, but as it is the plan of the association to make this year's event of more general interest, the speed contest will be only one of the many events to be run.

Work Begun on Chattanooga Club House

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 4.—Work has already been begun upon the new club house of the Chattanooga Golf and Country club and it is expected that the new structure will be completed by October 1. The estimate of the architects call for a total expenditure of $50,000.

The tournament committee is already considering the feasibility of holding a big open meet to celebrate the opening of the new club house, and plans may shortly be announced.

Georgia Auto Club Meet Tues.

All owners of automobiles, motorcycles, and various other power propelled vehicles are urgently requested to meet in the M and M club rooms, Candler building on Tuesday, April 7, at 1 p. m. The Automobile Club of Georgia has been formerly organized, many members already enrolled and with the campaign that is about to be launched, there will be quite a large organization in the very near future. The objects of the club are for the mutual benefits of the owners of motor vehicles, and for the general welfare of the public in general. Proper punishment of auto thieves, more universal laws and regulations, good roads, distribution of road maps, literature of general interest, etc., preventing unjust legislation and fostering favorable legislation, etc., are among the many things to be handled by the club. A permanent home is another feature. Every owner in the state should be present if possible and should send in his application, in case he cannot come personally. Address all comunications to the Automobile Club of Georgia, Atlanta, Ga.

Stearns Finds Business Good

Factory automobile men who have recently been touring the country sizing up the general market and endeavoring to anticipate the spring and summer trade, are practically a unit in declaring that business conditions today are from 20 to 30 per cent better than ninety days ago. Credit, of course, is given to restored business confidence and the increasing favor with which the country at large is viewing the administration.

According to Henry H. Hower, of the F. B. Stearns company, manufacturer of Stearns-Knight cars, who has recently completed a swing through the east, visiting New York, Boston, Philadelphia and a number of eastern points the pickup in business in the last 90 days, and especially during the last few weeks, has been very marked. "It is, I believe, indicative of a strong, steady summer and autumn business. Our orders for the current year are now ahead of last season, and after a close study of sales condition, I believe it is not going too far to say that in many classes of cars there will be a shortage before many weeks have passed. Of course, such a condition is always healthy, and the time is probably past when general car shortage will cause wildcat manufacturing institutions to spring up almost overnight."

Continuing, Mr. Hower spoke very favorably of the changed general business outlook in all parts of the country. "Reports from the coast and many southern points give us reason to believe that those portions of the country will secure their share of the business which this country is bound to produce this year. The Pacific coast especially is remarkably steady in its consumption and certainly should exceed its figure of a year ago."

Hupp Mgr. Quits Active Service

Charles D. Hastings Retires From Active Duties, but Retains Office of Secretary

President J. Walker Drake announces that Chas. D. Hastings has given up his duties as general manager of the Hupp Motor Car company. He still retains the office of secretary and will continue to be active in the counsels for the company. Later on in the year Mr. Hastings will take an extended trip in the interests of the export affairs of the Hupp Motor Car company a branch of the business that has developed immensely during the past three years.

Export shipments have now grown to such an extent that today this business along pays the running expenses of the factory.

Mr. J. Walter Drake, president of the company, continues active supervision over the general affairs, while the title of Mr. F. A. Harris has been changed from assistant general manager to that of commercial manager, the scope of his duties having been enlarged.

The personnel and policy of the management remains as before. These changes are merely in the course of rearrangements that have taken place gradually.

SAFETY FIRST

Quality and Lower Cost Mileage for Goodrich Tire Users

Goodrich Unit Molding is in reality the original "Safety First" idea in tire-making.

The body of the tire, the side walls, the fabrics, the rubber, the bead and the Safety Tread are so well balanced and are of such uniform high quality that this, coupled with Goodrich efficient workmanship, makes it possible for us to mold Goodrich Tires as a unit.

Therefore, Goodrich Tires wear as a unit. Every part helping every other part to render the service demanded of it—thereby giving the utmost in service and mileage to the tire user.

The fine, strong fabric and high grade rubber are literally interlocked by Goodrich Unit Molding. This is one reason why Goodrich treads do not separate and why "tire troubles" are practically unknown to Goodrich users.

The extra thickness of tough Goodrich rubber in the treads of Goodrich Safety Tread Tires at the point of contact with the road provides longer wear, longer service and longer satisfaction.

The thick, tough rubber bars and crosstie of the safety tread as shown above, make a "Safety First" roadway for the car. They clean and dry the path and grip it. Because the Safety Tread design is built as a unit, it rides easier than any other non-skid tire, and in fact just as smoothly as a smooth tread.

The Accepted Standard

Goodrich Safety Tread Tires

Best in the Long Run

The Goodrich Safety Tread Five Bars and a Crosstie—the Safety First Symbol

The quality of Goodrich Tires today is the standard by which all other high grade tires are judged. That is because they represent perfection of tire-making and tire-knowledge—which gives Goodrich Tires leadership.

Just the unit-group of bars and crosstie which brace and balance the strain on the tire so that the Safety Tread runs as a smooth tread does and gives more actual service and mileage.

Pay no more than the following prices for the accepted standard automobile tire:

Waycross Fans Confident Over Team's Chances

Manager Clark Has Collected Strong Aggregation, and Bugs Are Jubilant – Men Have Shown Well on Practice Games to Date

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WAYCROSS, Ga., April 4.—With eleven more days left within which to settle on all doubtful positions, Manager Bill Clark, of the Waycross team, is confident he will experience no difficulty in making Waycross a strong contender for the 1914 pennant.

This city is counting on the pennant, not because a pennant is a nice thing to talk about but because the players signed for Waycross have shown the goods. With much longer training than most of the Georgia State league teams have had, Waycross expects to get a good start from the very first.

Barring all accidents, the locals will be hard to head once they get the lead. Opening at home with Cordele, Waycross goes up against a team that gave this city some trouble last season. However, Waycross players are hitting regularly and Cordele's team is not yet regarded as a heavy hitting aggregation. So local fans count on Waycross taking all of the first home series.

TWO VETERAN PITCHERS.

In the pitching line Waycross has two of last season's men. Manager Clark and Warwick are the 1913 season men, and both are in splendid condition. Clark has had his arm fully limbered up, the team in shape and has not worked in any but games between the regulars and recruits so far, but is in fine trim for the opening of the league. Of the new pitchers, Miller, from Pennsylvania, is by far the best. He is a midget in size, but a giant in the box. Antley and Kerwin, left-handers, are the men scrapping for fourth pitcher. Kerwin was brought here by the Philadelphia yanigans, and is from Connecticut. Antley is a comer from Atlanta, and signed up as a pitcher and first baseman. Kerwin is nothing but a youngster, but seems to have the makings of a pitcher.

For receivers, Manager Clark has retained Jack Coveney, who was with Waycross a portion of last season. Coveney is a valuable man to youngsters and his head work will enable Waycross to come out on top in many of the season's battles. He is fast getting into shape. Chapman, from South Carolina, will be used behind the plate to relieve Coveney, and at other times will play right field. In games up to date he has displayed unusual ability and with the season's experience is bound to go higher. He is full of life and in the field can be counted on to take care of anything within reason.

JONES AT FIRST.

At first Manager Clark has Jones, a last year player. He is considered the best fielding first baseman Waycross has seen, and while he has not shown much at bat he will be hitting them regularly within the month. He saves many a wild throw by his clever pick-ups. Jones played basketball all winter and came here in fine shape for the season.

Second base is one of the uncertain positions. Campbell, who just arrived this week, and Davis, of Pennsylvania, are trying for the place. Davis has improved daily since reaching the city and has a reputation for batting. Campbell came here highly recommended but it remains to be seen what there is to him. At short Doherty seems a fixture, at least that's the present outlook. A little more practice will get him in tip-top shape and if he continues batting as he has in a few of the exhibition games, he will make the team a valuable man. Rafferty, who was at short most of last season, is in college and while Waycross has a call on his services, it is not known what will be done with him if Doherty keeps up his present good work.

Charlie Anderson the youngster Waycross picked up at Douglas last season, is playing third, and no attempt has been made to change him. He is better this year than last, and once on a base he moves at a gait that nearly always means stolen bases. He is reliable at the bat too, and if he places bunts like he wants them to he will never headed at first.

STRONG IN OUTFIELD.

Waycross is counting more on the outfielders this year than ever before. In left is Wassen, considered as one of the best in the league. He played with Cordele last season. Fast in the field, batting over .300 consistently and knowing what to do in pinches, Wassen is going to star this season.

Center field is filled by Joe Fenton, the Pennsylvania boy who was picked as the league's best center fielder last year. Fenton is in good condition now, and expects to hold his reputation during the coming season. His batting eye is apparently better than last season.

In right field Chapman seems to have it on any other man Manager Clark has here for the place. Besides his ability in the field Chapman, as already mentioned, is an A-1 catcher, and this of itself makes it certain that he will stick.

The series of exhibition games which were arranged for Waycross have aided materially in getting the team in season condition. The games with teams of other leagues conclude next week when Waycross plays two games at home with the Montgomery Southern league team. Fans are arranging now to capture the opening day attendance trophy, which was won by Waycross last season, and baseball enthusiasm here is really higher than ever before.

National Golf Tourney Aug. 16

NEW YORK, April 4.—The national open golf championship to be held over the links of the Midlothian Country club, near Chicago, will begin Tuesday, August 16, and will continue for four days, leaving Saturday clear for playing off the ties, should any occur.

There will be no change in conditions governing the contest which means that there will be two qualification days, half the field playing thirty-six holes on the first day and the other half the second day.

The golfers having the best sixty-four scores for the preliminary thirty-six holes will qualify for the championship proper, which will be at seventy-two holes of medal play on Thursday and Friday.

Before they start on that tour of South America, we suggest that the promoters examine the a la carte prices of Buenos Aires hotels. Ed Reulbach's lunch bill would be $56.50 gold.

That pounding on the table you hear may be a meeting of the Cincinnati directors waiting to tell Herzog how to run the team.

Prospects Good For Winner at Gordon Inst.

Coach Van Tassel Building Strong Team From Three Veterans and Good New Material – Team Has Won Two, Tied One, and Lost One

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

BAINESVILLE, Ga., April 4.—The Institute at Barnesville, Ga., known as Gordon Institute will be represented this season on the ball field by one of the strongest baseball teams that has ever turned out for the school by Coach Van Tassel.

This year only three men were returned as a nucleus to build this year's team, and a practically new machine has been built in the short space of five weeks. However, the new men that are on the team this season have shown up very well in the four games that Gordon has played this year and at present everything is rosy in the baseball line.

The four games that Gordon has played this year have turned out as follows: two wins, one defeat and one tie. The Macon Sally league team has been the only team to register a defeat on the Gordon bunch, and the result then was only 5 to 1.

The strong Mercer University baseball nine was held to a 3 to 3 tie. This game was one of the best that has ever been played on the local's ball lot, it was sensational throughout and from the first developed into a great pitcher's battle between the opposing pitchers.

Took Two From S. P. U.

The two victories that Gordon won over the Southern Presbyterian University are considered by the authorities as a notable achievement for the school. he first game turned out a to 2 for Gordon and the second 5 to 2.

After much switching of the various players, Coach Van Tassel has selected the following as his line-up, and is the one that will in all probability play out the remainder of the games: Jarrett, first base: Kingery, second base; Ray, short stop; Mize, third base; Hughes (captain) right field, Dumas, center field; Branch, left field; Deaver, Slappy and Maxey, pitchers, and Monahan catcher.

Of these, only three men are veterans and they are Kingery at second, Hughes in right field and Maxey as pitcher. Deaver as a new man is considered a star of the first water and so far has pitched good ball for Gordon. The same is also true of Slappy who is a new south paw.

Monahan is considered as about the best catcher in prep circles and his work to date has been the feature of the playing of Gordon. Last year he was with Stone Mountain and played great ball for that team.

Boy Scouts Will Hold Field Meet

Twelve Troops of Youngsters Will Compete at Piedmont Park on April 18

Twelve troops of boy scouts from Atlanta and suburbs will enter a big track and field meet to be held at Piedmont park on the afternoon of Saturday, April 18. These troops will compete for a special trophy offered, and the events will include running, jumping and freak races. It is expected that more than 200 youngsters will enter the various events.

The list of events is as follows:

100-yard dash.
220-yard dash.
440-yard run.
One-mile race.
Two-mile relay race.
Shoe race.
Potato race.
Three-legged race (for boys of 14 years 13 years.)
Three-leged race (for boys of 14 years and over.)
Running high jump.
Running broad jump.
Standing broad jump.

Officers of the meet are the following: Asa W. Candler, Jr., starter; Harrison Jones and Philip Weltner, A. W. Hill, judges; A. R. Blanchard, announcer; Elliott Cheatham, scorer; Hugh Mauck, timekeeper. The meet will begin at 2 o'clock.

Mgr. Joe Herold Is Pleased With Team Prospects

Valdosta Pilot Has Several Players on Hand Working Out, and Is Satisfied With Outlook Thus Far – Will Likely Add an Experienced Catcher

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VALDOSTA, Ga., April 2.—Manager Herold is highly pleased over the outlook for the local ball team this season. Herold and nine of his men have reported and are working out twice a day. The others are expected in daily and when they all get in the local squad should look very much like a real ball team. None of the men have been on hand long enough to get very much of a line on them, but some of them have been working out before they came in and are looking fit.

Herold, Kipp and Schwartz are showing up in fine style on the infield. With the addition of a good fielding first baseman the locals should have about the fastest infield in the circuit. Several men are in view for first base, but none have been landed as yet.

The twirlers are showing up in nice style. Love, who came to the locals from Molesworth's team in Birmingham, looks to be a find. He is stockily built and seems to have plenty of stuff. Anderson and Richards are both considered and are showing well for stuff. Weidell is the only other hurler in camp and he, too, is showing up nicely.

Medlock, Stone and Reese are the outfield candidates on hand; the last two are catchers as well as outfielders, and they all three look mighty good. Two or three other outfield candidates are expected in shortly.

Herold is after an old head for his first catcher and will no doubt be able to get a good man from some higher league, as he has several promising.

The entire squad on hand so far look good and there should be no trouble in picking a good team for the coming season.

Fla. Wrestler Wants Bout Here

George Grundahl Issues Challenge to All 158-Pound Grapplers for Local Match

George Grundahl, holder of the middleweight wrestling championship of the state of Florida, is hunting "new worlds to conquer" and issues a challenge to all comers in Atlanta at 158 pounds ringside on a basis of winner take all, or whatever division of the gate receipts may be agreed upon. If falls to count, two falls out of three to decide the match.

Grundahl will also make 148 pounds ringside to accommodate any amateur welterweight wrestlers who wish to make a try for the welterweight championship of Florida, which title is also held by him.

Since his defeat of Oscar Hansen one year ago for the middleweight title, Grundahl has come through several hard matches without a single setback, although he has wrestled several men outweighing him by almost fifty pounds.

Hansen was also champion in the class of Minnesota and Michigan, while C. A. Olsen, heavyweight champion of Montana, failed to throw Grundahl in a handicap match, having his own shoulders put to the mat in about ten minutes of tough wrestling. Grundahl has defeated many highly touted mat performers and is considered to be one of the cleverest wrestlers in his class to be found in this country.

He was retained as physical director of Stetson university last season as well as physical culture expert, he enjoys considerable reputation throughout Florida.

There has never been a slight suspicion of shady tactics during Grundahl's wrestling career and any matches he may engage in before Atlanta's sporting public will be strictly on the square and above board in every particular.

John J. McCloskey has given up his plans for organizing a league in the southwest and has returned to his home in Louisville. His plans for the season are not decided, but he expects to have time to scout for some major league club, possibly the Chicago Cubs.

Appalachian Is Giving Many to So. League Clubs

Atlanta Gets Two Former Stars in That Circuit for This Season in Elmer Lawrence and Morley, Jennings, Six Other Clubs Also Get Men

BY HENRY E. DOUGHERTY.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 4.—Unless many promising youngsters fail to make good this spring the Southern league will have as its guests quite a large sprinkling of former Appalachian league ball players during the 1914 season.

There is Elmer Lawrenle, with Atlanta, who hails from the Knoxville team. Besides this youngster Manager Billy Smith may have an opportunity later on of giving "Bill" Morley Jennings a tryout at short, and "Doc" Watson, also of Knoxville, a chance to handle hot ones at third base. Smith has been figuring with Manager Mofett for Watson's services for quite a while, but the deal has been hanging fire because Watson does not wish to leave his studies in the medical school at Charleston, S. C., before May 15. Others who will likely be seen in Southern league uniforms this year and who hail from the Appalachian league follow:

MERRITT BEST SOUTHPAW.

Howard Merritt was the best left hander in the Appalachian league last year. He trimmed the Atlanta pennant winners in one game and pulled another contest to an eleven-inning tie. Lawrence left the league in the flinging art, while "Big Jawn" Cochran was the champion home run hitter of the circuit. "Dixie" Walker was known as the "speed merchant" of the Appalachian league and now he is being called the "Walter Johnson" of the Southern. He is a reckless hurler, but a hard worker—at times, only. Yale Sloan was the "fence buster" of the Appalachian in 1912. was a great batter for Montgomery last year, and it is predicted by Manager Moffett, of Knoxville, that Sloan will give Welchonce a bad scare at the end of the 1914 season. Jim Gudger deals in the spitball variety of pitching, and at times he is almost unbeatable.

WALLACE THROWS WELL.

Jack Wallace has an excellent wing, and his rifle-shot pegging in the Appalachian league last year won for him the title of "Shotgun" Wallace. He is a hard hitter, but withal erratic. His one ambition has been to reach the Southern league, and it is very probable that he will make good with Birmingham. Carl East, southpaw, should make good with Montgomery. If Billy Smith signs up "Doc" Watson later in the season it is almost certain that Watson will stick. He is a switch-hitter at third and he hits the ball hard. His batting is of the variety which is making Von Kolnitz, the Cincinnati recruit, the most talked of youngster of the season. Von Kolnitz played with Mortstown in the Appalachian league last season and in seventy-five games he batted for a percentage of .412.

Other former Appalachian players who are likely to be heard from this season are as follows: "Nick" Cullop, left-handed twirler, with Cleveland, from Bristol; "Kid" Williams, left-hander, with Detroit, from Morristown, and Jesse with Nashville last year; Frank Davis, right-handed pitcher, with Columbus in American association, from Knoxville; "Hap" Fesperman, right-hander, with Cleveland, from Morristown; Jim Manion, first baseman, with Minneapolis, from Middlesboro; Sam Hall, right-handed flinger, with Toledo, from Johnson City; Dan Griner, pitcher, two seasons with St. Louis Cards, from Cleveland.

In Other Leagues.

Other Appalachian players who have been in and out of the Southern league during the past few seasons are Bales, with Memphis, from Cleveland, a third baseman; Ware, pitcher, with Chattanoogs, from Cleveland; McElveen, shortstop, with Atlanta, from Knoxville.

"The Appalachian league is the fastest Class D circuit I have ever seen," stated Scout Bobby Gilks to the writer while scouting through this league two years ago. Gilks, as manager of the Montgomery team, still remembers the Appalachian circuit, and he has asked Manager Moffet, of the Knoxville team, to put him wise to any fast youngsters in this league during the 1914 season.

Manager Moffet claims that this league has sent more players to higher company than any other Class D circuit, and he points to the records as authority for his statement.

Appalachian baseball fans will be interested in Southern league ball more than ever this season.

Dobbs Playing Safe Against Injuries to Pels

John Expects to Carry Regular Utility Outfielder During Coming Season – Hendryx and Barbore Likely 'to Be Held for Such Roles in Outfield and Infield

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Manager Johnny Dobbs, of the New Orleans club, is going to take no chances of having injuries hurt the Pelicans' chances of capturing the Southern league bunting this season. This was shown Tuesday morning, when Manager Dobbs let it be known he is contemplating carrying a utility infield and outfielder this season if he can squeeze his squad within the player limit. The men who will fill the roles will be as classy as the regulars.

Years of experience has taught the new Pelican leader that the least injuries or stump has a great deal to do with the losing of games and that he must have top-notch men on hand to rush into the game when the occasion demands. By carrying a utility infielder and outfielder, Dobbs can shift at any time and his team will carry the same material strength.

Just who will grace the utility role is not known, but Walter Barbare looks good for the infield job and Timothy Hendryx for the outfield station. Since reporting to the Pels, Barbare has worked at every station on the infield with the exception of second base. In all departments he showed well. He has also played the outfield in several games and is just at home in the garden as at covering the bags. The youngster is yet raw, but once he gets over his stage fright is expected to start stringing the pill in fair form.

HENDRYX LOOKS GOOD.

Hendryx, held over as utility outfielder to Burns, Northern and Cochran, makes the Pel garden look as classy as anything in the Southern league. Hendryx has been suffering with a slight attack of the grippe and this is believed to have impaired his hitting. He is naturally a heavy hitter and should soon get his eye on the ball. Manager Dobbs realizes Hendryx is a valuable man and is going to hold him until some one betters his work or he is forced to let him go.

Batting practice is now in vogue daily at Pelican park and the Birds are endeavoring to get their eyes on the ball. The boys went through some stiff practice Monday and will continue it until the opening of the Southern league season.

Otto Burns, the outfielder, secured from the Cleveland American association, was out in uniform Monday and looks to be a classy performer. He was placed in the sun garden while Northern was shifted to center. He is fast and a wonderful judge of a fly ball and should prove a good man for left field.

Eddie Edmundson, who came here to try for the team from the Waterbury Eastern association, was released to the Beaumont, Texas, league club.

Twelve Hundred Earned Yale "Y"

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 4.—Statistics compiled recently at Yale set forth that there are 1,200 men entitled to wear the varsity "Y." Of these, 1,053 are graduates, 92 are non-graduates and 55 are undergraduates. Classified as to vocation, 197 are now studying law, while 169 and 166 are engaged in manufacturing and finance, respectively. Bill Hefflinger, '93, is the only athlete who has ever earned four different "Y's." During his college career he gathered nine of the emblems. They were as follows: Football, '88, '89, '90 and '91; crew, '91; baseball, '89, and track, '90 and '91.

Get This Thought!

Hupmobile owners—and there are tens of thousands of them—will have no other car, because the Hupmobile gives them complete satisfaction at a lesser cost!

That's the Hupmobile story summed up and boiled down—a car that's never out of commission, and a car that costs less when it's in commission.

Two Mills Per Mile

When we speak of lesser cost we mean all-around lesser cost—upkeep, repairs, tire mileage, gasoline and oil mileage and depreciation when you come to sell the car at second hand.

But let us drive home just one point today—the repair cost indicated by a canvass of all the repair parts ever sold by this company.

Assuming an average of even 5,000 miles per car per year—which, of course, is ridiculously low—the average cost comes to the absurd figure of 2.7 mills per mile.

As a matter of fact, Hupmobile repair cost unquestionably averages 'way below 2 mills per mile—and any owner you talk to will tell you that his total cost is one of the least of his troubles and the service he gets, one of the greatest of his joys.

Go to the Hup dealer and let him tell you the delightful details of a story we can only outline here!

Auto Makers Are On Square, Says National Man

General Manager George M. Dickson, of National Motor Vehicle Company, Says Manufacturers Play Open Game With Consumers

"This great public movement demanding that 'big business' be 'good' simply cannot apply to the automobile industry," said George M. Dickson, general manager of the National Motor Vehicle company.

"The automobile industry is 'good,' it has to be. You might almost say that, take it as a whole, it is the only great industry which puts all its cards on the table in its dealings with the public. Yet it is said to rank second among the industries of the country.

"You can go out and buy an automobile, and know exactly to the penny just where your money goes and who gets it, and what he gets it for. I dare say there isn't an automobile owner in the world who doesn't know how much commission the salesman got out of the deal. More than that, there isn't an automobile owner who didn't feel when he bought his car that the dealer was actually earning his profit, and that the dealer expected part of that profit to apply to service to be rendered later.

"There cannot be any concealment in the automobile business. Literally, every car bought might as well be if you buy a piano or a watch or a taken apart. The buyer wants to know. ing machine, you know there is a profit in it somewhere—a sales commission—but you don't know how much. But in purchasing a car you know right to the dot how much of the price covers sales expense—and the beautiful part of it is that you regard this as part of the actual value of your car.

NO AUTO TRUST.

"There isn't any automobile trust. Yet the business is said to rank second in the world. Here is an illustration of active competition building up a huge industry.

"One thing more—an automobile company has to be 'good.' It has to be honest in its transactions with its dealers and in its dealings with its customers. The element of good faith and of making good on promises plays a greater part in our business than in any other I can think of. If an automobile company isn't on the square, the public verdict goes against it so quickly that effect follows cause in the same breath.

"If I may be permitted to speak of our own individual business, we endeavor to carry this good faith principle into every step, from the making of the National car to the continuing satisfaction of the user after the sale is made. That is why we tell him he should have to raise his hood. We argue that today a car should be purchased just as you buy a watch.

"You buy a watch—a good watch—on your knowledge of the reputation of the maker and your faith in his ability to make good. You entrust the watch to keep time, and you don't worry about wheels, springs, or anything else. You agree to yourself that the maker wouldn't be what he is if he didn't know more about those things than you need to know or care. So we tell the prospective buyer that we offer him the whole car and assume all the responsibility for what is in it.

"This, by the way, is merely another instance of how 'good' the automobile maker tries to be in the conduct of his business as an individual and as a part of a great and growing industry."

Jennings Here To Join Team

The last hand expected to report to Manager Smith for service in the construction of a pennant-winning combination for Atlanta during the approaching pennant race arrived Saturday morning, when Morley Jennings, infield candidate, pulled in from Arkadelphia, Ark. As announced a few days since, Jennings notified Manager Smith early in the week that he wanted to report for a trial, but that he could hardly get away from his coaching duties at Ouachita college before the middle of the month. President Callaway wrote him to come just as soon as possible. He apparently managed to get away from his coaching contract promptly on receipt of these instructions.

Jennings will join in the battle between Holland and Schwind for the shortstop job. He has been working out daily with his college team, and is in excellent physical condition. However, he will not be used in this afternoon's game, but will doubtless draw a trial in one of the early games with Rochester next week.

Senators Smother Vermont

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Washington Americans, with Jack Bentley, a recruit on the mound, held the University of Vermont hitless and scoreless for an eight-inning contest here Friday and gathered for themselves 19 runs and 21 hits.

President Davidson, of the Texas league, announces his complete umpire staff for the season as follows: E. Eugeni, of St. Louis; Tom Connor, of San Antonio; Frank Gardner, of Minneapolis; W. J. Buckley, of Brooklyn; Frank Muir, of Michigan, and James Cullen, of Long Island.

King Alfonso of Spain now spends his spare coin in equipping a polo team.

TEN FOREIGNERS TO ENTER BIG SPEEDWAY MOTOR RACE

INDIANAPOLIS Ind., April 4.—In the opinion of a well informed insider in the racing game, before the entries close for the $50,000 sweepstakes, which will be run on Decoration Day, the nominations of foreign drivers will be in the neighborhood of ten. To the five foreigners already entered now must be added Arthur Duray. Than the blond Frenchman no European driver is better known or more popular in the United States. Duray was a contender in several of the early Vanderbilts on Long Island, and was at Savannah when that great squadron of European racing pilots competed in the first American Grand Prize.

At Ostend last fall Duray eclipsed Bob Burman's high-water mark of 141.73 miles an hour by attaining in a Fiat a speed of 132.9 miles. Duray will drive a Peugeot, owned by J. Meunier, the Swiss chocolate king. The machine is the identical one that captured the Lesser Grand Prix at Boulogne last year, Boillot driving. Though but of 183 cubic inches piston displacement it is easily capable of ninety-six miles an hour, because of which, together with its extreme light weight, it is expected to prove a most formidable contender.

Duray's Peugeot makes a third car of that make to enter the contest, the others being handled by Boillot, the European champion, and Goux, who won the 500 mile race last year. This outfit is expected to rule a favorite for the race, no equally startling combination having put in its appearance to date.

Duray also plans to bring over the big Fiat in which he established his world's straightway record last fall, sending it against Burman's time both on the speedway and Ormond beach, provided he can make satisfactory arrangements with the factory. It is Duray's theory that he can reach 150 miles an hour with this creation if he ever finds a place to let it out. Ormand Beach ought to exactly suit his requirements in this respect, it is thought. On the speedway, of course, he would hardly be able to do over 135, as anything in excess of that figure might send him over a turn into the next county.

An odd circumstance comes to light in the fact that, despite this French training and environment, Duray is a regular American, having been born in New York City some forty years ago. He returned to Paris when but a boy, and has resided there ever since.

English Offer J, Curran Job

TRENTON, N. J., April 4.—Jimmy Curran, coach and trainer of the track athletes at Mercersburg academy, has been offered a job as one of the assistants of the English Olympic team by William R. Knox, of Canada, who recently was appointed head trainer. Knox has the appointment of nine trainers, each of whom will work six months in the year, beginning May 1.

Curran has produced many notable athletes. Among his proteges is "Pete" Maxfield, the junior national shot-put champion.

Another Tenney will break into the game this season, the Lynn club, of the New England league, having signed a young catcher of that name who hails from the University of Florida, where Manager Pat Flaherty saw him work. He is a catcher and Flaherty says he is very fast.

Unique Novelty From Firestone

On March 28 three Firestone tire-wise men made their debut in every part of the country. The tire-wise men are almost life size and are of a chauffeur, a dealer and an owner, each holding a realistic reproduction of a non-skid tires and each figure being given credit for a comment on Firestone tires.

The dealer, for instance, says: "They don't come back so often, but they do come back for more."—The chauffeur: "Tire changes must be made quickly, but not often. That's why I drive on Firestone tires and rims," and the owner, "I'm strong for Firestone tires and rims, because they add to the pleasure and economy of motoring."

The cutouts are featured in the Firestone company's spring advertising and in the windows of Firestone dealers everywhere.

Special stationery, imprinted with the cutouts, has been made up and miniature cutouts for the benefit of the children have been widely distributed.

Studebaker Six Affords Thrill In Oregon Town

Citizens of Grant's Pass Are Treated to Some Big Surprises by Studebaker Dealer on Arrival of First Shipment of "Sixes"

Grant's Pass, Ore., may be a bit off the lines of most personal travel, yet its isolated position does not imply that it is beyond taking on some metropolitan airs. Its citizens are intensely public-spirited, so when it became known that a carload of new Studebaker automobiles, including the first home-owned "Six," had arrived, a good share of the population went down to hold C. G. Allen, the consignee, unload them.

The arrival of that Studebaker "Six" will be remembered for some time in Grant's Pass. And the memory will be a combined thrill and giggle, for Mr. Allen made the most of his opportunity to pull off a little prearranged program and to meet an unexpected emergency with quick wit and self-possession.

While his fellow citizens clustered around the "Six" was rolled triumphantly down an improvised skidway. Gasoline and oil were turned into the tanks and the electric starter did its work. With a cargo of prospective buyers, Mr. Allen went through the gears and dashed away, telling the crowd he would meet them downtown in half an hour.

After gaily climbing the steepest grades they could find—and grades are easier to find than an level ground in that neighborhood—Mr. Allen coursed swiftly back down the main street. There, to the amazement of all beholders, he slowed the car down, opened the door and announced, calling attention to the fact that the car was still traveling on high gear.

For a moment the passengers showed signs of panic, but Mr. Allen assured them they were perfectly safe in a driverless car, provided the car was a Studebaker. He then walked along beside the car, calling attention in a few well chosen words to the full floating rear axle, the elaborate equipment and other details of the "Six."

At a "four-corners" he changed the steering adjustment so that the car ran in a circle while he officiated as ring master, demonstrating the irreversible steering.

A competitor here tried to gum proceedings by calling upon the police to protect the innocent bystanders. Mr. Allen smilingly informed the marshal that there was no danger and, to prove it, removed all of the passengers and let the cop ride.

That night Mr. Allen wired for another carload of "Fives." Grant's Pass has gone wild over its first chance at multiple cylinders.

Thousand Fords Every Day, Now

DETROIT, Mich., April 4.—The fact that an automobile factory is turning out 1,000 complete cars per day, which is the present manufacturing program in the Ford factory, is enough in itself, but it grows in bigness when contributing facts are given.

Figuring on the basis of an eight-hour day, 125 cars must be complete each working hour; and as 250 men are employed on the assembling job, each man completes four cars per day.

In completing the 1,000 car daily quota, these 250 men handle a total of 500 tons of materials. This quantity is made up of 4,000 tires, 1,000 gallons of gasoline, 1,000 pints of oil, 5,000 pounds of grease, 2,000 gallons of water in the cars radiators, 2,000 springs, 5,000 lamps, 48,000 wheel spokes and no less than 200,000 cotter pins.

Dallas Giants Trim Toronto

DALLAS, Tex., April 4.—The Dallas Texas leaguers, held hitless for five innings by Graham, of the Toronto Internationals, fell on his successors and won easily here Friday, 10 to 1. High-Priced Tires

Since Our Reductions, 16 Makes Cost You More Than Goodyears

The facts are these:

No-Rim-Cut tires, because of costly features, used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires.

Yet they excelled so far that they soon outsold any other tire in the world, as they do today.

With mammoth output came lower factory cost. Our overhead cost dropped 24 per cent. New factories, new machinery, new efficiency brought costs down and down.

And we dropped our profits until last year they averaged 6½ per cent.

During 1913 No-Rim-Cut prices dropped 28 per cent. Largely, of course, because of rubber reductions. They reached a point which other makers of good tires do not care to reach.

Now 16 makes sell higher than Goodyear prices—some almost one-half higher. And every tire user wants to know what justifies these prices.

Our answer is this:

Those higher prices can't be justified in any way whatever.

We have had scores of experts working for years to find ways to better No-Rim-Cut tires. And they all agree that better tires are impossible.

Then No-Rim-Cut tires have four costly features found in no other tire. One makes rim-cutting impossible. One saves countless blow-outs, and it adds to our tire cost $1,500 daily.

One lessens by 60 per cent the danger of loose treads. And one is our double-thick All-Weather tread.

Mark this. Not another tire at any price has one of these costly features.

Lower prices are easily explained. Higher prices lack a single shred of basis, save smaller output or a larger profit.

Those are the facts. You don't care to pay for chimerical advantage, and extra price buys nothing else.

Excellence of Design, the Basis of Jackson Success

Jackson

"No Hill too Steep
No Sand too Deep"

IF your demand is for dependable, long continued service, get into the real working parts of the car. Study its design, see the materials that are used for the different parts; examine the little details of construction and note the quality of workmanship.

Take the Olympic "Forty"—$1385

Your first glance at its simple, clean-cut, well balanced appearance will tell you that here is designing ability of the highest order.

The deep, strong frame braced with ample cross members carries its load with strength to spare. It is free to adapt itself to the roughest road without putting strain on the power plant, because the motor is suspended by the flexible three-point system.

Note the compactness of the unit power plant—with motor, clutch and transmission in one housing, making it oil tight, dust and dirt-proof. With this form of construction any possible strains are applied to the power plant as a whole, and have no tendency to throw the bearings out of line. The costliest cars use this design. Its one of the high-class features that gives so many years of serviceability to the Jackson.

If you look to the motor itself you will find the most approved design, the sturdiest construction, the most accurate workmanship. A drop forged crank shaft of special heat-treated alloy steel, with bearings scraped by hand to a perfect fit; pistons and connecting rods of standard weight and balanced to the fraction of an ounce. That is what makes Jackson cars run without vibration at all speeds and so quietly that you must listen to hear them.

The irresistible power in Jackson motors that makes "No Hill Too Steep, No Sand Too Deep" is built into them by twelve years' experience and constant improvement. Every detail of Jackson cars shows this perfected ability in design and construction.

And think of finding all this in a five-passenger touring car—with a 40-horse-power motor, 113-inch wheel base, full elliptic spring suspension front and rear, with an equipment that provides everything—including electric cranking and lighting, all of which you get in the Olympic "Forty" $1385. Two other models.

Majestic "Big Four"—Four-cylinder, long stroke motor, 124-inch wheel base, full elliptic springs front and rear. Electric cranking and lighting. $1985.

Sultanic "Six"—Six-cylinder, long stroke motor, five-passenger, 132-inch wheel base, full elliptic spring suspension, $2150. Seven-passenger, 138-inch wheel base, $2300. Electric cranking and lighting.

We've got the regional bank, and we know what we gonna do with it.

Indications are that the June graduate will have opportunity to begin his business career in the Georgia peach orchard.

The Reserve Bank Committee's Faithful and Excellent Work

The reserve bank organization committee has performed its difficult task with manifest regard for the country's common interests and admirable fairness to every section of the Union. Whatever points the committee might have named as regional bank centers, there were bound to be disappointments and heartburnings. More than two hundred cities were heard from and, of these, thirty-seven were insistent applicants for bank headquarters. It was impossible, of course, that they should all succeed, however meritorious their claims. The committee was limited by law to the selection of not more than twelve, and was governed necessarily by national rather than local considerations. The matter of choice in some instances was doubtless extremely perplexing; but when viewed in its entirety and in all its relationships, the committee's apportionment is obviously just and wise.

Certainly it is just from a standpoint of the great economic and geographic divisions of the country. The East, with its enormous industrial and commercial interests, is given three regional districts and reserve banks, located very wisely at Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

The South likewise is assigned three banks to provide monetary resources for its vast agricultural needs and its expanding enterprise. Richmond, Atlanta and Dallas are each eminently competent to meet the requirements of their respective districts. Atlanta is unquestionably the financial center of the South Atlantic States; and whatever differences of opinion there may be as to other points, the good judgment of the committee in locating a regional bank in this city will not be disputed. Dallas is an excellent choice in the great territory it is to serve. Texas alone possesses sufficient banking capital to furnish the minimum amount required of each regional bank by the new currency law.

It is a matter of regret that New Orleans could not be given a reserve bank. The nation is proud of that splendid city on the Gulf. No one can doubt its present importance or its future greatness. Yet, while New Orleans is natually disappointed, it is assured of service just as satisfactory as that of any regional center. The designation of a city as reserve headquarters carries high distinction, but no other particular advantage. So far as actual banking benefits are concerned, Boston will fare no better than its New England neighbors, Richmond no better than any other point in its territory, and Atlanta no better than its affiliated cities. Branch banks will be placed wherever local conditions show they are needed. It is virtually certain that such an institution will be established at New Orleans and Birmingham and at other cities whose interests cannot be fully served from the regional center. Cities that are now disposed to protest the divisions and centers created by the organization committee will find, when the new system is in working order, that their needs are amply supplied, and whatever regret they may feel in the outset will be more than balanced by the practical benefits they receive.

The South as a whole has peculiar cause to be gratified over the committee's generous recognition of its interests and rights. Heretofore this section has been dependent upon remote quarters of finance, a circumstance that has materially hindered its progress. Henceforth it will have its own financial resources, and will enjoy equal advantages with the East. That is simple justice, to be sure, but it means a vast deal to the South's development.

The fact is, the committee has dealt equably with all parts of the Union. The Middle West is well supplied with regional centers at Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis. The Northwest is recognized through Minneapolis. The group of States including Nebraska, Kansas, Wyoming, Colorado and portions of Oklahoma and New Mexico are to be served through Kansas City. San Francisco can meet the demands of the Pacific coast territory; and, as we have said, branch banks will be established where conditions require.

The more carefully the committee's apportionment is studied, the more convincing does it appear in its broad, practical wisdom. We present below a table showing the population, the area, the number of banks and the capital and surplus of each of the twelve districts:

Dist. No.	Reserve City	Area.	Population.	No. of Banks.	Capital and Surplus.
1	Boston	66,808	5,280,881	446	$ 165,520,000
2	New York	46,170	9,113,279	718	180,604,000
3	Philadelphia	29,868	8,110,217	809	236,340,216
4	Cleveland	183,395	7,961,022	774	162,147,258
5	Richmond	173,818	8,319,313	478	105,054,483
6	Atlanta	273,860	6,660,341	572	77,456,913
7	Chicago	176,940	12,639,283	984	211,068,338
8	St. Louis	146,474	6,726,617	484	87,717,963
9	Minneapolis	417,350	5,724,880	967	78,981,000
10	Kansas City	599,049	6,596,859	850	95,665,042
11	Dallas	404,826	5,310,501	726	92,063,122
12	San Francisco	693,655	5,380,301	514	120,425,422
Total		3,016,650	89,045,616	7,475	$1,785,791,171

Study this table, together with a map of the districts, and you will perceive that the committee has been guided by a very clear consideration of the interests of each part of the country and those of the country as a whole. It has considered the ability of the member banks within each district to provide the minimum capital required for the federal reserve bank; the industrial, commercial and financial connections obtaining in each district, the relations between the various quarters of the district and the city chosen for the regional center; "the fair and equitable division of the available capital for the federal reserve banks among the districts created;" the geography of the district and the facilities for speedy communication between the reserve bank and all the communities it is to serve; and, finally, the committee has considered, to quote its own words, "the population, area and prevalent business activities, whether manufacturing, agricultrul or commercial; its record of growth and development in the past, and its prospects in the future."

The country is singularly indebted to all the members of this committee for their earnest and efficient work. Their responsibility was tremendous; they have discharged it admirably. They have cleared the way for the operation of the new banking and currency system from which the American people will derive immeasurable benefits.

The Tolls Bill in the Senate.

Having passed the House by an overwhelming majority, the bill to repeal canal tolls exemption is now to be considered by the Senate. Ship-subsidists, professional jingoes and chronic enemies of the Wilson administration have conspired to obstruct the measure by every devise at their command. They have formed a lobby as insidious in its way as that which strove to defeat tariff reform months ago. They have organized a campaign of misrepresentation and are bringing to bear upon wavering Senators every influence that prejudice can arouse or the seekers of special privilege employ.

The underlying purpose of this activity is to secure free use of the Panama canal for the coastwise shipping monopoly at the expense of American taxpayers. It amounts, indeed, to an effort to take a million or more dollars a year from the national treasury and put in the pockets of a particular group of ship-owners. Such an end could never be sought openly, wherefore the advocates of ship subsidy pretend that a repeal of the exemption clause would be a surrender to foreign demands and an abdication of American control over the canal. They the making the most of their specious plea, but they will be repudiated in the Senate as decisively as they were in the House.

A reliable poll of the Senate shows forty-nine Senators for repeal, twenty-eight against it and eighteen non-committal. At least ten of the doubtful members are known to favor repeal, and three others are disposed to favor it. The New York Herald, distinguished for conservative and accurate forecasts, declares: "In our opinion President Wilson will win an overwhelming victory in the Senate."

One must commend Huerta for the success of his ostrich-head-in-the-sand policy.

Their Own Pitard.

The ambitious Tories who fanned Ulster's flame and encouraged army revolt, in the hope of blowing up the Liberal party, have been hoisted by their own petard. In seeking to array military against civil power, they have provoked an issue on which the Liberals could appeal to the country with utmost confidence. Whatever doubt there may have been as to whether the English people want Ireland to have home rule, there is no shadow of doubt that they want England to have parliamentary, not army, rule. Naturally, the Tories, or Unionists, are afraid to go to the voters on such an issue. Hence they have ceased their demand for a general election and have hauled down the red flag they raised in north Ireland.

Mr. Asquith, with really dramatic effect, has assumed the war portfolio in the cabinet of which he is prime minister, and is proceeding to adjust the army problem. He will make it clear that the army is the instrument, not the master, of parliament, and that if the army's service in upholding law in Ulster should be required, it must be given. Meanwhile, conditions in Ulster itself have become far more tranquil. The leaders of the trumpeted rebellion, realizing that they cannot count upon revolt in the British army, are awakening to facts. They are evidently beginning to see the grave consequences that must ensue, if they continus the course they began.

Indications are that the Irish problem will be peacefully solved through an acceptance of the compromise plan offered by the Liberal government; that the protesting counties of Ulster will vote themselves exempt from an Irish parliament for a period of six years, while the remainder of the country will be accorded the right of home rule. The crisis that was so threatening a few weeks ago has passed. The Liberal ministry has emerged stronger than ever from the most trying situation in its experience, while the Unionist party is apparently weaker than ever.

The Appeal of the Eastern Railroad.

It is reassuring to learn that the Interstate Commerce Commission will probably decide in the near future whether the eastern railroads shall be permitted to increase their freight rates. The question is one of great pith and moment to the entire country. Scores of enterprises, thousands of investors and the common course of American business wait upon its answer. Whether the increases asked for are to be granted or denied, the present suspense should be ended without further delay.

If it be true, as the railroads insist, that rate advances are necessary for efficient service and the earning of a fair return on investment, there should be no hesitancy in allowing them. As to the practical merits of the appeal, The Journal does not presume to judge. That is a matter on which the Commission alone is qualified to pass. The railroads assert that since 1910 they have added six hundred and fifty-nine million dollars to their property investment, and that last year, "after paying operating expenses and taxes, their net earnings were sixteen million, three hundred and eleven thousand dollars less than in 1910, although their gross earnings were greater." As one of their advocates has expressed it, "They not only earned nothing on the new capital sunk in the three-year period, which at a reasonable rate of return should have yielded about thirty-two and a half million dollars last year, but they obtained a diminished return on their investment as it was in 1910. How long can it be supposed that private capital will go into the railroads under such circumstances? How long will it stay there?"

We are not unmindful of the fact that the railroads themselves are largely responsible for the dubiousness with which their appeals for rate increases are viewed. Had they shown more consideration for public opinion and public rights in years gone by, they would have been spared much of the prejudice they have encountered. But it is of present conditions, not of past conduct, that we must now think. Does public welfare demand that the eastern railroads be permitted to advance their freight charges? Do the larger interests of commerce and industry warrant an increase? Do the needs and the service of the railroads require it? If the evidence submitted to the Commission is affirmative, a reasonable increase should be, and doubtless will be granted.

The railroads are great instruments of the country's business development. They are not masters, but servants of the public. They must be controlled and kept within their proper sphere. But at the same time they must be guarded, as every valuable instrument should be, against deterioration; and they must be rewarded, as every servant should be; they must be permitted to thrive. There is, perhaps, no other industry that touches the country's common affairs at so many vital points as do the railroads. They are essential alike to manufacturing, to agriculture and to commerce. Given unbridled license, they can work irreparable injury, but unless they are given the means and freedom to prosper they cannot perform their due function in the country's economic life. If the railroads suffer, the nation's business will suffer.

It is estimated that the railroads of the United States represent an investment of some eighteen billion dollars. They employ nearly two million people. They create a demand for millions of dollars' worth of mill products. They are not only carriers but also makers of commerce. If, therefore, the facts in the present case indicate that the well-being of the eastern railroads is dependent upon a rate increase, the interests of the public as well as the interests of the roads demand a favorable response.

It need scarcely be said that the Commission should be convinced that this is true before it sanctions a rate advance. Evidently, however, there have been ample time and opportunity for ascertaining the facts precisely; and the sooner the Commission renders a decision, the better will it be for the country's business.

Editorials in Brief

Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty, is an aeroplane enthusiast and also recognizes the importance of the airship. Vickers, the great naval engineers, are about to build for England a great rigid airship of the Zeppelin type. Three smaller non-rigid airships are being built by Vickers, and Armstrong's is building three large semi-rigid vessels on the Forlanini principle. These with an Astra-Torres non-rigid should form the nucleus of a fine air fleet in the opinion of Mr. Churchill.—Chicago Tribune.

Congratulations For Atlanta

(Macon News.)

There will doubtless be a feeling of pride and gratification throughout Georgia over Atlanta's designation as one of the regional bank centers.

All Georgia should be proud of Atlanta. It is a truly progressive city and a credit to any state in the union. It distinctly reflects the enterprise, prosperity and character of the state of Georgia. It stands in the forefront of southern municipalities. Consequently, it was very fitting that one of the regional banks should have been placed in Atlanta. Its geographical location, as much as anything else, entitled it to this honor.

The fact that Atlanta was chosen in preference to either Birmingham or New Orleans, both of which were applicants, shows the important standing which Atlanta has attained in the estimation of national officials.

The regional bank is practically a bank for bankers, but, at that, it means much generally for those people who have relations with banks. In fact, it indirectly means something for every citizen. With the regional bank so close to Macon, there is little likelihood of a severe money stringency ever being felt here. The Macon banks will be able to effect loans in the course of a few hours.

Macon bankers are glad that Atlanta scores this notable victory, and the News has reason to believe that this will be the popular sentiment throughout the state.

Much credit for the establishment of the bank in Atlanta is due to Senator Hoke Smith. He was untiring in his efforts to land the bank for Atlanta. Macon banks were among the first to indorse Atlanta and the designation of that city is a compliment to the wisdom of Macon's policy.

(Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald.)

Birmingham, like Atlanta, was a candidate for a federal reserve bank. The Georgia city won in the contest, and Birmingham congratulates the winner.

Atlanta and Birmingham could not both have a federal reserve bank, and during the hearings before the organization committee in Atlanta, W. P. G. Harding, who was the president of the Birmingham chamber of commerce, made an exhaustive argument in behalf of this city. His remarks made a deep impression upon those who were present, and many representative Atlanta men said at the time that if their city did not get one of the reserve banks it would be glad to see Birmingham successful in its efforts. And similar sentiments were expressed by members of the Birmingham delegation present at the hearings in regard to Atlanta.

The organization committee, having concluded its labors, made official announcement of the districts, with the reserve cities, late yesterday afternoon. While there are some surprises in the matter of regional lines, District No. 6, over which Atlanta will preside, and several other districts, conform very nearly to those proposed by Mr. Harding as shown in the map accompanying his brief prepared at the request of the organization committee.

Of the twelve federal reserve banks to be established, the south gets three—Richmond, Atlanta and Dallas. The south, therefore, as a whole, can but be satisfied with its treatment at the hands of the organization committee.

(Chattanooga Times.)

Atlanta won the fight for selection for a reserve bank for the South. Richmond and Dallas are the other southern cities selected. The Atlanta district, which will include 372 banks with a capital of nearly $5,000,000, includes the territory of Alabama, Georgia and Florida, east and middle Tennessee, south Mississippi and southeastern part of Louisiana. Dallas gets the rest of the west and south. Richmond will have the district of Colorado, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and nearly all of West Virginia.

Since Chattanooga could not obtain one of the banks, our bankers and citizens generally will be very much gratified that Atlanta was chosen. It is close to Chattanooga and there are many elements of sympathy between the two cities. Atlanta bankers showed a commendable spirit in mentioning Chattanooga as their second choice, if Atlanta could not be selected. Atlanta's commercial importance made it a successful candidate.

THE SEARCHLIGHT

An Instrument for Measuring Paper Glaze.

Paper glaze, even more than small type and crowded lines, is a continual harassment to the reader. Paper whose surface gloss reflects strong light glare is harmful for the eyes and discourages all effort toward careful reading. Publishers and paper makers, therefore, of late have devoted much study to the subject of proper paper glazes in order to arrive at a standardized paper gloss which will not strain the eyes. An instrument for the exact determination of the amount of glare from various calendered papers has been invented by Prof. L. B. Ingersoll. By aid of this so-called glarimeter, it is believed, a most desirable paper surface will be determined.

The glarimeter is designed for measuring the brilliancy of a glare spot on the paper to be tested. The paper sheet is placed within an inclosed cabinet and receives from one end through a glass window light from an electric lamp which strikes it at an approximate angle of 57.5 degrees. This light is reflected from the paper at the same angle into an eye-place for the measurement of its intensity. The invention is based upon the principle that paper, in common with most other substances, polarizes that portion of the light which is specularly reflected from it.

Results obtained by Prof. Ingersoll show that astonishing variations in the amount of glare are produced by varying the paper texture. Colored papers reflect almost as much light as plain ones. Much is to be done in determining glare of papers made by all the various processes.

A New Field for the Bible.

A pile of small books was shipped out of New York on March 24 on a long and winding journey of 15,000 miles to the virtually unknown people of a very tiny land. In the boxes were 1,000 Bibles in the dialect of the Gilbar Islands, a sea cluster in the wide seas of Australasia, and they represent the life work of the late Rev. Dr. Hiram Bingham. Never before has such a monumental translation into the Gilbertese text been achieved, and perhaps none other than the famous missionary translator could have done it. The entire expense of printing, packing, shipping and distributing will be borne by the American Bible society.

The preparation and packing was elaborate. Poison was worked into the covers of the Bibles to protect them from insects; in and packages of twenty the books were soldered up in tin to prevent damage by water; fifty trebly strengthened boxes, enclosed in cases of the strongest tin, completed the packing.

From New York the Bibles will go to Sydney, Australia, there to be reshipped to Apaiam, in Micronesia. Ocean Island is only a mile and a quarter in diameter. It is on the very edge of the equator, and a plummet dropped from San Francisco a full 5,000 miles due southwest would hit it. The Bibles are to be taken there because it is very rich in phosphate and ocean-going vessels call there frequently.

On this little speck of earth Richard Grenfell, an agent of the American board in Australia, will meet the Bibles, and with them go forth on a venturesome voyage of distribution to the other islands of the Gilbert group.

Quips and Quiddities

The wealthy old lady was very ill and sent for her lawyer to make her will.

"I wish to explain to you," she said weakly, "about disposing of my property."

"Oh, well," said the old lady resignedly. "I suppose I might as well. You'll get it anyway."

THE FEDERAL CITY

I.—WHY WASHINGTON WAS FOUNDED.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The city of Washington, the capital of the United States of America, is not only the most beautiful city of the western world, is not only intensely interesting on account of its status as the center of American politics, but it is unique in its history. It is the largest purely artificial city of the world, having been founded solely as seat of government and without regard to any of the economic laws that have built up other cities.

The three co-ordinate branches of the government of the United States are located in a single city, Washington, D. C., over which congress has exclusive legislative control. This was not a carefully planned incident of a system of government constructed wholly on a philosophic basis. Like other provisions of the constitution of the United States, the idea of a Federal City did not spring from theoretical but from practical necessity.

The continental congress had a humiliating experience with the states which afterwards composed the union. The requests, appeals and mandates of the congress met with a favorable or unfavorable response, largely in accordance with the views of the respective states as to their own interests, and where state and federal interests clashed the attitude toward the congress by state authorities was of such a character that if the federal government should continue as a guest of any one of the states it was apparent that the congress would be subject to extremely disagreeable local pressure. This unsatisfactory outlook was emphasized when dissatisfied soldiers of the Pennsylvania line, that is, the Pennsylvania contingent of the Continental army—threatened personal injury to members of congress then in Philadelphia unless the overdue pay accounts of the soldiers were settled.

For various reasons the Continental congress lived a wandering life. Military operations had twice compelled it to leave Philadelphia, removing on the first occasion to Baltimore, and on the second to Lancaster, Pa., and then to Yorktown, returning to Philadelphia, thence it was driven by the mutinous soldiers in June, 1783. Congress next met in the college buildings in Princeton; then adjourned to meet in the state house at Annapolis, where Washington resigned his commission. It met next at Trenton, N. J., and ended its wanderings in New York City, where it terminated its existence on March 4, 1789.

Upon wise consideration of this experience, the constitutional convention of 1787 made provision in the constitution for the exclusive jurisdiction of the congress over a tract of territory limited to ten miles square, to become the seat of the government of the United States. There is no requirement of the constitution that either the legislative, the executive or the judicial power, or all of them, shall be located upon the tract thus controlled. If the supreme court desired to hold its sessions in another place than Washington it would seem to be in the discretion of congress to grant the permission. It is well known that the president may exercise his functions wherever he may happen to be, and an executive department might have its headquarters elsewhere than in Washington, subject to the will of the congress. It is said that William Wirt, when attorney general, was summoned to Washington for a conference and returned the message that he was really too busy with his practice to come to Washington and would prefer to use the mails.

There is a constitutional provision that neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting, and this indicates that the congress itself is not bound to sit in Washington.

It has been argued that by its selection of a location congress has exhausted its continental power to establish a seat of government. This is a matter of construction which has been argued and disatisfied with the progress of the city attempted to secure a removal to a more convenient location. In 1814, after the capitol was burned, removal was urged on the ground that Washington could not be defended except at great expense. Both of these propositions were rejected by the congress and, prior to the Civil war, the question of removal to St. Louis as a more central location was mooted, but not brought to a head.

From October, 1778, till July, 1790, the question of a permanent location for the federal government was before congress. The views of the north and south respectively were represented in alternative in the first resolution which was passed, that the buildings for the use of congress should be erected either on the banks of the Delaware or on the banks of the Potomac, the former, of course, being the choice of the northern members, and the latter of the southern.

The first effort for compromise was the suggestion that federal towns should be erected at both places, and this failing, compromise locations were suggested on the Susquehanna and near Philadelphia. These suggestions failing, the southern interest made a bold dash and proposed to locate the capital at Baltimore. The net result of the work of the Continental congress was to eliminate the location on the Delaware and fix the northern choice on the Susquehanna or the vicinity of Philadelphia.

The last named location was agreed upon at the close of the first session of the constitutional congress. The house had passed a bill for the location on the Susquehanna. The senate amended the bill by substituting a location in the "counties of Philadelphia, Chester and Buckingham, state of Pennsylvania, including within it the town of Germantown and such parts of the Northern Liberties of the city of Philadelphia as are not excepted by the act of cession passed by the legislature of the said state."

The most important question before the congress was to determine what character the national debt of the United States should assume. This debt grew out of the expenses of the Revolutionary war and a large portion of it was due to foreign creditors. There was, of course, no question but that the federal government must assume the foreign indebtedness and pay it in full. Another portion of the debt consisted of scrip and other paper which had chiefly been issued to the soldiers and in exchange for supplies. These evidences of indebtedness had been purchased by speculators at reduced rates and there was much opposition to a payment in full. This portion of the debt was largely held in the northern states and the friends of the northern members were in favor of funding it at par, while the doubt of the justice and necessity of paying this indebtedness at its face was strongly presented by southern members.

There was another class of indebtedness which was the subject of still greater discussion. Several of the states had become indebted in large sums for the expense of the war and the proposition to relieve the states of this burden and to add it to the general funded debt of the United States was very strongly opposed. The southern states were not unit in opposing this plan, and the different shades of dissension were sufficient to create three minorities and a deadlock on the permanent location proposition which was held to involve an indication of success or defeat on the refunding legislation.

The story which accounts for the compromise in June, 1790, is that Thomas Jefferson, having recently returned from Europe, was in a neutral position as to the factions and could treat with all sides. Alexander Hamilton, who had the complete funding plan much at heart, laid the situation before Jefferson and sought his assistance. Jefferson gave a dinner to a number of influential members at which the situation was talked over, and it is said that the deal was also made that southern members should concede to the northern representatives the full measure of funding operation proposed by Hamilton and that, as a palliative, the northern members were to agree to the location of the capital on the Potomac. Jefferson's influence with the southern members was sufficient to secure their consent to the funding measure and Hamilton undertook to secure sufficient northern votes for the Potomac location to make it effective.

SINGLE OPERA SEAT SALE WILL BEGIN TOMORROW

Readings and Victrola Selections to Be Given by Miss Dora Hood

The sale of tickets to separate operas will begin Monday morning at the music stores of the Phillips and Crew company and the Cable Piano company, and it is expected the first day's business will prove far ahead of the opening day last year as the season sale was ahead of the past. The sale will continue until the end of the engagement.

The operas to be given beginning April 27 have now definitely been decided upon and purchasers may choose the performance they desire to hear with no danger of a change in program.

The auditorium is so vast and the acoustics so perfect that a seat anywhere in the house is desirable. The prices range from $5 for the best seats to $1 for the seats in the balcony.

Of interest to prospective opera-goers is the announcement that readings will be given by Miss Dora Hood at Cable hall in which each of the operas of the season is to be interpreted by means of the Victrola. Miss Hood will discuss the operas, give selections from the stories, and present on the Victrola the most beautiful numbers sung by the stars of the Metropolitan company.

LIST OF READINGS.

The readings will be given as follows:

Tuesday, April 7, 8:15 p. m.— "Il Trovatore."

Thursday, April 9, 8:15 p. m.—"Lohengrin."

Tuesday, April 14, 8:15 p. m.—"Der Rosenkavalier."

Thursday, April 16, 8:15 p. m.—"Un Ballo in Maschera."

Friday, April 27, 8:15 p. m.—"Madam Butterfly."

Tuesday, April 21, 8:15 p. m.—"Cavalleria Rusticana."

Thursday, April 23, 8:15 p. m.—"Pagliacci."

Saturday, April 25, 3:00 p. m.—"Manon."

THE ATLANTIAN'S EASTER EDITION IS A HUMMER

Publication Comes Out Strong for Woman's Suffrage in This Issue

The Easter edition of The Atlantian is out and is full of good things. The political bee is buzzing in Fulton county as one could readily tell by a glance at the advertisements, but the editorial pages of the Easter edition are its most interesting feature.

There is one on Easter and one on Our City Government. The Atlantian comes out strong for women's suffrage in an editorial which states that "woman's suffrage is on the march and will win."

The senatorial situation is discussed in hoary style and local politics are touch on. Fairfax Harrison, the Bell Telephone company, the Monroe Doctrine, bank clearings in Atlanta, modern science, wireless for trains, Bolling Jones, civil service and the Shriners convention are a few of the things on which The Atlantian sees fit to discuss. Hoke Smith is commended for his work in the United States senate, says The Atlantian: "He has Jackson's nerve, with Jefferson's belief in the people and Jefferson's far-sighted grasp of public questions."

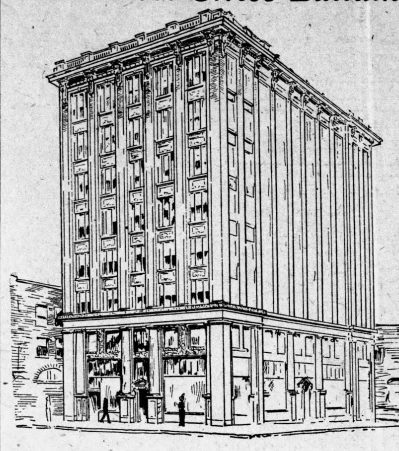
DR. SHIPMAN TO PREACH TWO SERMONS SUNDAY

On account of the absence of the pastor, Rev. Frank K. Shipman, D. D., of Atlanta Theological Seminary, will preach at both morning and evening services at Central Congregational church today. At eleven o'clock the subject will be, "The Empire of Christ," and at the eight o'clock service his theme is "Christ's Autobiography." These topics are especially appropriate to the Lenten season and are preparatory to the Easter services next Sunday.

Ford Auto Stolen

A Ford automobile, license No. 1053, owned by Smith and Martin, was stolen Thursday afternoon about 5:15 o'clock from in front of the Third national bank building. The front and back axles of the machine were painted black.

To Raze Old City Hall To Erect Office Building



Old Structure to Be Torn Down and Modern Fire-Proof Building for Law Offices Will Occupy Its Site

Reuben R. Arnold and Harvey Hill have announced positively that the old city hall building corner of South Pryor and Hunter streets, will be razed when the superior courts which are now occupying it are moved into the new court house.

Then a modern, steel construction, fireproof office building will be erected on the site at a cost of approximately $150,000. Architects Walker and Chase have practically completed the plans for the new structure, which will be seven stories in height, with a foundation for ten stories, and work will probably commence just as soon as the courts move.

Mr. Arnold in talking of his plans declared that the building will be especially adapted for law offices. It is especially convenient for lawyers, being just across Hunter street from the site of the new court house and within two blocks of the state capitol, which houses the supreme and appellate courts and the big state law library.

The ground floor will be rented for stores, Mr. Arnold says, while there will be a restaurant and a barber shop in the basement. Already some of the space has been requested by law firms.

The building, which will be razed to give way to the new structure was for a number of years known as the chamber of commerce building. Later it was used for a number of years as the city hall and was purchased by Messrs. Arnold and Hill, when the city government moved to the present city hall building, selling the old property at auction.

JEWISH ORCHESTRA GIVES CONCERT SUNDAY NIGHT

The Jewish Alliance Orchestra will give a concert Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Alliance hall.

The program follows:

FIFTH WARD CITIZENS SEEKING IMPROVEMENTS

Recently Organized Club Has Mapped Out Extensive Campaign

At a recent meeting of citizens of the Fifth ward the Fifth Ward Improvement club was organized. Charter and by-laws were adopted and the club expects to begin active work in the interest of the ward at once.

The object of the club, as stated in the constitution, is to secure general improvements such as increased street work, more schools, parks, better fire protection, express car service and other conveniences.

The club agreed on certain improvements that it wants at once and decided to bring them to the attention or council and various boards and to keep appearing before the boards and committees until they obtained desired results.

ATLANTA SOCIALISTS CELEBRATE MAY DAY

To properly celebrate May Day the Atlanta Socialists will meet at the temple of Labor Sunday afternoon at three o'clock for the purpose of making all necessary arrangements. May Day is always celebrated by speeches, music and feasting throughout the world wherever socialists are found, and the Atlanta branch will have several of the most prominent speakers here for the purpose of explaining the hopes and aims of the party.

MANY POSTERS USED TO BOOST CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

Chamber of Commerce Co-operates With Club Women in Advertising Feature

To boost Atlanta's "Cleanup Campaign" the chamber of commerce, in co-operation with the club women under the leadership of Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, has distributed throughout Atlanta a number of posters advertising Cleanup Day.

The stands for these posters were kindly donated by Henry L. DeGive, of the DeGive advertising firm. Over fifty of them have been placed effectively about the city.

Cleanup work is progressing rapidly and by April 17 and 18 the windup of the campaign, when the school children take active part, it is believed Atlanta will indeed be the Spotless Town which the posters proclaim it.

When Easter Sunday Turns the Tide

Time turns on a pivot at Easter time and Spring is ours, March winds and other disturbing elements having agreed to hold their peace.

Change is in the air. Things old lose caste, and you find yourself nosing around where the new suits are. To choose one for yourself is the important decision of this pre-Easter week.

A new suit does bring to you the eyes of the world; you feel that. It's the seeing eye that you would attract, and the suit that gets it for you is your right bower.

The suit you wish to be seen in, "that's the question."

When you wear a suit from the Muse Spring assemblage commended especially for your personal use by this house, the question evolves itself into emphatic decision.

It's the short cut to satisfaction.

This is a service store for men. This means not alone the prompt and unhurried providing suits for men, but that essential assistance that provides the suit for the man.

You pick your pattern from many suits of your size grouped conveniently for quick inspection. You slip into the model chosen for your individual build, the style of your style. That is the suit you will choose to hold up to the seeing eyes for approval.

You will get it.

HARD RACE FOR SPELLING MEDAL AT GIRLS' NIGHT

Bad Weather Hurts Attendance — Hiccoughs Studied

BY EDITH M'MANUS.

Mrs. Gardner, of New York, visited the school last Friday night and gave us a very interesting talk which we all enjoyed very much.

On account of the bad weather the attendance has not been good in the fourth division, but there is much interest being shown in the work. There are two new girls in the fourth division: Viola Wallace and Annie Lacey. We are glad to welcome Ida Bell back to the class, after a long absence on account of the measles.

We are very grateful to the Sunday school class from the Park Street Methodist church which has given us such generous aid recently.

Virginia Hood is a new girl in division two. Julia Guy and Helen Weintraub were the only two girls to receive hundreds in spelling this week. The girls continue to do good work in this class.

Sophie Weintraub and Tena Hartman are running a close race for the spelling medal this year. If they don't study real hard some of the other girls are going to catch up with them, as there are several who are pretty close.

One of the Jewish girls had a case of hiccoughs last Tuesday night, and one of the other girls, always on the alert to learn something new, asked Miss Sugarman, the teacher, what was the matetr with Celia. Miss Sugarman explained to the class what hiccoughs are and to impress the word on the minds of the girls wrote it on the blackboard.

"But, Miss Sugarman, what grade do we have to be in before we may hiccoughs?" asked Rose.

"Why, dearie, you may have them right now, if you wish," replied Miss Sugarman.

Rose Zimmerman, Hannah Smith, Rose Sheppard, Lena Epstein, Marion Giannetti, Yetta Greenberg, Annie Bernath and Sara Lebowski received hundreds in spelling this week.

Pictures for Best History Students at Walker Street

The eighth grade children are now living in the sixteenth century. They have already drawn some real good representations of Sir Walter Raleigh and now are drawing pictures to represent Queen Elizabeth.

The girls of the eighth grade wish to thank the principal of the Girls' High school for inviting them to their play, "Dido." It was quite a treat and very much enjoyed. The girls played their parts well for amateurs and the music added much to the entertainment.

In a spelling match held Tuesday in the eighth grade Mollie Bressler outspelled every other pupil.

We have been practicing running and jumping and have made some good records. We practice throwing the basketball and some of the girls can throw it as well as the small boys can.

Lamar Davis stood head in spelling in the fourth grade A. J. D. Rogers stood head in third grade B. The fifth section had the most stars in third grade A.

Mrs. Yarbrough, the eighth grade teacher, gives pictures to children who are perfect in history for a week. Many of the children have had a picture every week. On Monday those children who have made a perfect mark the week before are allowed to study while the others recite.

MOLLIE BRESSLER.

Pitched a Three-Hit Game Faith School Is Busy

The fifth grade has very pretty exercises for field day. Dr. Toepel visited the school and praised them for the good work they had done.

We are very proud of the sixth and first grades. They have received excellent in music every time that the musical directors have visited them.

The sixth grade society will meet Monday and are going to have some very nice recitations.

Those who are on the honor roll of the fifth grade are Ruby Crane, Anna Lesnoff, Ruby Langley, Callie Nail, Elsie Williams, Ethel Patrick, Jessie Smith.

The fourth grade had a very exciting spelling match last week. It took very hard words to bring the boys and girls down, but at last only Mary Martin and Turner Hammock were left.

The sixth and fifth grade boys have a ball team and enjoy playing very much. We have little room on our yard, but the boys are allowed to play ball on a large tract of land just next to the school yard. We take our exercises out there, because it is so much more level than our yard.

We are all busy practicing for field day. We hope to have winners for representatives.

MILDRED FAITH.

Fraser's Ball Team Has Won Two; Lost Only One

As usual our eighth grade came out ahead in the contest for the highest average in attendance.

Miss Jones' little first grade A received the spelling banner last week. Their average was 99.6 per cent.

In the seventh grade Margaret Gouge led the honor roll last month. In the eighth grade the members of the honor roll are Frank Akers, Mary Weiner, Florence Sanders, Sam Pasko and Moses Banks.

Our ball team is in good practice now. We have played three league games and have won two. Tuesday we played Battly Hill at Grant park and for the second time were victorious. The score was 16 to 5. Mallon Sheffield and Lodetta Crutchfield pitched and Ed Thompson caught for Fraser. We play Hill Street Thursday and Peeples Friday.

Frances Craighead, a little girl from the second grade, who reads unusually well, came up to the upper grades and read a selection from the second grade reader, which was very much enjoyed.

Thursday afternoon there will be a candy pulling at Fraser and we are to play a basketball game with Pryor. We are expecting a large attendance and a great deal of fun.

FRANK M. AKERS, JR.

DONALD FRASER TEAM IN GOOD SHAPE FOR B. H. S.

Clarkston Beaten in Slow Game by Score of 3 to 2

BY R. T. BROWN.

With everything in readiness for the game with B. H. S. the team is only waiting for the umpire to say "Play ball!" Though luck was with them in the last basketball game, we are going at them hard to have revenge. In a practice game with Clarkston on Thursday evening, in a very slow game, Donald Fraser won in the ninth by a run of Collins. The final score was 3 to 2.

There was no sensational playing on either team, both apparently afraid to open up.

The lineup of Donald Fraser in the first game will probably be as follows:

Burgess, catcher; Emmett or Pollock, pitcher; Phillips, 1b.; Malloy, 2b.; Collins, ss.; Boswell, 3b.; VanValkenberg, cf.; Hunt, lf.; Stockbridge, rf.

The question for debate Saturday is: Resolved, That the United States should own and operate the telegraph lines of this country. This question has been argued by many colleges of the south. There is sure to be good argument on both sides.

Hill's Boys Enjoyed Day at Home While Girls Visited

The putting forth of a full bloom on one of our flowers has encouraged us to work still harder to make our yard more beautiful. With the aid of this beautiful spring weather we hope to succeed with our efforts.

The absence of Miss Fluker, teacher of the fourth grade, is regretted by many. She was succeeded by Miss Hancock, our supernumerary. We hope to welcome Miss Fluker back soon.

Miss Hudson, of the eighth grade, has also been absent. During her absence we were taught by Miss Wesley, our principal.

The girls of the eighth grade received and accepted invitations to an entertainment at the Girls' High school. The boys envy themselves for this but we enjoyed the day all the more staying at "home." Although we envy them we congratulate them on receiving the honor of being guests of the occasion.

Our candy pulling of last week met with much success. A neat little sum was credited to our bank account. A picture was offered to the grade of the grammar grades and one for the primary grades for the largest amount taken in by one grade. The third and seventh grades won the prizes.

Our opponents for the third baseball game of the season were Formwalt's team. It was a very disagreeable day for a game, as the ground was very wet and soft. Hill took the lead until the last. Formwalt then slipped up on us and passed us three runs. The score was 8 to 5.

In a practice game with W. F. Slaton school's team, Hill's fast nine completely lost them. Hill's playing was superior to W. F. Slaton's by a large margin.

Our next game is with Fraser, which was postponed on account of rain.

JOHN PEACOCK.

Formwalt Girls Thank G. H. S. For Invitation to Browning

The Formwalt eighth grade girls wish to thank the faculty of the Girls' High school very much for inviting them to the lovely play which was presented by the Mallon society. It was indeed very fine and we enjoyed it greatly.

In nearly all the grades of the school the drawing is causing much interest, especially in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. The subjects that have to be drawn are Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, knights during the reign of Elizabeth and the Puritans.

The new dancing steps which are being taught to the fifth grade by Dr. Toepel are very pretty. The girls especially enjoy this kind of exercise as it brings out their gracefulness and artistic poses.

About the best and most enjoyable composition of the month was writing a newspaper news on "What Makes Atlanta Such a Progressive City?" Each pupil had to write one topic on this subject and putting all of these together we cetrainly had a fine composition. Another one of the compositions that the eighth grade enjoyed was writing business letters and applying for positions. We always look forward to writing these compositions and hearing them read before the class.

The boys and girls who are to be representatives for field day are working real hard. Formwalt hopes to make a good showing and if we don't it won't be the fault of our representatives.

Formwalt is again the winner of the baseball game played between Hill and Formwalt Tuesday afternoon. The score being 8 to 5. We were sorry that the rain prevented the game with Peeples Friday, but we expect to play them on Thursday. Every one is looking forward to a hadr fought game between these two schools, as they both have mighty fine teams.

LURLINE BELK.

Calhoun Plays Dodge Ball; Ten Stand in Oral Spelling

We are very proud of our fifth grade. They have not only won the attendance banner for the past two weeks but the following children could not be spelled down in the recent match: Nellie Dysart, Fay Van Sickle, Nellie Ward, Mary Agnes Phillips, Elizabeth Bancker, Mary Hardage, Sadie Woodliff, Richard McMillan, Fletcher Pierce and Vernon Lindsay.

The sixth grade boys are very much interested in their "dodge ball" team for field day. They were victorious in a practice game with the eighth grade Monday.

The fourth grade is also quite enthusiastic over their "shuttle relay" race.

The seventh grade is so anxious for honors that they are willing to challenge any grade to a baseball game.

The eighth grade girls certainly did appreciate the cordial invitation of Miss Muse, principal of the Girls' High school, to see the play "Dido." And after seeing such a finished play it makes us feel more anxious than ever for next fall to come that we may enter the High school.

AMELIA MELLICHAMP.

At the top is shown the star infield that is almost impregnable. On the top row, left to right, are Floyd, first base; White, coach; Sid Johnston, shortstop. Bottom row, Ewing, sub infielder; "Blu" Spurlock, captain and third baseman.

LOCUST GROVE BEATEN BY BOYS' HIGH 5 TO 1

In Game Played on Saturday on Locust Grove Diamond

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

LOCUST GROVE, April 4.—Boys' High defeated the fast Locust Grove nine here Saturday afternoon by a five to one count. The feature of the game from Locust Grove's standpoint was the pitching of Hancock, who struck out twelve B. H. S. batters. Guy Fridell did the hurling for the visitors, fanned three and gave up seven hits. Boys' High connected with Hancock's delivery for a total of nine safe bingles, aided by errors on Locust Grove's part in the first of the game, managed to chalk up the aforesaid five runs.

The whole High school team played jam-up ball, giving their pitcher perfect support. Especially spectacular was the fielding of Johnston and Spurlock at third and short.

The batteries were: For the locals, Hancock and Owens; for B. H. S., Fridell and Weaver.

Peeples St. Has Debate That Male Is Lazier Than Female

Friday the eighth grade enjoyed a stirring debate by th efifth grade A pupils. The subject of this argument was, "Resolved, That the male is lazier than the female." We had fever thought of all the cares and duties of a woman until we heard this debate, nor had we taken into consideration the hardships of a man. Those who took part in behalf of a woman were Elsie Henkee, Ruth Burnett, Ruth Kelley and Vencincia Allen. On the negative side were Harold Oxburn, Ralph Mills, Robert Griffin, Stewart Snodgrass and William Hargrave. The judges, Harry Owensby, Annebeth Smith and William Hartman, rendered a decision in favor of the negative side.

Monday the eighth grade girls accepted a much-appreciated invitation to a play, "Dido" at the Girls' High school. After this delightful entertainment we made a visit to the state capitol, and there visited Governor Slaton's office. We were rather disappointed to find the governor out, as we were really anxious to talk with him. We strolled through the immense halls, and up the spacious staircases, admiring and inspecting the many pictures of our most beloved men. We found this trip a most instructive one.

The total sum of the money derived from the ice cream festival, which was undertaken and carried out by the executive committee of the Junior Civic club, paid for the larger part of the baseball team's suits or outfits. The small deficit was made up among the players. Monday their suits came and they are proud of them, indeed.

In the dark, but delightfully, have we been studying for final examinations, not knowing upon which to put the larger part of our time.

Despite the heavy rainfall Tuesday and Wednesday, our attendance has been kept up to the standard for the past week.

Tuesday afternoon the Peeples street ball team completely swamped the Walker team with a score of 15 to 1. A fine game was pitched by Harry Owensby.

MARY ARNOLD.

STATE BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

In this cartoon, drawn by Beck at B. H. S., high school seems to be going after the mule instead of "bringing home the bacon." Boys' High won that mule by defeating Lanier High at Macon, after Locust Grove, Columbus and the rest had been eliminated. B. H. S. won the local tag and then proceeded to fight Lanier for state honors. Riverside seems to base her claim on the fact that she defeated one team in the local league—a team that finished fourth.

BOYS' NIGHT IS GIVEN TALK BY SUPT. SLATON

Boys Working on Shorthand, Mumps, Etc., Strike School

BY LAWTON FLOURNAY.

Taylor Flanigan and Emile Gallmond, two pupils in the business class, are now taking business letters in dictation. Dewey Harbin, Otto Johnson and Norman Cochran have almost completed the text-book and are making every effort to do so within the next week or two.

Clyde Hooper is making use of his shorthand in a practical way for the past month he has been working in an office taking from ten to fifteen letters a day, in dictation. We are sorry to report the continued absence of Tom Tumlin from school on account of illness. We hope he will soon return.

Superintendent Slaton visited the school last week and greatly encouraged the boys, by commending them for their grit and determination in coming to school every night. We greatly appreciate these brief talks from the superintendent.

Miss Scott, teacher of the foreign class, has been sick for more than a week. We all wish her a quick recovery.

Julius Williamson and J. D. Spivey remained standing in the spelling match held in the fourth grade last Friday night.

The mumps have struck the seventh grade. Horace Cagle has just recovered, Edgar Holcomb is the latest victim.

Willie Gober is ill with diphtheria. Joe DuPree is just recovering from a severe attack of stomatine poisoning. There are many others who were absent on account of illness.

LAWTON FLOURNOY.

Walter Rich Civic League Held Meeting at Pryor St.

Our Walter Rich improvement club met last Friday. We had a very good meeting, and the sixth grade rendered a very interesting program. A motion was made to change our name to Walter H. Rich Junior Civic league. The children decided to this, thinking that they might help the state in forming many leagues. The program was as follows:

"The Gardener"—Gussie Belle Steele.

"The Sun Flower"—I. V. Samuels.

"Trees, Willows, Oak, Cork, Hemlock Palm"—By Five Girls.

"Trees"—Wynette Manning, Louise Boston, Melba Manning.

Recitation—Sarah Pierce.

"The Hickory Tree"—Luther Hathcock.

"The Sandalwood Tree"—Dorothy Crenshaw.

Recitation—Rose Coleman, Mary Chaffin, Sarah Pierce.

Recitation—Ellis McClelland, Joe Delaney, Luther Hathcock.

"Billman's Grand March"—Kathleen Gay.

Recitation—Elsie Barlette, Minnie Picken.

"Uses of Birds"—Joe Delaney.

"Eagles"—Margaret Walker, Margaret Grainger.

"Bird Sanctuaries"—Gussie Belle Steele.

Several graphophone solos were also given, which the children greatly enjoyed.

Our eighth grade teacher, Miss Haygood, offered a box of candy to the child who had improved the most with the arm movement in writing. Warren Davis won the candy.

The lower grades received a visit from Miss Graves last week. She taught the fourth grade a game with the basketball which they greatly enjoyed. The third grade received a star.

The fifth grade received letters from a fifth grade in Winfield, Kans. Fannie Mae Cook and Comer Kimball are going to answer them.

The school sympathizes with Sarah Pierce in the loss of her mother. The sixth grade especially is sorry, as she was a member of their class.

HAZEL HUDDLESTON.

Girls at Forrest Visited While Boys Planted Flowers

The fifth grade baseball team met and defeated the North Avenue fifth grade team Saturday morning. The girls of the fifth grade have organized a basketball team, but on account of the bad weather have not been able to play any games.

In a one-sided game last Monday the seventh grade baseball team defeated the North Avenue seventh grade team by a score of 16 to 4.

The little folks in the first grade are enjoying their drawing very much. They are all delighted to stand up in front of the room and pose for the other children to draw.

Miss King, our third grade teacher, has been out of school for the past week on account of illness. We hope she will soon be with us again.

The sixth grade has planted two beds of red and white verbenas in front of the school. The class contributed the flowers and while they were at an entertainment at the Girls' High school Friday the boys set out the plants.

BARTOW A. WARLICK, JR.

BASEBALL SEASON IN PREP LEAGUE BEGUN

Boys' High, Stone Mt., Peacock Returned Winners Friday

The baseball season in the Prep league was formally opened Friday afternoon when six of the seven nines in the league got under way. All the teams look good this year and the fine article of ball that will be shown in prep circles should result in one of the most successful seasons in the history of these schools.

Boys' High met Donald Fraser at College Park, Marist played Stone Mountain at Marist and Peacock took on Georgia Military academy at Peacock.

At College Park, in a rather one-sided game, Boys' High school piled up seventeen runs in six innings, while Donald Fraser was accumulating one. The twirling for the winners was done by Warwick, a young southpaw, who pitched a steady game, allowing only four hits, striking out four and passing two.

Emmit started the game for Donald Fraser, but was yanked in the second round and Pollock substituted. They were hit for a total of fifteen safeties.

The feature of the affair was the hitting of Johnston, Floyd and Ewing for Boys' High school, and Van Valkenburg for the Decatur lads. Sid got four singles out of as many times at bat, Floyd a double, a triple and a home run and Ewing a single and a double. Van Valkenburg connected Donald Fraser's lone tally by helping himself to a triple.

The Marist cadets slipped a few cogs, skidded some and then went up in air out at Marist college before the strong Stone Mountain nine. Bratton pitched some good ball for Marist college, but was given poor support and had to be relieved by Wrigley. The mountain boys annexed sixteen hits for as many runs. Hall, their twirler, had good control and held his opponents to five safe taps.

Peacock sprung a surprise by downing the College Park team by a 5 to 3 score. Lyman Murphy did some star pitching, putting his fellowmen across the pan to the tune of one, two, three.

Tenth Defeated Ivy: Newman Working for Field Day

Second grade A and the fifth grade enjoyed Mrs. Osgood's visit very much. So did the other grades.

Miss Smith visited second grade B and the little folks enjoyed her visit very much.

In the contest in spelling in the third grade A the "blues" are ahead. They have enjoyed their drawing very much, especially Miss Siegling's lessons.

The little third grade B won all three bankers, spelling, best line and attendance.

Jeannette Bacon is well from measles and the fourth grade is very glad.

The fifth grade wish to thank Emily Walker for the fish bowl she gave for the three new fish they have just bought.

Josephine Joel, Ruby Murphy, Elizabeth Lockhart and Rose Eichberg are on the honor roll in the sixth grade.

The seventh grade has organized a baseball team and will play any other seventh grade team in the city. Ogden Johnson led the honor roll with an average of 97 3-13.

Tenth Street defeated Ivy, 17-3, in a game of baseball. Newman pitched a three-hit game.

The eighth grade girls appreciate the invitation to a play given at the Girls' High school and also Mr. Slaton's kindness in allowing them to accept it.

Linton Hopkins, of fourth grade A, has a style of his own in writing compositions. His teacher likes his style and sends them to the papers.

MY PET ANIMAL.

I have a pet dog. It is a little dog named Toby. He is very fat and is very soft. He is very playful.

My little pet dog was given to me by my aunt, because she had another big dog. She thought the big dog would some day kill Toby, so she gave him to me on my birthday.

I feed and care for my little dog because he is little. He is nice and never will bite. He knows me and likes me and so I care for him as I would care for any plaything.

I give him what he likes. I also let him have his way, because he is only a little dog. He is quiet and does not bark or cry at night, and so my father lets me keep him.

LYNN FORT.

With the exception of Friday of this week, Tech High will play some ball every afternoon in the coming week. Tech, Stone Mountain, Peacock-Fleet, Boy Scouts and Riverside will be their opponents.

GEORGIA MAN IS RESCUED FROM DREADFUL AFFLICTION IN TIME

Resident of Woodstock Finds Himself Restored After His Physicians Failed

T. A. Lewis, who lives out on Route 3, Woodstock, Ga., was the victim of stomach troubles for a long time. He tried the treatments of many doctors. He tried all sorts of remedies.

His sufferings were a serious handicap to his work.

Then he tried Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Just as it always does, the first dose proved to him what could be done for his ailment. He took the full treatment; then wrote:

"I have taken your wonderful stomach remedy and am feeling better than I have felt in four years.

"Your remedy does just what you claim it will do.

"I tried several doctors, but they did me no good. I am glad that I have found your wonderful remedy. I have recommended it to some of my neighbors who need it."

Mr. Lewis' experience is just like that of thousands of others who have been delivered from stomach troubles.

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy clears the digestive tract of mucoid accretions and poisonous matter, produces relief to sufferers from ailments of the stomach, liver and intestinal disorders. Many dread operations, many from dangerous operations, many are sure it has saved their lives.

The wonderful success of this remedy has caused many imitators, so be cautious. Be sure it's MAYR'S. Go to a reliable drug store and ask about the remarkable results it has been recently publishing—or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for free book on stomach ailments and many letters from grateful people who have been restored. Any druggist can tell you its wonderful results.—(Advt.)

WOULD AVOID CONGESTING FRUIT MARKETS OF EAST

All Georgia Growers Will Be Urged to Distribute Crop Through Exchange

To prevent congestion in a few of the large markets of the east during the coming summer, through direct shipments by independent growers which would have a tendency to depress the market on all Georgia peaches, an active canvass will be undertaken this week to get the 30 or 40 per cent of growers in Georgia, not now in the Georgia Fruit exchange, to join that organization and distribute their crop through the exchange.

J. H. Hale, president of the Hale Georgia Orchards company at Fort Valley, declares it would mean thousands of dollars for the Georgia growers if those not now operating through the exchange would do so.

An endorsement of the exchange was received in a letter from Mr. Hale at his winter home in South Glastonbury, Conn., by Manager H. D. Marks, of the Georgia Fruit Exchange, in which he stated that reports received in the east confirmed those given out by the Georgia Fruit exchange that it was up to Georgia this year to furnish the peaches to the world, as practically all the other peach crops throughout the south had been ruined by the cold.

Speaking of marketing conditions, Mr. Hale wrote:

"Certainly with the peaches practically wiped out in Texas, we, with a good crop in Georgia, ought to be on top of the heap this year and we might be as to prices if every grower in the state would only join the exchange. That 30 or 40 per cent of growers, who keep out of the exchange, either load up the few picked markets by direct consignments on their own initiative, or are solicited into doing so, and then these markets in a large way control the prices and keep dealers hunting for consignments rather than out to buy."

An active canvas to increase the membership of the exchange will be undertaken this week.

YAARAB PATROL WILL REPEAT BALL APRIL 24

Repetition of Great Social Success of January Is Expected by Shriners

Yaarab Patrol of Shriners will repeat April 24, the ball which was such a great social event of January. This announcement will bring joy to everyone who attended that event, which was one of the most elaborate functions of the winter.

The same committee that was in charge of the January ball will make the arrangements for this one. The committee includes the following members of the patrol: J. O. Seaman, C. E. Quarles, J. L. Grice, Dr. F. E. Van der Veer, H. C. Ashford, Albert T. Akers, E. D. Tompkins, L. H. Geiger.

The ball will be held in Taft hall, auditorium armory, Friday evening, April 24. More than 1,500 people are expected to attend. Music will be furnished by a large orchestra, refreshments will be served and the hall will be gay with Shrine decorations.

FAMOUS EVANGELIST IS COMING FOR REVIVAL

Dr. Charles L. Goodell, of New York, Will Be Here April 17 to 26

"In my estimation Atlantians will hear the greatest pastor evangelist in the world today, when Dr. Charles L. Goodell, of New York, comes to take part in our old-fashioned revival, April 17 to 26," declared Dr. B. F. Fraser, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, yesterday in discussing prospects for the old-time revival which St. Paul's and Trinity churches, Atlanta, are planning.

"Few men have had such uninterrupted success in public life as Dr. Goodell. Since 1890 he has been pastor in Boston, Brooklyn and New York. He is a man who knows how to bring things to pass. His success in building up his churches is phenomenal. He received on one occasion into Calvary church, New York, three hundred and sixty-four persons, which is said to be the largest number ever received at one time into a Protestant church. In twenty months he made a gain over all losses of more than a thousand church members. Calvary now numbers over 2,600 members and is the largest Methodist church in America. For years he has spoken every Sabbath to the largest Protestant congregation in New York City. The crowding of the people to his ministry is sufficient evidence of his surpassing pulpit ability. He is recognized throughout the country as a man with a message, and is in constant demand on great occasions."

Of equal interest will be the coming of Bishop John C. Kilgo, of Durham, N. C., whose ability as a pulpit orator is already well known to Atlantians.

Among the other distinguished southerners who will take part in the revival is Dr. S. A. Steel, of Columbia, S. C. Dr. Steel has served leading churches of his denomination in Nashville, Memphis, Richmond, Louisville and Kansas City.

The main services of the revival will be held in St. Paul's church, while night services will be held both at St. Paul's and Trinity churches.

MAN HELD FOR MURDER OF WIFE AND CHILDREN

Story That Another Killed Them and Set House on Fire Is Not Believed

(By Associated Press.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 4.—On the recommendation of the coroner's jury, Elihu Francis is being held in the Arkadelphia, Ark., jail today charged with the murder of his wife and three children, who were killed yesterday and their bodies cremated in the fire which destroyed the home.

Francis declares the crime was committed by a man unknown to him, who left the house and ran down the road.

A boy and a girl passing along the road in one direction and a man in another declare they saw no one. They rushed to the house when they saw the flames and were warned not to enter by Francis. The boy and girl looked through the window and saw the mutilated bodies of Mrs. Francis and the three children.

Bloodhounds yesterday followed a trail, starting on the north side of the house, to a water trough, behind which was found a bloody rag, and from there to a stump, where Francis had been taken during the coroner's inquest. The hounds stopped where Francis had been sitting. The charred bodies of Mrs. Francis and her children were found in the house; also an axe, covered with

RED MEN'S DRUM CORPS MAY CONTEST FOR PRIZES

Invitation Received to Attend Meeting to Be Held in Jersey City May 30

The drum corps of the Red Men in Atlanta has received an invitation to attend the New Jersey and American Championship Drum Corps meeting, which will be held in Jersey City, May 30.

At that time there will be contests in which handsome prizes will be offered, and Atlanta may send a picked corps of men to win the prizes for themselves and honor for Atlanta.

A special corps of 150 men have already been organized to take part in the festivities of Shriners' week, and if the Atlanta drummers decide to go to Jersey City they will pick about 50 men from the special Shriners corps.

Bob Lawshe, chief drummer of the Red Men's corps and drum instructor, will bring the question up at a meeting of the corps Sunday afternoon.

How to Overcome a Bad Constipation

There is a Mild Laxative That Will Bring Safe and Pleasant Relief Overnight.

MRS. N. FRANTZ

It is only natural that the simplest of ailments should be the most general, and so we have a whole nation suffering from constipation and indigestion, for they are closely allied. But common as constipation is many people do not seem to know they have it. They will complain of headache, drowsiness or biliousness, all unconscious of the cause of the trouble.

You should have full and free movement at least once a day. If you pass a day you are constipated, and the result will be that you will catch a cold easily or have a more serious ailment. To cure the constipation and forestall still graver trouble take a dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at night before retiring and by morning relief will come without disturbance from sleep or any inconvenience.

Legions of people use it regularly in such emergencies, some of them formerly chronic invalids who had suffered from constipation all their lives. Mrs. N. Frantz 67 Eighth St., Salem, Ohio, took physics for years, and, worst of all, without much avail. Finally, she began to take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and today she is no longer troubled and eats what she likes. Many others will tell you that they have tried most things recommended for this purpose but have found Syrup Pepsin the only one always reliable. A bottle can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar, the latter size being bought by families already familiar with its merits.

Syrup Pepsin is mild, pleasant-tasting and non-griping. Mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is effective in grownups. It is for everyone who suffers from any form of stomach, liver or bowel trouble, constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, etc. Its action will so delight you that you will forever avoid harsh cathartics, purgatives, pills and salts.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

BRIGHT BILLS AT TWO THEATERS

Forsyth Offers Breezy Vaudeville and Bijou New Melodrama—Atlanta Dark All the Week

A bill of excellent quality has been arranged for this week at the Forsyth. There are seven acts of unusual worth and collectively they will present an entertainment that promises to class with the best triumphs of the season at the busy theater.

The star feature will be the appearance of Ray Cox, one of the most successful of the original singing comedians of America. This talented woman creates all of her acts, and has never been known to repeat. She has arranged for her engagement here a cycle of new songs and sayings and will introduce something new in gowns and hats. Miss Cox is indeed one of the big features of modern vaudeville.

Cora Youngblood Corson's "Girls of the Golden West," a combination of 40 pretty maidens, will offer a number that promises to be one of the drawing features. They will give band and orchestra numbers, solos, duos and trios.

George Rolland and company in their sketch, "Fixing the Furnace," will have the comedy part of the bill to take care of, and Arthur Deagon, one of the best known singing comedians in vaudeville will be a star.

"The Verigraph," the newest thing in entertainers, and Paul LaCroix, the eccentric juggler, are going to help make the bill a strong card.

"The Verigraph," the newest thing in pictures, will be a special feature of the bill.

The supposed impossible task of presenting to an entire audience pictures that show the third dimension or perspective has been accomplished. It is called the Verigraph, which means "true picture," and portrays not only the height and breadth, but also the depth, exactly as we view a scene in nature with normal two-eyed vision.

MOTION PICTURES AT THE ATLANTA

The unearthing of a colossal vice system controlling some 26,000 victims and reaping an annual net profit of a million and a half dollars in New York City, was one of the sensational news happenings of the past year. The manner in which this vice trust worked and entrapped its victims, is made the basis of a powerful moving picture dramatization which will be presented here at the Atlanta theater, for one week beginning Monday, April 13.

It is called "Smashing the Vice Trust," and is a spectacular production in six parts in seven hundred scenes. This is the only time that a photo drama has portrayed the manner in which the agents of the vice trust actually work, through fake matrimonial bureaus, dishonest employment agents, fake fortune teller establishments, factory agents, low dance halls, street flirtations, and a half a dozen other similar traps for the unwary. Until District Attorney Whitman's expose, the inner workings of this vice trust were extremely mysterious, and one value of this film is that it makes public the heretofore secret operations so that they will never be able to take root again.

"DRIVEN FROM HOME" AT THE BIJOU

No stock company that has ever appeared in Atlanta has given its patrons such splendid productions as are being presented by the Eddie Black company this week at the Bijou. "Northern Lights," which has just finished a week's engagement, undoubtedly scored an immense hit and showed patrons of the Bijou what could be accomplished in the way of putting on splendid stage productions at popular prices. The company showed up to good advantage, and the stage production was undeniably one of the most remarkable and sensational that has ever been seen in Atlanta even at higher prices.

For this week the company announces one of the most popular melodramas that has been given the stage in the last decade. It is "Driven From Home" and will furnish Eddie Black and his players with a vehicle that will give every member of the company exceptional opportunities to do their best work. Eddie Black will be seen in the role of Ebhriam Jones, a blackface comedy part that is sure to delight Black's many friends and admirers visiting the popular Bijou. Edwin Vail will be seen here as Twiggs, Marion, a lumber jack; Frank Turner as John Johnson, a victim of treachery; Walter Van Dyke as Willie Swanson, a poor lumber jack. Numerous roles will also be given to the Misses Brandt, DeLane, Roesel and Miss Claire. "The Lumber Jack Quartette" is one of the acts will also be a feature that will be much appreciated by Bijou patrons. The story of the play is laid in the lumber camps of Minnesota, at the home in Duluth, act second the interior of Johnson's home in December, the last "lumbering on the Mesabah range," scene second. "Among the tall pines of the north," and scene third the lumber camp of the S. S. Quinn company. The fourth act goes back to the Johnson home in Duluth at Christmas.

Matinees will be given daily at 2:30 o'clock and night performances at 8:30 Monday night ladies will be admitted free when accompanied by an escort holding a paid 30-cent ticket, purchased before 6 o'clock.

LUCILLE LAVERNE TO OPEN AT LYRIC

If there are any medals for hard unceasing work Lucille LaVerne is a candidate. She brought fifteen people in her company which will appear at the Lyric theater beginning Easter Monday. Of these six have proven their worth under her management before, leaving nine new people to be engaged. In her endeavor to get the best, Miss LaVerne interviewed exactly 209 actors and actresses in ten days. Each one brought a letter of introduction from the dramatic agent and Miss LaVerde's maid, who is burdened with an overwhelming curiosity, counted the letters.

"Miss Lucille, you certainly are increasing your acquaintances considerable," was the comment as she announced 209.

Miss LaVerne and her company reached Atlanta Friday night. There are fifteen acting people, and a full working crew of scenic artists and carpenters. The combination commenced rehearsals at once on Saturday morning and it is believed that the production of "The Lily" will be one of the strongest stock offerings ever seen in Atlanta. David Belasco himself assisted in directing the company while in New York and has declared that the organization ought to be one of the big successes of the theatrical history of Atlanta.

The LaVerne company will commence its engagement at the Lyric on Easter Monday. There will be three matinees each week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons and at the bargain scale—a quarter, for the best seat. At night the scale of prices will be $1 for lower box seats, 75 cents for upper box and loge seats. The lower floor will be divided into 75 and 50 cent seats and the balcony seats will be 50, 35 and 25 cents.

The box office at the Lyric will open on Monday morning for the accommodation of those who desire to make reservations in advance.

OTIS SKINNER COMING IN "KISMET"

Harrison Grey employed an unusual method in assigning to various scenic artists the seven elaborate settings that make up the production of "Kismet." After he had planned out the production in its entirety he invited seven of the foremost scenic artists in New York to a luncheon. The play was discussed. One of the seven was then chosen chairman, and after hearing the ideas of the various artists he allotted to each the setting that seemed best suited to his particular talents. Thus the production was made in perfect harmony, and in the friendly rivalry the seven scene painters put forth their very best artistic efforts. It comes to the Atlanta April 20, 21 and 22.

'DAMAGED GOODS" AT THE ATLANTA

"Damaged Goods," Eugene Brieux's startling sociological play chich Richard Bennett's New York company of co-workers, will present here at the Atlanta April 23 and 24 for three performances has the distinction of being the only theatrical entertainment ever presented in the national capital on the Sabbath day. This event took place last April when, under the auspices of the Society for Social Hygiene, Richard Bennett brought his company to Washington from New York in order that members of congress and other officials in national life, might see the play and pass upon its fitness for presentation before the general public. More than 4,000 applications for seats were received for this single performance whereas the capacity of the theater was limited to 700. In the audience were the most distinguished senators and representatives in congress and their wives; many diplomats of renown; more than thirty of the leading clergymen of the city and all of the prominent officials of the city government. President Wilson's cabinet was represented by Postmaster General Burleson and Secretary of Labor Wilson and his daughter. The play created such a profound impression that the Washington board of trade passed a form of resolution instructing its secretary to see what arrangements could be made for a second presentation of the remarkable play in the city.

TO LAY 50,000 YARDS OF BITULITHIC PAVING

Expert From Boston to Superintend Work Here in Spring and Summer

The public works committee of the board of Fulton county commissioners is preparing to lay 50,000 yards of bitulithic pavement in the city during the spring and summer, according to an announcement made at Saturday's meeting.

A superintend this work the board is bringing E. A. West, a paving expert of Boston, to the city. Mr. West, who is to be employed for a period of six months at a salary of $250 per month, will arrive in the city on April 15, according to a telegram received from him Saturday.

The streets on which the pavement is to be laid by the county are designated by the city authorities.

WRONG ADDRESS GIVEN FOR WOMAN ARRESTED

The Journal's attention has been called to the fact that in a recent account of the arrest of a young woman her address was given as 11 Garnett street. This was a mistake. No card has been made by the police against any one living at that address.

Y. M. C. A. OFFICIAL TO ADDRESS TECH STUDENTS

E. T. Colton, of International Committee, to Give Interesting Talks

E. T. Colton, students' secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, is in the city for a few days. While here he will deliver several addresses. He will speak to the students at the Tech High school Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock and at 1:30 o'clock he will address the boys at the Boys' High school.

He is a man of unusual gifts. He has a special knack with boys and young men, and his addresses are interesting not only because of their intellectual appeal, but because of the personality expressed through them.

TOLEDO TROLLEY COMPANY OFFERS REDUCED RATES

(By Associated Press.)

TOLEDO, Ohio, April 5.—The Toledo Railway and Light company, today before an aldermanic committee, submitted a written offer to sell street car tickets, good at all hours, five for 15 cents. Cash fares would be 5 cents. It is believed the concession will end the twelve years' franchise war in Toledo.

The coated tongue, the yellow tinge in the whites of the eyes, the muddy complexion, the dizzy, headachy feeling, that apathy which saps your energy, ALL indicate the necessity for a persistent course of treatment with

The Foundation of Good Health Is Good Blood!

Are you pale? Are you weak? Are you no longer ambitious or energetic? Then you are anaemic—your blood is thin, lacking in healthy, strength-giving red corpuscles. Then your blood is impure—and your liver is not up to its task of clearing the blood from the poisons accumulated.

Have you pimples or boils? Do you suffer from headaches, low spirits?

There is one remedy that will restore to you rich, health-giving blood—a remedy proved by experience—

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
(In Tablet or Liquid Form)

Is Just Such a Remedy as You Need

For forty years Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been used in every quarter of the globe. It has met successfully the test of actual trial. It is composed of roots from our great American forests, known to science as those which will best give the stomach, liver and bowels needed help. Don't wait until you are laid low by some serious costly sickness!

Now Enjoys the Best of Health.

MRS. QUICK

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Mrs. Quick, of Detroit, Michigan. "Could not walk at times nor wear shoe. Thought I would die. No help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmastime and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them and was advised to try it at once. For four that I might neglect it my friends sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and used the 'All-Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow but sure. I am well and enjoy health the best I ever did in my life."

Take this "Discovery" now and learn what it will mean to you to have a stomach so well equal to its work that your food will nourish you and make good rich blood—to have a liver which will keep your blood clean and pure—to have bowels so well regulated that they will free your system of poisonous waste matters.

You will be thankful you have at your command so effective and reliable an aid to health, strength, good looks and good feelings.

You can obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in tablet or liquid form from dealers in medicines—or send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box of the tablets to Dr. PIERCE, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, New York.

Read chapter VI on the Blood in the Common Sense Medical Adviser—sent on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps—French cloth-bound book of 1008 pages. Address Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, New York.

Human Factors in Good Service

THERE are three parties to each telephone connection—the party who calls, the trained operator, and the party who answers.

The telephone user shares with the operator the responsibility for good service.

Accuracy in calling, promptness in answering, clear and deliberate talking and patience on the part of the user and the operator, are essentials of good service.

In making 26,000,000 calls daily, millions of telephone users become integral parts in the Bell system and contribute to the success of the service.

Retiring of Short Contracts Was The Cause of Creeping Advance

Light Inquiry Was Sufficient, in View of Prevailing Scarcity of Stocks, to Bring About Upturns in Most of the Active Shares

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—A creeping advance in stocks today resulted in the recovery of some of the ground lost yesterday. Retiring of short contracts, customary at the week-end, provided the principal demand. Although trading was dull, the light inquiry was sufficient, in view of the prevailing scarcity of stocks, to bring about upturns among the greater number of active shares.

It was the judgment of professional traders that speculative selling had been carried as far as could be done with safety at present, despite the pessimistic trend of sentiment.

Hill shares were strong, but gains in most instances were held to small fractions. American stocks were as dull in London as here, and there was little trading in this market for foreign account.

That forecasts of bank statements are of small value at the quarterly periods was shown once more today. Instead of the expected cash gain of $4,000,000 or more, there was a loss of more than $6,000,00. Financing incidental to distribution of April 1 interest and dividend payments was reflected in a loan increase of $23,782,000, while deposits rose nearly $30,000,000.

The net result of these changes was the most unfavorable bank statement of several weeks, with a drop of almost $12,000,000 in surplus. This condition will be rectified with the return to normal channels of funds disbursed at the first of the month.

Bonds were steady. Rock Island collaterals were strong, selling 1 1-2 above the low prices of yesterday. Total sales of bonds, $1,200,000. United States bonds declined 1-8 to 1-2 on call on the week.

R. G. DUN & CO. REVIEW

R. G. Dun & Co. review says: "Current movement of merchandise continues somewhat below normal, particularly in the east; in the west and south there is more activity and business sentiment is quite confident because of the generally promising agricultural outlook. At a number of interior centers bank clearings exceed those of the two years immediately preceding and at Chicago clearings for March are the largest ever reported for a single month.

"Mercantile collections are somewhat backward, which is not unusual at this season and in spite of the attractive rates for money borrowing is light and offerings of commercial paper continue restricted. Retrenchment still characterizes the iron and steel trade. Some betterment however, is still manifest in copper. A steadier tone has developed in practically all the dry goods markets.

"Failures this week, 343 against 271 last year; Canada, 45 against 32."

LONDON STOCKS

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 4.—The tone of the stock market today was uncertain. Mexican issues sagged under realizing prices to the settlement while Paris offerings depressed Kaffirs and copper shares.

American securities opened steady and a fraction higher. Later most of the list declined under realizing and the close was uncertain with values ranging from ¼ above to ⅜ below parity.

STOCK MARKET OPINIONS

New York Commercial: The stock market does not respond to new developments.

Wall Street Journal: Even the bulls will admit that a sharp decline might induce purchases.

The Financial Bureau says: A sagging market may be seen for a few days. On weakness, after recessions good stocks should be bought.

DEPRESSING INFLUENCES PREDOMINATE MARKET

Poor Conditions of Railroads Indicated Forcibly by Net Losses for February

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Depressing influences continued to predominate in the stock market this week, although speculative sentiment found some solace for the bad features. The poor positions of the railroads was indocated forcibly by the severe net losses from February operations, supplementing the preceding seven months' losses. Heavy curtailment of train service and of working forces emphasized the conditions.

On the other hand, these conditions served to fortify the plea of the railroads for freight rate increases, and the steps taken by the interstate commerce commission to expedite the rate case showed recognition of the seriousness of the situation. The languid attitude of congress toward anti-trust legislation was construed similarly as indicating a considerate spirit toward business susceptibility. Court proceedings in numerous trust prosecutions went into the week's record to modify this sentiment.

Steel trade depression was aggravated by the drastic railroad economies. The coming week's expected events include reports of a large decrease in the United States steel corporation's unfilled order tonnage, a sharp reduction in surplus stocks of refined copper and a government estimate of winter wheat condition promising an unprecedented crop. Predictions of a later trade revival came from some large distributing centers, based on crop prospects and the operation of the Federal reserve law.

April settlements brought ease to foreign money markets. London benefitted from subsidence of the Ulster crisis, and Paris from improvement in the Brazilian situation. The sale of New York city's new issue of $6,500,000 bonds is expected to guide opinion on investment conditions.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NAVAL STORES MARKET

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 4.—Three days of the new season of 19-4115 and three days of the old season in the naval stores markets of Savannah produced a total of only 154 barrels of turpentine. There has been "nothing doing" locally for nearly one week but while the market will remain inactive until prices adjust themselves to the new conditions existing with the beginning of the new year the trade generally is getting affairs into shape for an aggressive campaign of business.

There was but one day of the entire week when any officially reported sales were effected—Saturday, March 28, when 154 barrels changed hands at basis 46¾c. There was nothing doing on the opening of Monday and the same conditions obtained through the final call of yesterday. During Friday morning one factor reported unofficially small sales at "private terms," but this transaction was not posted. The basis was purely a matter of conjecture. It seems, however, that the general trade expects a decline of perhaps two to three cents as a new trading basis.

The annual meeting of the board of trade which was held on April 1 at 12:30 o'clock, with President J. Ward Motte presiding, was an occasion of considerable moment in local naval stores circles. The annual message of Mr. Motte, stressed the fact that the prices obtaining during last season were not satisfactory, but he explained this by stating the conditions arising from the suspension of the American Naval Stores company.

The trade has now readjusted itself, Mr. Motte said, and the outlook is bright for the new season.

There was a fair demand for rosins during the week just closed but the prices are off, especially on pales which are some 20 cents on the average below last week's final quotations.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF DRY GOODS MARKET

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Cotton goods markets showed more evidence in steadiness during the week without any material increase in the volume of trading over a week ago. Print cloths and convertibles brought full prices for spot and nearby delivery, but there was some weakening in odd constructions of sheetings. There was a larger movement in staple prints without any special concessions being made in either datings or discounts. Staple tickings were sold quite freely for delivery in the next sixty to ninety days by the largest southern producers. Wash goods and in particular the fancy printed lines have been selling steadier. Heavy duck continues in an unsettle state, and the margin of profit on fine fancy cottons does not broaden much.

Export demand for miscellaneous goods, such as prints and cotton specialties in colored yarns, was reported as somewhat better than in the preceding week. Wide sheetings, pillow tubings, sheets and pillow cases, bleached muslins and some few other domestic lines are as steady as they have been at any time this year, due as much to scarcity for quick shipment as to the influence of other trade factors. Underwear and hosiery are quiet and yarns were easier.

Prices on cotton goods are as follows: Print cloths, 28 inch, 64x64s 3 5-8c nominal; 64x60s 3 7-16; 38 1-2 inch 64x64s 5 1-4c; standard southern sheetings 7 3-4c@8c; denims 9 oz. 14c; tickings 8 oz. 13 1-2c; staple prints 3 1-4c; staple ginghams 6 1-4c; dress ginghams 9 3-4c.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Burlap markets have been feverish for the week. Linens hold barely steady on fine lines today. Underwear and hosiery were quiet. Yarns were easy. Cotton goods markets were steady. Men's wear and dress goods were firm.

WEEKLY STOCK REVIEW

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Expectations of an early decision in the freight rates case gave the stock market a temporary impulse upward this week. Action of the interstate commerce commission to expedite the hearings, when coupled with the general belief entertained in the financial district that an advance will be granted, was sufficient to cause enlarged speculation for the rise. The movement was only temporory, however, being succeeded in the latter part of the week by dull speculation with a slow downard tendency.

Aside from brighter hopes of an early advance in freight rates, there as little in the week's news to dispel the bearish sentiment of the street. February reports of some of the larger eastern railroads showed exceptionally large decreases in earnings. Steel trade reports were discouraging, although the copper metal market was firmer with a better demand.

Money was easy throughout the week, with no signs of a flurry to mark the preparations for April 1 interest and dividend payments. Ne York City offered $65,000,000 of 4¼ per cent fifty-year bonds, taking advantage of the present ease of money and demand for high grade investment bonds to lower its rates ¼ per cent below the previous offering.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

Much Delay to Planting Was Reported in Texas and Low Temperatures in Georgia

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Unfavorable weather developments in the earliest sections of the cotton belt and extremely bullish reports from the Manchester and Liverpool markets caused the cotton market to have an upward tendency this week. The highest levels were reached on the closing session and final prices were at a net gain of 25 to 28 points.

The low prices were made on Thursday but at their lowest the trading months were 1 point down to 3 points up, compared with the closing prices of last week. At their highest prices were 25 to 30 points over last week's close. The range was 22 to 29 points.

Too much rain was complained of in south Texas while in south Georgia temperatures were too low. Much delay to planting was reported in Texas and fear was felt that the August movement of new cotton this year would be unusually small, thereby increasing the bullishness of the old crop situation.

Cabled reports from Manchester told of a greatly increased business in cloths, which were followed by reports of a much larger spot demand in Liverpool. This led to an increased inquiry for spots in the south.

The local spot market closed at an advance of 1-16 over last week, middling being quoted at 13 1-16 against 13c last week and 12 9-16 this week last year. Sales on the spot amounted to 9,424 bales against 6.052 last week and 2,645 this week last year; sales to arrive amounted to 3,474 bales against 3,051 and 3,364.

FIDELITY FRUIT AND PRODUCE CO. MARKET LETTER.

ATLANTA, April 4.—Business in the produce line has been rather quiet this week, caused mainly from the fact of very light receipts in both fruits and vegetables.

The trade seems especially auxious for vegetables and not more than one-fourth as many coming as there is a demand, so that they are selling at record-breaking prices. Beans, squash, eggplants, cucumbers and peppers are selling higher now than was ever known before at this time of year. Florida dealers all promise that their vegetables of all kinds will begin to move freely in ten to fifteen days, when we may hope for a little lower price and be able to supply the demand to some extent.

Atlanta dealers have begun to be concerned over the fact of getting goods in the line to supply the demand during the Shriners' convention the first of May. As a rule, our market during the month of May is full of all kinds of produce, but the freeze of a few weeks back has seemed to set the crops back two to four weeks, and it is believed goods will be hard to get in sufficient quantities to suppply the demand while the convention is on. Cantaloupes never start to move before the last of May or first of June, so if they expect to eat cantaloupes while here someone will be disappointed.

Apples—Receipts some lighter, and the same may be said for the demand. Prices rule firm, however.

Oranges—Holding up well. No change of note from last week.

Grapefruit—Plentiful; meeting with a light demand caused by the fact that people seem to want strawberries now.

Strawberries broke the record this week, showing an advance of $3 per crate from Wednesday to Saturday. The weather being cool, shippers were able to ship them to the northern markets, where they were selling at 35c to 40c a quart.

Celery—Receipts fairly liberal; market firm.

Lettuce more plentiful; market lower and overstocked on small, sorry stock.

Pineapples very scarce and high.

Cabbage receipts became light this week and the market advanced.

Irish potatoes, onions and lemons in liberal supply. No change of note.

Tomatoes—Receipts by express heavy and market lower.

No change of note on sweet potatoes.—J. T. Elder.

AUSTIN & RAIT COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Cotton—Notwithstanding contraction and even pessimism in general tade the textile industy shows no gneral abatement, except, of course, there are spots where the volume and price is not entirely satisfactory. In fact the planting, growing, harvesting and marketing of the 1916-14 crop has run exactly contrary to general expectations; starting poorly and late it was expected to be very short but a favorable midsummer changed the prospect so that at one time it was guessed to be the largest ever raised, this was then cut short by storms and early offsets, yet it amounted to the second largest on record—in quantity—and, with disturbed conditions in the financial, industrial and political world it was thought it would sell very low, but notwithstanding general contraction in trade the domestic consumption and exports continue to run ahead of even last year's stupendous figures and the tremendous hedge sales in the future markets are still being uncovered at a great loss because of inability to deliver the cotton called for. Very conservative people now figure the spinnable cotton in this crop at not over 13,500,000 bales with a probable demand for 15,000,000 bales, depending largely on the carryover from last year and the increased crop grown in other countries.

The railroad situation continues to exert a pessimistic sentimental influence, accentuated this week by the laying off of some 75,000 men by three eastern roads alone, yet the practical effect seems to be confined to the Steel trade and the like depending largely on railroad buying. The English spinners have been sending rather unfavorable advice on trade conditions, yet their spot sales, takings and price bespeaks just the opposite. In fact they even voted down the usual holiday for the coming Easter holidays and our Fall River sales show up very favorably compared with last year. When it is remembered the present prices are somewhat higher than last year it is difficult to understand just how the trade and demand for cotton goods continues in face of the spoken pessimism. Yet this can be explained by those not unalterably opposed to present or higher values: for instance, in addition to the admitted large trade passing in cotton goods (even if of only hand to mouth variety) the situation is exactly the same in woolen goods except that prices are even much higher compared with last year. The sales of raw wool reported from Boston and from England are very large at steadily advancing prices and the values of finished woolen goods have been rapidly advanced from the lower level designed to meet foreign competition with the change in our tariff last year.

Even the argument that cotton goods are resorted to by those practicing economy is thus denied, although we, personally, still stand on our claim that consumption of cotton goods can hardly be prevented from steadily increasing from year to year in proportion to the increase in population, yet we are not increasing our production at all proportionate to the demand. This, and the fact that stocks of finished goods have been allowed to run down to the lowest possible point during the past two years, discussion of tarriff reform explains in a measure this demand for cotton and cotton goods now when other lines are so dull. Another point that is often lost sight of is that the old order of things in ordering months and years ahead has entirely changed so that steady buying is necessary, although we admit this makes for lessened manufacturerers' profits and might easily cause higher distributing levels, yet it is a fact.

The present technical condition of the market is very strong and shows but little weakness even after the large covering in March and May and good judges estimate the short interest in July to be even larger and if not assisted with favorable crop prospects soon the situation in this market this summer is likely to cause very high prices. It is yet somewhat early to become over-apprehensive over the late spring for which reason the new crop months have not shown extreme animation but the price is low enough to attract investment and further delay in crop preparation will be reflected in these options gaining strength. With the likelihood of regulative and not destructive legislation being enacted soon the possibilities in this market are very large and we would continue buying on every setback.

Cotton Seed Oil.—This market continues to be dominated by long refiners in control of nearby positions although they are selling quietly on extreme advances but such sales are in the more distant positions. The strength must be admitted when but little setback occurred on the wide open break in the lard market this week and we would follow these leaders in taking the buying side on fair reactions but would sell the more distant positions on bulges.

INCREASE OF COTTON MANUFACTURE.

Growth of cotton manufacturing in the United States is to be measured by a comparison of the number of active spindles and the cotton consumed by them. It is necessary to go no further back than 1890 to see the remarkable increase:

	Active Spindles.	Bales Consumed.
1913	31,519,766	5,786,330
1912	30,578,528	5,367,583
1910	28,266,862	4,798,953
1905	23,687,495	4,728,980
1900	19,472,332	3,873,165
1890	14,384,180	2,518,409

Since 1890, spindles have increased 118 per cent and consumption 129 per cent. The consumption in 1913 was the largest in our history. It was practically all American cotton, as only 232,929 bales of foreign cotton were used. This was mostly Egyptian, which is peculiarly suited for thread making, mercerizing and some other special purposes. Massachusetts and Rhode Island used the greater part of this Egyptian cotton as well as the 54,778 bales of domestic Sea Island. In the last year the cotton growing states have forged to the front, and are now consuming more cotton than the northern states, with 2,960,518 bales as their share last year. But Massachusetts is still the premier state in cotton manufacturing her 10,-904,000 active spindles having consumed 1,332,-912 bales; while North Carolina comes second.

Official data of the value of cotton goods manufactured in 1913 is disappointingly lacking. From the census for manufacturing in 1909, the value of domestic manufactures of cotton goods was $628,000,000, exclusive of hosiery and knit goods. From the statistics of hosiery and knit goods manufactured in that year, those made entirely of cotton were valued at $117,200,000, to say nothing of those in which cotton was mixed with other materials. This makes a total of $745,000,000 for cotton manufactures in 1909, when 5,240,170 bales of cotton were consumed, or 10 per cent less than were consumed last year. The value of the manufactured goods now cannot be far from the value of the total crop, without the seed.

There is much to be legitimately proud of in the United States, and not the least is the growth of cotton manufacturing.

Prices Made New High Ground for the Movement on Continued Urgent Demand for Old Crops From Foreign and Local Sources

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Cotton was active and excited today, with prices making new high ground for the movement on continued urgent demand for old crops from foreign and local sources, while reports of unsettled weather southwest seemed to encourage scattered buying of new crop positions. The close was firm and from 11 to 20 points net higher. May contracts sold at 12.73, or $6 a bale above the low level of March 9. During this advance, or for the past four weeks, there has been heavy persistent buying of May, which mus have resulted in substantial reduction of short lines, but today's demand seemed to be quite active, as at any time since the beginning of the advance.

Opened firm at an advance of 5 to 10 points and quickly sold some 10 to 19 points net higher. Slight reactions followed under realizing and selling for a reaction, but it seemed to require a setback of only 3 or 4 points to bring in increased demand, and houses with European connections were big buyers here just before the close when prices reached the day's best point. Higher Liverpool cables, reports of continued trade improvement in Manchester, and bullish southern spot advices probably inspired some fresh buying, and rumors were again circulating that some of the larger trade interests are now buying May for long account, but much of the demand was still supposed to be in the way of covering by straddle or hedging shorts.

Dallas wires said that further rain was delaying farm work and there were reports of a good spot demand from the castern belt.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Cotton opened steady at an advance of 4 to 6 points on much better cables than due and reports of heavy rains in several important counties in south Texas. In the early trading the rise was widened to 6 to 8 points, the bulk of the buying being apparently for long account.

Proit-taking was heavy throughout the short week-end session, but the demand was sufficient to keep the market steady at the advance. At the highest the trading months were 12 to 13 points up. The close was 11 to 12 up, except on August, which was 26 up. Only a few transactions were recorded in August, which at its highest was 29 up as the result of rains in south Texas.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 4.—Adjustment to new conditions and the revelation of bullish facts are too imperative for the consideration of a reaction. Liverpool came in again very strong, with futures about 4 points higher than due, spot prices 3 points up; sales 10,000 bales.

It s hard to say what has supplied the inspiration to continental mills to buy new crops so persistently, but they have done it for a month. Very likely the idea that 6 pence is an epoch minimum in the face of the fact of two seasons of only moderate production in America is widely held among consumers. Then, again t may be taken as a silent announcement that trade is improving. The money markets are indeed so easy that the absence of serious political conditions seems clearly indicated and the trade has the full benefit of confidence and financial assistance for expansion.

The map shows fair weather n Tennessee and north Alabama; cloudy in the rest of the belt. General precipitation in the western states, rather heavy in south Texas. Indications are for part cloudy to fair in the eastern states; cloudy, unsettled and rainy weather in the rest of the belt. Several points in south Texas complain of further delay to crop operations by weather.

Conservatives over Sunday restricted activity in the market today. Prices, however, advanced as much as 10 points in the early trading and there is a good undertone and an advancing tendency. With the adoption by New York of government standards for new crops in contracts, there is a tendency in new crops in New York to come to a normal market difference with us, which, in former years, used to be a premium covering the difference in cost of brngng cotton to New York.

Statistics promise bullish, smaller into sight, larger exports and loss in stocks.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The same thing occurred today that has for past few days, the larger spot interests buying old crop. Gwathmey big buyer around the opening, some of which was said to be for Liverpool, this caused the first rally and then came a wave of selling from the ring and commission houses, some which was said to be profit taking and caused the market to ease off a few points, but just before the close, buying orders came in from all sources, but brokers close to the spot interests were aggressive bidders and the market closed at the high point of the day. While there is a great deal of talk of a reaction the majority of undertone continues strong and the majority of traders fear the buying power of those who have been under the market for the past few days. It would seem that a reaction is in order after something over a hundred points advance, but bulls contend that futures are not yet on a parity with spots and until this is the case, we may look for further advance. Personally I would not advise following the advance much further just now.—Anderson.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

April Disbursements Easily Accomplished—New Financing This Month—Treasury Deposits All Recalled. Railroads Compelled to Lay Off Men—Stock Market Inactive—Good Demand for Bonds—Economic Conditions Sound — No Time for Hasty Legislation

W. S. Cousins

NEW YORK, April 4.—As predicted in last week's review, the heavy dividend and interest disbursements incident to the April first quarterly settlements were accomplished without difficulty both by the home and foreign banking institutions. In fact, with such ease was this financing accomplished in New York that millions of dollars offered on call at low rates for the week prior to April first found no one who desired to borrow. This may reflect three fundamental conditions, any or all of which have contributed to the increasing abundance of loanable funds in all our monetary centers. The first of these is the inactivity of general business and the consequent lack of demand for funds in this direction; the second is the inauguration of a policy of the banks to reduce their surplus funds to the lowest point, in view of the new monetary conditions to be ushered in with the organization of the federal reserve system, and the third is the almost complete stagnation of the speculative markets.

It should be noted, however, that there are a great many large security issues to be absorbed, and a considerable quantity of maturities to be taken care of this month, and it will not be unnatural for money rates to be somewhat toned upward before the month has passed. Though general business is much below normal, this is the season of the year when the demands from mercantile quarters will naturally enlarge, thus opening up the natural avenues for the use of bonds that are now lying idle. If, as is freely predicted, we are to have even a modest boom in business during the next few months, there will be a response from the money market in the shape of slightly higher rates for long-time funds, though there will be no lack of accommodation for all legitimate enterprises. The country is now in the best possible condition to reflect such a trade movement for the reason that mercantile supplies in the retail districts are not at all abundant, and consequently there is an enormous potential buying power in the entire country. Business has for many months been conducted on an extremely conservative basis and for that reason the revival in trade will be rapid and vigorous when it finally comes.

One of the larger commercial banks here calls attention to the fact that within the last two or three weeks the treasury department has been calling in the special deposits it made with the banks during the period of acute tension last summer in the crop-moving period. Most of these special deposits have been repaid through remittances upon the New York banks, with the result that the balances of a number of interior banks have been materially reduced. These repayments are perfectly proper at this time as the banks are prepared o meet the demands, while by calling the funds the treasury places itself in a position where it will be possible for it to assist the banks later on through other deposits of government moneys, should there be a demand for such assistance through the crop-moving season.

RELIEF FOR THE RAILROADS.

A striking commentary on the financial condition of the railroads is contained in the recent reports of net earnings, all of which show heavy reductions, and in the number of men who have been laid off since January first. From information that has just come to hand, we find that the New York Central has been compelled to dismiss 25,000 men since the opening of the new year; that the Erie road has now 18,000 less employes than it had last fall; the Lehigh Valley has had a 10,000 retrenchment; while the Pennsylvania has added 40,000 to its part-time employment list. Though it is not uncommon for the roads to materially reduce their working forces at this period, the reductions this year are about twice as great as they have been heretofore.

This action has led some of the biased critics of the railroads to publish the claim that the roads were pursuing this policy for its effect upon the Interstate Commerce Commission, which tribunal is now considering the application of the eastern railroads for an increase in freight rates. This is hardly a fair criticism, since if it could be proven, the effect upon the Commission, and in fact upon all good friends would meet with contempt instead of favorable consideration. This is not a time for exaggerations of any character, and the railroads are not so unwise as to attempt to justify their claims through any such methods. One thing is sure, and that is that without an increased revenue there will be small hope of these unemployed men becoming reinstated to their positions.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

Now that the April settlements have been adjusted and the interest and dividend disbursements have returned into regular circulation, the stock markets and the investment circles will not unnaturally feel the stimulus of the new funds that will be seeking profitable investment. It is more than probable that these funds will pursue the natural trend, and that stocks and bonds will during the next few weeks find ready acceptance among investors everywhere. Money has an abhorrence of idleness, and hence is not content to be where it is not bringing in some return.

The bond houses have been reporting that the only drawback they have experienced in the present season is the absence of sufficient new issues for them to turn over at a profit. Their shelves have too long been bare of the higher grade issues demanded by prudent investors, and the higher the grade the quicker the sale in these times of uneasiness. The problem in the bond markets will, therefore, be to replenish the supply of gilt-edge securities of recognized value, and a good business is assured if sufficient of this commodity can be obtained.

Investors are still hesitant when it comes to the buying of stocks. Railroad and express stocks have in the last year or so suffered such a loss of prestige, as measured by the reduction of dividends and falling quotations, that they do not appeal to those who are seeking "safety first" in their investments. Industrial stocks have likewise proved a disappointment. The result has been that investors have been selling their shares and shunning the stock market, in order to invest in securities which, though they carry proportionately smaller returns, ae nevertheless a safe proposition.

General economic conditions are sound, and the only disquieting elements are those which proceed from the national capital. Business is yet subject to the great handicaps of political manipulation, and thus it is natural fo the time being to expect an irregular movement for some time to come. In the next few weeks the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the organization and operation of he new federal reserve system, the measures that will be adopted by congress, the outcome of the Mexican situation and the Panama Canal toll dispute, the progress of the growing crops, will exert a potent influence on business and financial conditions. This is indeed a period of "Watchful Waiting.."

ATLANTA MAN HONORED AT UNITARIAN CONFERENCE

Captain Alfred R. Pirtle Elected Second Vice President at Dallas Meeting

(By Associated Press.)

DALLAS, Texas, April 4.—The southern conference of Unitarian churches, which began sessions in this city on Thursday, today elected officers for the ensuing year as follows:

President, Charles H. Patterson, of New Orleans; first vice president, Sharon Bonner, Dallas; second vice president, Captain Alfred R. Pirtle, Atlanta, Ga., and secretary-treasurer, Rev. John Wesley Rowlett, D.D., Memphis.

The conference unanimously adopted resolutions indorsing President Wilson's maintenance of principles of peace, "higher ideals and national honor." The conference will adjourn tomorrow night to meet next year in Louisville.

CLOSED FLORIDA BANK WILL PAY DIVIDENDS

(By Associated Press.)

PENSACOLA, Fla., April 4.—Announcement is made tonight by the receiver for the First National Bank, which closed its doors several months ago, that the depositors will receive a dividend of 40 per cent on May 1. This is the first dividend to be paid, and others will be paid at intervals, it is stated.

COLONEL SMITH TAKES UP HIS NEW DUTIES

(By Associated Press.)

WEST POINT, N. Y., April 4.—Colonel Morton F. Smith, recently appointed commandant of cadets at the United States military academy, arrived here yesterday and took up his new duties today. Colonel Smith has been on duty on the southern border.

Weather Conditions

Forecast till 7 p. m. Sunday.

Atlanta and vicinity; fair tonight; Sunday fair, followed by rain.

Georgia: Fair in north, unsettled in south portion tonight and Sunday, probably rain.

Alabama: Unsettled tonight and Sunday, probably local rains in south portion.

A small area of low atmospheric pressure is central over extreme southern Texas, which is accompanied by generally cloudy weather over cotton belt with considerable rain in Texas. The pressure is high in the Ohio valley and Lake regions; but even in that section there is considerable cloudiness. A new disturbance is entering the country on the north Pacific coast.

Temperatures remain rather low for the season over most of the United States. It is still below freezing over the Lake region, reaching 18 degrees at Duluth. Killing frost occurred at Asheville, light frost at Raleigh and St. Louis.

Increasing cloudiness tonight will prevent frost in Georgia. The temperature will decline slightly tonight, with northeast winds.

Fair weather is indicated for tonight, but Sunday will be cloudy, with possibly rain towards night.

STANDARD COTTON GRADES LAW BILL SOON TO PASS

Nine Official Divisions Forming National Standard Will Be Universally Used

Should the Kenyon-Smith cotton futures bill become law, in modified form, as is expected, official standards of grade will become general throughout the American cotton belt. The same will be true of all cotton markets, whether on the New York exchange or among the mills of New England. The nine official grades forming the national standard, as promulgated by the department of agriculture in 1909, will then regulate the entire trade in cotton transactions.

The nine official grades which the proposed senate bill refers to, include middling fair, strict good middling, good middling, strict middling, middling, strict low middling, low middling, strict good ordinary and good ordinary. The grades designated by the prefix "strict" are known in the trades as half grades. Complaints have hitherto been made by growers that in disposing of the staple to the first buyer the benefits of proper classification are lost to the farmer. It is claimed that he usually gets the "middling" basis price less charges to port, deductions for tare and the like. For his best cotton he may get "strict middling" but rarely anything higher. Charles J. Brand, the government specialists on co-operative marketing, says: "Experience soon gives the buyer a knowledge of grade and staple, which the grower can never acquire in equal detail. The latter is practically compelled to sell his product on a quality basis specified by the person who is purchasing it."

These official cotton grades, although in existence only about five years, have been adopted as the basis of their operation by fully a dozen cotton exchanges. The New England Cotton Buyers' association and the Arkwright club, of Boston, the latter representing the cotton manufacturers of New England, have agreed to make use of these grades in all their purchases. The Southern Cotton Buyers' association ever since 1911 has been using the official grades as the basis of quotations to these two New England organizations.

The demand for he official grades, which are put up in technically selected samples in glass tubes and hermetically sealed, has been far beyond what the department was at first able to supply. The price has been reduced to $30 a full set and the work of placing fifty of these grades in vacuum storage for use as standards has enabled he department to preserve indefinitely the exact standard adopted.

The plan of the Smith-Kenyon bill is to place one of these sets of samples at each of the interior markets throughout the country including probably 100 or more localities.

WEEK IN COTTON MARKET

By. Walter Parker

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Crop delaying weather, good trade reports from Fall River and Manchester, and heavy absorption of cotton by mills lifted the American contract markets by 25 or 30 points on the week's trading. But the injection of a new and uncertain element in the legislative situation at Washington restricted contract market operations to an appreciable extent. The early producing section of Texas is now complaining bitterly of the loss of its early start by reason of unfavorable weather, and of the presence of the boll weevil in uncommon numbers by reason of wet weather. Further north in Texas the claim is made that crop preparations are three weeks later than normal, and that scarcity of good seed will seriously complicate the situation in the event replanting becomes necessary.

Statistics just published by the Government show that at the close of the cotton season of 1913, 296,500 square miles of cotton lands were infested by boll weevil, and that 327,000 square miles are as yet uninfested. During the past ten years the average annual spread of the weevil has been 21,640 square miles. In 1913, because climatic conditions over 5,000 square miles of the Black Prairie Belt of Texas were unfavorable for the weevil, the cotton belt gain in weevil infested lands amounted to only 17,700 square miles. In Alabama 18,400 square miles were infested at the end of 1912, while at the end of 1913, 24,900 square miles were infested, and at the end of the season the weevil belt extended to within six miles of the Georgia line.

Legislation, however, now holds the attention of the cotton trade. The senat hsa passed what is known as the Smith-Smith Bill (S. 110). Cotton men generally says this bill is a wholesome measure and will greatly increase the efficiecny and economic usefulness of the future market to the spot cotton trade; that it will remove all cause of trade complaint from the New York market by promptly establishing there the use of the government standard types, commercial or spot market grade difference, and the identification of each bale delivered on contract. Recently, New York adopted the government standards effective April 1, 1915, and monthly revisions effective next December. This bill also prohibits pro forma deliveries, that is, deliveries effective before certification has bbeen completed. Thus far the only objection raised to the Smith-Smith Bill is the prohibition it places on the use of the mails and telegraph lines. In this connection, it is said by cotton men that the fine of $5,000 for interstate trading on a future contract that does not meet the requirements of the bill is sufficient, and that the use of the mails and telegraph need not figure at all. In the event the Smith-Smith bill be passed by the House, the state legislatures throughout the cotton belt would not err if each and every one of them should enact it also.

In the House, a bill has been introduced penalizing the use of future contracts not approved by the government by a fine of 50 cents a bale. Such a fine would prove prohibitive, and would force the use of the government approved contract. This bill, which is known as the Lever Bill, is condemned by the cotton trade because it taxes legitimate trading under a government approved contract 25 cents per contract. Cotton men say there is no more reason why they should pay the Federal government a tax on their legal commercial transactions than there is why a grocer or shoe merchant should pay a tax on the merchandise they buy and sell in the usual course of their business. For this reason, the tax on legitimate contract trading, proposed by Mr. Lever, will be opposed by the cotton men, but they approve the proposed prohibitive tax on transactions made under contracts not approved by the government.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times-Democrat says:

So far as the old crop is concerned the persistent spot demand, the liberal exports and the big spinners' takings raise the question whether there is any method of getting a quart from a pint cup. Certainly the exports must be checked, or the American mills will have to go on short time, but how are exports to be checked, if May and July contracts continue at a discount? These and kindred problems will doubtless be solved in violent fashion, as of yore. With the promise of better weather throughout the belt the bears would probably pound the distant months, if their experience in old crops had not been so sad. And there might be additional incentive in the advices from the Atlantic states, telling of an unprecedented use of fertilizers—Alabama alone having bought 515,000 tons, as against 456,000 last year. It is interesting that the New York cotton exchange will begin to use the government standard on September 1 next, instead of April 1, 1915, as previously announced. This was, indeed, a case in which time had to be taken by the forelock. The unusual supplies coming to light in India are worthy of note and would undoubtedly deal the market a blow if conditions were different. But a man with a fierce appetite may bolt two meals, either of which would be impossible in a dyspeptic hour.

Map shows fair in Tennessee, north Alabama and cloudy rest of the belt; general rains in Texas and Oklahoma; some heavy in south Texas. Indications are for continued unsettled and rainy weather in the western and central states; part cloudy to fair in the eastern states.

Forecast:

Louisiana: Tonight and Sunday, unsettled; light to moderate northeast breezes on the coast.

Arkansas: Tonight and Sunday unsettled.

Oklahoma: Tonight unsettled, warmer; Sunday generally fair.

East Texas: Unsettled tonight and Sunday, probably showers in south portion, warmer tonight in extreme northwest portion; light to moderate northeast breezes on the coast.

West Texas. Tonight generally cloudy, warmer in north portion; Sunday fair.

Georgia and Alabama: Cloudy tonight and Sunday; probably rain.

Kentucky: Generally fair tonight and Sunday; probably light frost tonight.

Tennessee: Fair tonight with frost; Sunday fair.

Mississippi: Unsettled tonight and Sunday, probably local rains in south portion.

North Carolina: Fair, frost in interior.

South Carolina: Fair in interior; unsettled on coast; Sunday probably rain, frost in north.

Florida: Unsettled, probably rain.

This some crowd that have been bulling May and July past week, are still aggressive buyers this morning. While they may carry it some higher, I would be afraid to follow the advance now.—Anderson.

Liverpool cables: "Spinners calling, continent good buyer on new crops. Market broadening.

Market opened very steady on buying by same crowd as yesterday. Mitchell bought 5,000 May on call, said to be for Liverpool. Schill sold him 3,000, after call. Mitchell, Cone, Gwathmay and Waters were aggressive bidders causing uneasiness among shorts and covering followed.

There is a growing feeling, however, that a reaction is in order and without this concentrated buying by large interests a decline would come, as it is believed that the short interest has been eliminated to a great extent.—Anderson.

There was very large buying of May and July during first hour and again on the close by Gwathmey & Co., and Cone, much of it on Liverpool orders. Liverpool, in fact can be credited with the $2 rise during past three days, getting out of straddles short New York and long Liverpool. That they are decidedly nervous is shown by their purchases here today, while their market was closed, as seldom has such a volume of cotton been traded in for Liverpool on a Saturday. McFadden were also buyers and are just beginning to show up long of May in the ring room. There is nothing new as to the ultimate fate of May position, it all depends whether or not the local stock is tendered on the option. The selling today was scattered, Waters and Schill being the leaders and if they covered, it was through other brokers. Wenman was a large seller for springs. August was in good demand and is considered too low in comparison with July. Shorts covered in new crops because of strength in old and some unfavorable dope from Texas. Sentiment rather favors selling October and December on this bulge. Every day more people decide to leave May and July alone. General business showed a great improvement.—Clevenburg.

STOCK GOSSIP

Dow, Jones summary:

Commission sets April 27 for arguments in rate case. Winthrop Moore Daniels, of New Jersey, confirmed by senate for interstate commerce commissioner. Atchison ends retrenchment in western shops; mechanics' pay increased 25 per cent over that of January 1. Failures this week 326, against 299. Dun's review says in west and south there is more activity and business sentiment quite confident because of promising crop outlook. Twelve industrials 82.1i, off .36. Twenty active rails 104.43, off .55.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter Ocean says: Sentiment in wheat was largely inclined to the bear side on the scenic prospects and light cash demand. Export bids were so few and so far from the market that export houses were not disposed to talk about them. It was the gossip of the corn pit last night that most, if not all the local shorts had covered their short May corn on the bulge yesterday. Negotiations for a cargo of 200,000 bushles Argentine corn which have been on for several days are still pending. The actual asking price, c.i.f. Montreal yesterday was 66 cents, while the 65 cents mentioned recently was a possible figure. The best bid was 64 cents and it is posible that the trade may be closed today or early next week.

There will be no session of Chicago board of trade April 7; local election day, or April 10, Good Friday.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say:

Wheat—Shorts covered freely yesterday, which leaves the market without support from that quarter.

Corn—The market is still heavily long and some day liquidation will come from that source.

Oats—There appears to be no inducement for new speculative buyers to enter the market.

Provisions—Shorts have been best buyers past two days.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE IRON AND STEEL MARKET

NEW YORK, April 4.—New orders on steel mills are estimated at less than 40 per cent of producing capacity, but orders against term contracts covering requirements of given consumers are being received at so high a rate that shipments from mills are maintained at about 75 per cent of producing capacity. Prices are not showing the weakness that the apathy of buyers would indicate.

Everywhere there is a recognition of the impounding of a large volume of business awaiting only the flood of orders when the gates are opened by the hoped for freight rate increase.

Lately, however, the impression is gaining strength that undue emphasis probably is placed on this one influence and that the volume of business loosened will not seriously embarrass producers.

The price on which contracts had been signed for steel bars, structural material and plates, equivalent to 1.25 cents per pound at Pittsburg for delivery in the second quarter is not being maintained, but material is being shipped at 1.20 cent without any reservation, however, as to when the contract price of 1.25 cent may or may not be held to. In the more competitive markets these important lines of finished steel are resisting pressure to sell below 1.20 cent, Pittsburg basis, but business attractive to the mills is being done at 1.15 cent per pound with sporadic special cases at 1.10 cent. Wire and tin plate mills are about the only lines running full.

VALUE OF COTTON EXPORTS SHOW VERY LARGE GAIN

Average Price at Seaboard Was $65 a Bale Compared With $60 in 1912-13

Wall Street Journal says: Cotton has furnished strong support to the credits of the country in foreign trade this season. In eight months ending with February total exports were $498,810,358. The average value of cotton thus shipped abroad in these eight months for the past five years has been about 470,000,000. During the current season the monthly exports reached a maximum of $107,375,197, in October. In November the value of 1,501,124 bales exported was $103,324,638. Thus far 7,381,237 bales had been shipped out in the eight months at an average of approximately $65 a bale.

Within the next four months the south will begin to put on the market another new crop. Indications are that the spinning world will be ready to take it even at the current year's prices. How fast the foreign markets absorb the fibre and at what expense to them is indicated in the following monthly exhibit of American cotton exports:

	1913-14 Value	1912-13 Value
July	$8,384,583	$7,027,594
August	16,518,569	12,754,285
September	65,744,007	45,406,177
October	107,375,197	88,689,663
November	103,324,638	109,604,800
December	81,953,499	91,571,389
January	68,476,559	58,307,976
February	47,083,481	33,835,782
March	....	23,610,003
April	....	33,670,000
May	....	28,595,194
June	....	13,768,117
Total	498,810,358	546,840,930

Owing to the speed with which cotton reaches destination in foreign markets after being turned over to railroads at the points of origin, the crop liquidates itself with remarkable rapidity. During the four months of September to January, inclusive, the stream of credits flowing back into the United States from exports of cotton averaged $3,000,000 a day, including Sundays.

The sustained value of cotton has been of vast help to the United States. For the past six months the average price per bale of exports was $65, compared with $60 in the like six months in the preceding season and $50 in the period ending with February 1912. The exchange position of the United States, therefore, has benefitted progressively during the past three seasons, by rise in the price of cotton. The monthly shipments dwindle rapidly from now on, but there were four full months this season in each of which over 1,000,000 bales a month were shipped abroad.

In the certainty of its service to international credits cotton stands by itself as a financial asset.

AUSTIN AND RAIL GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Wheat—The rains over the wheat belt increased crop estimates as was natural and good reactions were experienced but values are not high enough to adopt a genuinely bearish position even in the face of such fine crop prospects. It will take some assistance in the way of adverse weather news to bring about a good advance but we prefer to take the buying side on the reactions like those this week and believe rallies will show quick profits.

Corn and Oats—The corn market is a big one with good people on both sides of it. The country speculators as a whole are very bullish and one prominent house identified with that class of trade came in as big buyers on this break. The Argentine shipments and engagements exert a depressing effect and we can only advise a continuance of meeting the bulges with sales. Days of light receipts will allow for these rallies and when Argentine shipments are on in force July and September are apt to drag steadily lower. Oats act very good but the trade is not in this market actively as corn is more attractive.

Provisions—The huge stocks of lard and even other product finally exerted its influence this week when first one railroad after another laid off thousands of men as of course everyone is opposed to the high costs of living and the packers are not a popular set of men in the house wife's estimation. Yet the of the most prominent says conditions warrant no decline this year and the government reports of the food animal supply offers little encouragement to the economical buyer. The large stocks are against the rise but shipments of live hogs should run lighter from now on and several very good Chicago houses state their belief in the buying side of ribs on good setbacks.—M. F. AUSTIN.

Progress of the Plant So Near Faultless That the Trade Was Constantly Reminded of the Estimates of 600,000,000 Bushel Harvest

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, April 4.—Bearish influence of the largest acreage and the finest condition of the winter crop ever reported at this time of the year, held down today the price of wheat. The market, although firm at the close, was on the same level at last night to 1-8 and 1-4c lower. In the other leading staples, there was a net decline all around—corn 1-8 to 3-8c; oats a shade to 1-8 and 1-4c and provisions 5 to 5 and 7 1-2c.

Notwithstanding that Argentine supplies of wheat are remarkably small and that Europe may be forced to come to the United States for large amounts, the majority of speculators took notice mainly of the continued extremely favorable crop reports. Advices from over the entire winter belt were so unusual, the acreage so large, and the progress of the plant os near faultlessly that the trade was constantly reminded of the estimates of a possible harvest of 600,000,000 bushels.

Some little export business at New York for Portugal helped to rally wheat prices moderately after an early decline. Promise of lighter world shipments and of a falling off in the domestic visible supply tended also to give more or less comfort to the bulls.

Corn after having weakned with wheat and because of the slowness of shipping demand, made some recovery on account of an advance in ocean freight rates from Argentine. Nevertheless, Montreal was said to be offering Argentine corn to Chicago at 3-4c concession compared with yesterday.

Prospects that seeding will be general in Illinois next week had a bearish effect on oats.

Enlarged stocks of meats in warehouses turned the provision market down grade. Advancing prices for hogs were ignored.

$1,000,000 ESTATE TO BE GIVEN TO CHARITY

NEW YORK, April 4.—The distribution of $1,000,000 to worthy charities is the work assigned to George Ramsey and William McMaster Mills, named as executors of her estate by Mrs. Amelia Gertrude Cutter, who died yesterday. No particular charity is mentioned in the will, details of which were made public today, the distribution of the funds being left to the discretion of the executors.

Mrs. Cutter was the wife of Henry T. Cutter, who died January 21 leaving an estate of $1,500,000 at the disposal of his widow.

Mr. Cutter made a fortune in the drug business.

Mrs. R. L. Barton Dead

Mrs. R. L. Barton, aged 18 years, of 73 Woodward avenue, died at a private sanitarium on Friday evening. The body has been removed to Barclay & Brandon's chapel, where funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The interment will be at Holywood cemetery. Besides her husband Mrs. Barton is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Bertha Taylor and Mrs. Otha Moore; and by three brothers, Herman, Ernest and Eugene Sockwell.

DELEGATES AND VISITORS TO THE STATE T. P. A. CONVENTION AT COLUMBUS

The picture shows the members and guests at the twentieth annual convention of the Georgia division of the Travelers' Protective association, held at Columbus, April 2 and 3. The picture was taken after the adjournment of the opening session in front of the rooms of the Harmony circle where the convention meetings were held.

T. P. A. 'S OF GEORGIA HAD ROUSING TIME AND SUCCESSFUL SESSION AT COLUMBUS

J. M. Giddens, of Post C, of Columbus, Was Elected President, and Albert Ehrlich, of Post A, of Savannah, Secretary–Meeting Noted for a Number of Sharp Parliamentary Contests, but Was Adjourned With Harmony and Good Feeling Prevailing All Round–Columbus Accorded the Visitors a Warm Welcome and Royal Entertainment

BY ROLAND ROWE.

When the delegates and visitors were boarding the trains homeward bound Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, it was three cheers all round for Post C and the city of Columbus for the royal hospitality and entertainment they had accorded the 1914 state T. P. A. convention which was held in that city Thursday and Friday of last week.

Every departing visitor declared he had never enjoyed a more delightful time and every delegate affirmed that the convention was one of the largest and most successful meetings in the history of the organization.

There were a number of warmly contested fights on the floor of the convention, but they merely threw into the meeting that spirit of dash and go that added to its keen interest. When it was all over harmony was restored quickly, as is the habit with the Georgia T. P. A.'s. After the contest everything is forgotten but work for the good of the order and the Georgia division.

The hottest contest was between J. H. Andrews, of Post B of Atlanta, and Albert Ehrlich, of Post A of Savannah, for the secretaryship, and between the two cities for the state headquarters which go to the place of the secretary's residence. Mr. Ehrlich won, the vote being 46 for Ehrlich and 39 for Andrews.

Mr. Andrews, the retiring secretary, has held that position for a number of years and at the conclusion of the voting, on motion of M. F. Meyer, of the Savannah post, was given a rising vote of thanks for his long and loyal service as secretary of the Georgia division. Mr. Andrews, in a graceful speech, declared that his defeat left no sting, and he pledged the new secretary his hearty support in the work of the new year.

Mr. Ehrlich, the new secretary, is also chairman of the national hotel committee and is the champion application writer of the United States, enjoying the record of securing more new members for the T. P. A. than any other one man in the entire organization. He is an active worker and is very popular both in the Georgia division and in the national order. His election was hailed by a prolonged demonstration of joy by the members of the Savannah post.

J. M. Giddens, of Post C of Columbus, one of the most popular and untiring workers in the Georgia division, was nominated and elected president by acclamation.

Two important matters passed on by the convention were the mileage question and a bill for better hotel regulation in Georgia. The report of R. A. Broyles, chairman of the railroad committee, recommending that no further action be taken in the mileage fight until after the decision of the railroad commision on April 14, as to whether the roads should be punished for violating rule 14 of the commission in removing interchangeable mileage without the commission's consent, was unanimously adopted. Mr. Broyles' report recounted the alternate victories and defeats of the traveling men in the mileage fight up to the present, with prediction of a satisfactory outcome.

A bill to regulate hotels which had been framed by M. M. Anderson, chair-

T. P. A. Convention Notes

Who Was Who and What Was What at the Great Gathering at Columbus

E. L. Mallard, of the Macon post, entertained the convention with a number of his unique imitations. The one of the train leaving Atlanta and arriving at Griffin was highly enjoyed as was also his tombstone imitation. By vote of the convention he was thanked for the pleasure he had afforded the assembly. Mr. Mallard lives at Macon and covers middle Georgia for the Jacksonville Cracker works of Jacksonville, Florida.

Roland Rowe, editor of the Firing Line of The Atlanta Journal, was present and addressed the convention. At the conclusion of his speech he was given a rising vote of thanks for his address and for his labors in behalf of the traveling men of Georgia.

N. Eiseberg, of Post A of Savannah, was one of the prominent members of the convention. Mr. Eisberg is now covering southwest Georgia and Alabama for L. Mohr & Sons of Savannah.

J. C. Mason, of Post K, of Macon, was one of the live ones of the convention. No question of interest arose but found him ready to participate in its dispatch.

In nominating the candidates for secretary Morris Meyer of the Savannah Post presented the name of Albert Ehrlich and C. W. McClure of the Atlanta Post that of J. H. Andrews.

W. C. Wall, of Post B of Atlanta, who travels for the A. P. Morgan Grain company, was greeting his many friends at the convention. He is one of the oldest T. P. A.'s in Georgia.

"I certainly had a fine time," said H. L. Singer, of Atlanta, one of the delegates of Post B. "Columbus is a splendid city and I enjoyed every minute of my stay."

E. L. Adams of Post B was one of the active workers of the convention. He was member of the steering committee of Post B and was made chairman of the state employment committee.

Oh, that old-fashioned quadrille dance on board the boat. There were tangoers and trotters a plenty and of high skill present, but say, the tango was tame, strange as that may sound, to the quadrille. The tango seems to thrive best under the brilliant glare of the ball room with the air heavy with the perfume of hot house blooms, but on board a boat with the breeze, free and fair blowing in your face, under the open sky with a crescent moon hanging low over the trees, it seems out of place somehow. The tangoers executed their skill but they were few and attracted little attention, but when the quadrille was called it was all up for a gay while. With R. A. Broyles calling the figures, W. O. Stamps and F. B. Florence leading them, the onlookers patting time to the music, the shores of Alabama and Georgia that look across the Chattahoochee at each other resounded with sounds and shouts of the happiest, merriest doings they have witnessed in many a day.

The Georgia division scored a gain in membership of 122. This increase was due to the big increases of Post A of Savannah which reported 172 new members and Post C of Columbus which had a gain of 18.

W. F. Parkhurst of Post B and also representative of the Georgia chamber of commerce addressed the convention in behalf of the Georgia chamber, and the convention later by resolution indorsed the work of that organization.

Jesse W. Bates, the retiring president, handled the deliberations with ease and dispatch, giving all factions a fair show on the floor.

Fred Houser of Atlanta representing the convention bureau was present and extended the invitation of his bureau and of Atlanta to the convention to meet next year in the Gate City.

Joseph Lowenstein of Post A of Savannah, founder of the T. P. A. in Georgia, was active in all the convention work both in debate on the floor and in the committee work.

A. J. Swann, president of Post B, headed the Atlanta delegation and handled its interests with skill and harmony.

It is now "Pitchfork" Cashman, for F. C. Cashman, of Post B of Atlanta, has taken over the nickname of South Carolina's senator. He was named sergeant-at-arms for the convention and armed with an enormous pitchfork, he kept the convention under perfect control. Order was promptly restored when he bumped-bumped on the floor with his formidable weapon.

M. F. Meyer, of Post A of Savannah, acted as reading clerk. His clear, sharp voice could be heard distinctly all over the hall and his services were invaluable in the dispatching of business.

F. B. Florence, of Post B of Atlanta, was voted the distinction of being the tallest, handsomest man at the convention, but one who carried the smallest valise. His grip was four inches long by two inches high. Now, really, it might have been larger than that, but it didn't look it. It was a sort of Jeff man with a Mutt grip.

Dr. S. R. Belk, state chaplain, who is held in high affection by all the T. P. A.'s was presented with a purse of $40 in gold by members of the convention in token of their love and appreciation of his services. The presentation speech was made by Julius Otto, of Macon.

Colonel Dennis Fleming, of Post K of Albany, former state president, was a prominent member of the convention

T. P. A. PRESS CHAIRMAN PRAISES FIRING LINE

W. M. Jenkins Re-elected to Position and Given Commendation for His Work

W. M. Jenkins, press chairman of the Georgia division, whose interesting letters appear from time to time in the Firing Line, was re-elected to that position at the state convention at Albany.

When his report was read on the floor of the convention he was given a rising vote of thanks for his services and later the committee on reports gave him high commendation for his valuable work.

Part of his report was as follows: "The press is a gerat factor for helping along the service of fraternalizing, harmonising, and Americanizing. The Atlanta Journal Firing Line, foremost among the daily papers published started some time ago and struck the key note to the situation by placing the Travelers' Protective association in that class of organizations that seeks the benefit of those who join its ranks rather than to obtain benefits at the hands of its members.

"It is my pleasure as your press chairman to call attention to the valuable space that has been given us from time to time by the daily papers of the state, more especially has this service been rendered by The Atlanta Journal. The Atlanta Journal and Constitution Firing Lines have stood faithfully by us in all our defeats and victories. Let their pages catch your advertising. it will do us all good."

BROWER COMPANY BROKE ALL RECORDS IN MARCH

Two-Year-Old Candy Company Developing Good Trade

The biggest month since they started business was the March record of the Brower Candy company, manufacturers and jobbers.

The concern, which started about two years ago, has a sales force that has caught the spirit of W. A. Brower, who couples with it twenty years' experience in the businesses and enthusiasm for his line that is infectious.

SOLID COLOR RUGS ARE PROVING POPULAR

Atlanta House Having Heavy Call for Angora Goat Rugs

The first shipment was received by the Rosenfeld company last week of a line of rugs that are expected to be big sellers throughout the southern territory.

Mohju rugs the new line is called, and they are an angora goat fur product, most of the patterns received being in solid colors. The concern reports an increase of 75 per cent during the last two years in the demand for plain, solid color rugs.

JONES SALTING STATION IS NEARING COMPLETION

With fifteen tanks already in place the salting station being erected at Tifton, Ga., by Jones Brothers & Co., of Atlanta, is rapidly nearing completion.

There are ten more tanks to be added and the building of the depot, work on the latter being scheduled to start tomorrow. Since the announcement that this station would be erected the farmers in this section are reported to be giving considerable ground to the growing of cucumbers.

The company expects to have the station in operation within about six weeks, when the first of the new crop of cucumbers will be ready for market.

T. P. A.'S TO TAKE NO ACTION ON MILEAGE NOW

State Convention Postpones Further Moves Until Railroad Commission Decision

The following is the report of R. A. Broyles, chairman of the railroad committee of the Georgia T. P. A., made by him to the state convention at Albany last week. The report was indorsed and adopted by vote of the gathering. It follows:

Your chairman of railroad committee begs leave to report as follows:

As you will recall, the convention at Macon two years ago instructed the state board of directors to bring into requisition all the machinery of the organization to the end that better facilities might be obtained at the hands of the railroad companies in the matter of handling mileage, etc. The result has been that we have won each fight successively made before the legislature and railroad commission, but, by injunctions and delays, our efforts, as yet, have not met with final success.

The railroad commission has announced that they will hand down a decision on the 14th of this month. As to whether or no the railroads are guilty of violating "rule 14," and, while I have no knowledge of what that decision may be, I would recommend the same instructions to your state board and railroad and legislative chairman as given at Macon and confirmed at Albany, remain in force, and that no further action be taken at this time. Respectfully, man of the legislative committee in conjunction with representatives of the other traveling men's organizations and the hotel men's associations was submitted to the convention by Mr. Anderson in his report and was given cordial indorsement by the convention. Mr. Anderson was given a vote of thanks for his labors in framing it. A more complete account of the bill will be given in next Sunday's Firing Line.

R. A. BROYLES.
State Chairman Railroad Commission.

The question of whether the Georgia delegations to the national convention should be instructed to vote as a unit brought on a sharp parliamentary contest which was finally decided, on motion of W. O. Stamps of Post B, by recommending the delegations to vote as a unit instead of giving them absolute instruction.

The general entertainment committee of Post C with Max Banner as chairman, did themselves proud in entertaining the visitors and looking after all their wants and comforts. The ladies of Post C, too, gave invaluable assistance and the delightful luncheons they served in the club rooms of Harmony circle will be long remembered by all the visitors.

There was a steamboat ride down the Chattahoochee river on Thursday night with luncheon served on board and with a big barge and a band along to the delight of all participated in the dancing. On Friday afternoon an automobile trip took the visitors to Goat Rock, where they enjoyed the beautiful scenery and inspected the immense power dam across the river at that point. The convention festivities were brought to a close Friday night by a basketball game between members of the Columbus teams who are known all over the south for their prowess.

The opening session at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning was called to order by J. M. Giddens, president of Post C, of Columbus. Hon. J. C. Cook, mayor of Columbus, and Judge S. F. Gilbert, president of the board of trade and attorney for Post C, delivered the address of welcome. The response was made by Jesse Bates, the retiring president of the Georgia division, which was followed by an address by Dr. S. S. Beck, chaplain of the division.

The following is the list of other officers elected by the convention:

First vice president, J. L. Bracey, Savannah; second vice president, F. A. Wallace, Albany; third vice president, O. L. Stamps, Rome; resident directors, H. I. Frank, Savannah; M. F. Meyer, Savannah; R. F. Linehan, Savannah; J. Yarbrough, Savannah; F. Nuberger, Savannah; non-resident directors, J. B. Bates, Macon; Max Banner, Columbus; S. D. McDonald, Atlanta; Dennis Flemming, Albany; chairman railroad committee, R. A. Broyles; chairman legislative committee, M. M. Anderson, Atlanta; chairman press committee, W. Jenkins, Atlanta; chairman hotel committee, T. H. Sherman, Augusta; chairman good roads committee, R. A. Grady, Savannah; employment committee, E. L. Adams, Atlanta.

State chaplain, Rev. S. R. Belk; state attorney, Hon. James L. Mason.

Delegates to the national convention: Post A—Delegates: M. F. Meyer, C. E. Dunaway, F. Nuberger, S. J. Levy, J. L. Stacey; Post B: R. A. Broyles, F. D. McDonald, M. M. Anderson, E. L. Adams, J. C. STOCK OF BIG WHOLESALE DRUG FIRM COMPRISES 18,549 ITEMS

The handsome five-story building of the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co. at 69 South Forsyth street.

From All Countries of World Come the Materials Used in Making Drugs and Druggists' Supplies — Interesting Trip Through Atlanta House

When Lynn Fort, general manager of the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, last week remarked in answer to a query for something interesting in the wholesale drug business, that he could show more in thirty minutes than he could tell in six months, he was given the reply that his visitor was ready to be shown.

He was shown, and a trip through the six-storied building of the big Atlanta drug house is one that develops things that will interest many laymen as well as druggists.

The first department visited was the basement where heavy chemicals, oils and glassware are kept that are bought in carload lots. In this department there is a total of 219 separate classes of items that are carried in large quantities.

On the first floor, where the patent medicines and chemicals in packages are carried, the total number of different items jumps to 4,292, among this number being medicines from practically every state in the union, and many items from foreign countries. It is gratifying to find in this vast number of items a number that are made in Atlanta.

On the second floor are 1,058 items which includes patent medicines in original cases, mineral water and soda fountain supplies. Some idea of the total number of articles on this floor can be had from the fact that one of these items represents 2,800 bottles and many others run into several hundreds.

The stock of sundries is on the third floor and totals 2,972 items, a great number of these being direct imports, such as perfumes from France, ivory goods from Germany, bristle goods from Japan, etc.

In number of items the largest is found on the fourth floor totalling 7,200, where the pharmaceuticals, surgical dressings and cigars are carried. Practically all of these articles are manufactured in the United States. On this floor are found the complete lines of five of America's largest drug manufacturing concerns.

The fifth floor where are carried crude drugs and materials for manufacturing, number of items, 2,668, is the most interesting in the building from a geographical viewpoint, practically every country in the world contributing to this collection.

There is musk from Siberia, licorice from Africa, rhubarb from China, ammoniac from Persia, camphor from Formosa, cinchona from Peru, etc., etc.—a list that would run out to a column. Among the patent medicines there are about 15 per cent imported from foreign countries.

Much of the raw drug stock is used by this firm in manufacturing the large line of medicinal preparations made up in their own laboratory on the top floor.

The total number of items in the building is 18,549. Often there are thousands of articles to an item, the total number of articles in the building running into millions.

The huge task of assembling, arranging and keeping track of this huge stock is done by extremely careful classification and departmental divisions, with a man in charge of each department who has an exhaustive knowledge of the goods of that one particular department.

The entire stock of this wholesale house shows the neat and accessible arrangement of a high class retail store. There are numerous clever efficiency arrangements, such as an ingenious system of "dumb waiters" for getting small lots of goods from each floor to the shipping room and speaking tubes with megaphone attachments allowing orders to be called from one floor to another and heard by the clerk even if thirty or forty feet from the tube.

To handle the big stock, the force must not only know the goods, but also the peculiarities of local demand, there being a marked difference in the demands on drug houses in different sections of the country. A clerk of years of experience with a New Orleans house would have a great deal to learn about health conditions of this section before he would be of much value to the Lamar-Rankin company.

An appearance of order and efficiency at once impresses the visitor to this concern and the trip through the building bears out the impression. The company shows by a recent inventory a stock just double the size of that carried five years ago and the sales record reflects a steady development.

With the sales force and house organization with which the company has built up its present standing, the future promises much in further development.

M'CLURE BUYS WOOLWORTH STORE AT CHATTANOOGA

New Store Brings Total of McClure Chain to Twelve

The Woolworth five and ten-cent store at Chattanooga was bought last week by the McClure Ten Cent company of Atlanta and is now under their management.

This store has been established three years. Under the Woolworth management it was a twenty-five cent limit store, but the McClure company are following the policy used in their other eleven retail stores and carrying a dollar limit stock.

H. E. Reams and C. W. Bohler, of the McClure company, spent last week at Chattanooga arranging the details of the transfer.

The H. G. Woolworth company is an eastern corporation. The McClure Ten Cent company is strictly a southern concern, whose principal owner, Mr. McClure, resides in Atlanta, and whose every other stockholder lives in Georgia. The company's stores are located in Atlanta, Rome, Griffin, Macon, Athens and elsewhere over the south.

BENNETT REPORTS MUCH PLOWING ALREADY DONE

C. L. Bennett, traveling representative of the W. J. Dabney Implement company, who covers south Georgia and northern Florida, reports that the farmers in his territory are further advanced in the preparation of the soil for the coming crops than they have been at this season for a number of years.

"This, I take it," said Mr. Bennett, "is because of the mild winter we have been having and because of the more general recognition by farmers everywhere of the advantage of thorough fall and winter plowing."

Mr. Bennett has been enjoying a fine business and expects to make a killing to the rest of the season, especially on Vulcan plows.

and took an active part in all the debates and proceedings.

The following composed the delegates and visitors from Post B of Atlanta: H. F. Luckett, W. M. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. M. Anderson, R. A. Broyles, F. B. Florence, H. L. Singer, H. S. Prater, E. L. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Fair, P. C. Cashman, Rev. S. R. Belk, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Stamps, Paul Toland, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Anderson, J. H. Andrews, C. M. Gailmard, E. A. Hartsock, E. D. McDonald, W. F. Parkhurst, Mr. and Mrs. H. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Word, W. O. Stamps, A. J. Swann, C. W. McClure, B. B. Jones.

No member of the convention was more enthusiastic and more willing to shoulder the work of the meeting that J. R. Boylston, of the Augusta post. His long service at T. P. A. conventions rendered him entirely familiar with all its working and made his participation in the proceedings valuable.

E. C. Bell is getting something of a reputation with his concern, the Brower Candy company, of being a good adjuster of difficulties. Occasional misunderstandings between houses and customer, as will develop in any business, he smooths out like with his special brand of Bell diplomacy.

THE CATALOG AS AN AID TO THE SALESMAN

As Told by a Man Many Years in the Catalog Game

BY J. C. MATHEWS,
Mail Order and Advertising Manager Montag Brothers.

Might as well talk of the eye as an aid to the foot, or the sail aiding the sailing vessel—the one is indispensable to the other. More so when the jobbing lines are many and varied. Under such conditions the salesman is compelled to carry a large and bulky sample line with him. Naturally he falls into the habit of pushing a line or lines that appeal to him, while overlooking other lines, that, while they may not sell so easily, are just as staple with the trade and net the jobber a larger profit than the others. With a catalogue the salesman obtains a bird's-eye view of the whole line and sees it in its true perspective.

Often it is next to impossible to get the prospective customer to visit the sample room; under such circumstances, with the catalogue the salesman arouses interest in his line and sells many a bill that otherwise would be left for the other fellow.

Some salesmen make what they call "catalogue trips," that is, take their catalogue and perhaps some samples of new goods and sell from them and the catalogue alone. Such trips are made more quickly and at less expense than if the complete line of samples were taken. These trips are especially timely for "fill-in" and "between seasons" business.

An adequate catalogue, well illustrated, attractively printed and gotten up, is a distinct asset as regards impressing customers and prospective customers with the size and quality of the firm that issues it. None but a reliable firm of unquestioned standing can issue such a catalogue. This gives the salesman a strong talking point when doing missionary work.

Another aid the catalogue gives to the salesman is in its ability to hold customer who wishes to fill in his stock makes his selection from the catalogue and mails it in to the house, thus keeping him in the habit of giving his business to the one firm and keeping him "lined up" until the salesman's next visit. Many wide-awake merchants, when they receive the salesman's advance card, take his firm's catalogue and go through it at their leisure before the salesman's arrival, thus saving the time of both and finding out exactly what he wants before the house's representative arrives on the scene.

Perhaps the greatest aid the catalogue gives the salesman is in opening up new fields—doing missionary work—creating new customers. The jobber's catalogue goes into all sorts of out-of-the-way places through the medium of the mail, reaching many towns from which the salesman would ordinarily be unable to visit. When such an account has been sufficiently developed the salesman can then call upon him with the assurance of a hearing and a ready sale.

Taking it all together, the catalogue as an aid to the salesman is just as much a necessity as the stock department or the shipping room, while as to the sample line, the dispenser with a large part of that if he has an adequate catalogue.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

SAMPLES & SHIPMENTS

Kirk Keenan, cigar specialist for the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co., was out in north Georgia last week with J. M. Frix, who showed him just how rough a north Georgia road can become. In spite of the bad roads they wound up a good week's business.

W. R. Bell, representing Eli Lilly & Co., was getting orders for the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co. down the West Point last week.

W. M. Hyatt, the John Silvey & Co. salesman, came in the other day with a order in his eye. They wanted to know at headquarters how he got this driving behind a pair of mules.

George S. Smith reported to John Silvey & Co. Friday from South Carolina with what the house states is the largest lot of orders yet received from that section. He has had an especially good business on immediate shipment stuff.

Colonel C. G. Johnson, with the J. K. Orr Shoe company, who has been kept at home for several weeks with an attack of rheumatism, was able to be out again last week.

J. R. Thornton had two excuses for sending his house some blank order blanks and going fishing last Wednesday, April 1. One was the date and the other the fact that this was the twenty-first anniversary of his connection with the S. P. Richards company. A nine-page order one day last week and his average day's business totaling more than that of the average week of the early years is evidence the Richards traveler is still going strong.

W. W. Scott is in for the week end at at the Ragan-Malone company, coming in Friday night on a train that made up twenty minutes on a two-hour run and nearly losing his watch betting that it wouldn't do it. He says he ran in to see that new regional bank.

Carlton Hanes is the Ragan-Malone traveler with the gardening hobby the most highly developed. He has a flat of truck raised on his patch that is as long as the company's list of goods, but says he does the work by proxy.

The Orr Shoe company made another large shipment to Cuba last week. The one they sent this time being one of the largest through their Havana agent in several months.

A new salesman in the lineup of the Gramling-Spalding company is E. W. Bentley, of Birmingham, who will cover the Birmingham district. Though out of the shoe game for several years he has had experience in this line, and is considered a valuable addition to the company's lineup. He spent last week in Atlanta and will be on the firing line tomorrow with his new line.

Frank H. Baker, who started with the Gramling-Spalding company only a few weeks ago, is making good right along with this concern. He has been getting a good, steady business. He has had considerable experience selling shoes before he went with the Premium Brand house.

W. G. Baskin, for the last several years a member of the house force of the Gramling-Spalding company, who was put on the road in north Georgia three weeks ago, is reported to be doing well.

W. F. Spalding, vice president of the Gramling-Spalding company leaves this week for his spring visit to the leather markets at Boston.

There is a $5 bet up between Dave L. Lassiter and J. S. Cheek, the big fellows of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company force, on which of them makes the best start this week with the new line of fall cloaks. After the money was up Cheek came around and said, "Dave, I'll be already have one engagement on that stuff." To which Dave replied, "Well, now that I think of it, Sam, I already have one order promised, too." With handicaps even, they're both going to get busy for that five tomorrow.

For his first visit in several weeks, Mack Samuels, the big Hirshberg company salesman, is at headquarters for several days.

A. T. Stevens, the Central Georgia man for the John Deere Plow company, brought in a customer last week and sold him a five carload order, this concern's largest single order for some weeks.

A fifteen hundred dollar opening bill to a Florida man was one of the plums of the week picked by the M. C. Kiser company. It was a house sale. Trade is active in shoes now and the Shield Brand house seems to be getting their share. "We have been working night and day this week," said C. J. Sullivan.

Joseph L. Nisbet, bookkeeper of the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., died after a brief illness last Tuesday. Mr. Nisbet was widely known throughout the Firing Line circle and his death brings keen grief to his friends. He was for seven years connected with the E. L. Adams company.

F. R. Lubbock, district sales manager for the John Deere Plow company, has returned from a short Alabama trip. He declares conditions in western Alabama seem excellent.

E. E. Parsonage, manager of the John Deere Wagon company, and R. O. Bright, sales manager of the R. & V. Engine company of Moline, Ill., were visitors last week at the local offices of the John Deere company.

Another Atlanta salesman added to the list of auto users is P. G. Stanley, of the Lamar-Rankin Drug company. He started with his new car last Monday. The orders have been coming in as regularly as usual and no accidents reported so far.

These Atlanta buyers have been swinging the New York trains in large numbers recently. W. C. Barnwell has only recently returned from his spring visit east, likewise P. D. Yates and L. A. Redwine. R. K. Rambo is off to New York to spend the next two weeks. All of the buyers are laying in large lines and those back from markets state the eastern firms report a good trade from the south generally.

The "ins" at Fain & Stamps yesterday were J. C. Owens, W. T. Duncan, Cliff Edwards, W. Y. Bailey, S. E. Smith and R. E. Hutchinson.

Fain & Stamps report that they have sold more prunes this season than ever before when the price was as high as it is now. During the season they handled 2,500 boxes. The cost of prunes is nearly double what it has been heretofore.

R. E. Hutchinson, the new traveler of the Fain & Stamps Co., is making a splendid record. The sales report for March shows that although he is a new man he ranks fifth out of eleven salesmen. Mr. Hutchinson declares that he is going to beat even that good record in the future.

Bill Quarles, of Fain & Stamps, has led in the total of sales for the months of January, February and March. Bill Gaston and Cliff Edwards came second and third respectively.

Due to the illness of his wife, E. S. Stroud, of the E. L. Adams company, was away from some of his rounds last week.

Among the visitors to the Lamar-Rankin Drug company last week were the following: Dr. C. L. Baskin, Temple, Ga.; Dr. J. R. Wallice, Lovejoy, Ga.; Dr. Pratt Cheek, Clermont, Ga.; Dr. G. Hathcock, Lula, Ga.; Dr. M. M. Head, Zebulon, Ga.; Dr. W. A. McCurdy, Stone Mountain, Ga.; Dr. G. W. Ragsdale, Hiram, Ga.; Dr. W. L. Landrum, Taylorsville, Ga.; Dr. J. Z. Henry, Ellenwood, Ga.; Mr. W. A. Sams, Woolsey, Ga.; Mr. L. Ingram, Fayetteville, Ga.; Dr. J. A. Combs, Locust Grove, Ga.

When the genial "Bishop" McDonald, who goes after business and gets it for the McCord-Stewart company, praises a hotel, Salesmanger Hudson, casually asks the name of the widow who runs it. The salesmanager has been trying to estimatefrom the number of "The Bishop's" hotel eulogies the number of widows conducting hotels in his territory. The count is reported as not yet complete.

W. R. Simpson, the Jones Bros. & Co. traveler, returned last week from a visit to Columbus where he secured a carload order.

E. M. Ford, with the White Hickory Wagon Mfg. Co., is a big salesman in more ways than one, leading his company and tipping the scales at about two eighty, with a six feet four height.

Joe Karpeles, Louisiana salesman for Montag Brothers, has been spending the last three weeks at Coopers Wells, La., getting himself into good physical condition after a very busy several months on the road.

Bert Fox, with Montag Brothers, is scheduled next for a Virginia trip, giving special attention to the steel die stamp trade the firm is developing rapidly in that territory.

Montag Brothers struck into the foreign trade last week with a sale of two showcases to the Cuyamel Fruit company at Cuyamel, Honduras.

H. L. Singer, the wholesale grocer, was one of the well known Atlantians who went down to Columbus to help enliven the T. P. A. convention.

C. W. McClure, the 5 and 10 cent merchant, was one of the prominent figures at the T. P. A. convention at Columbus. He made a visit to his retail store at Newnan on the trip.

C. A. RAUCHENBERG, SR.

W. C. WOOD.

The Kistner market, located at No. 5 North Broad, enjoys a constantly growing trade, which compels the increase in its force. Mr. Wood is a widely popular salesman in Atlanta. For a number of years he was senior partner of the firm of Wood & Singleton. Mr. Rauchenberg also enjoys a wide acquaintance here. For fifteen years he was with the well known firm of Wolfsheimer & Co.

NEW FIRM SUCCEEDS WARD-TRUITT COMPANY

T. B. Lumpkin and Frank Hall Buy Stock of Dry Goods House

The new Atlanta wholesale dry goods firm, Lumpkin & Hall, successors to the Ward-Truitt company, is now in the field after business.

The new firm is not in the field in the sense that would apply to most of the wholesale houses as they will use no traveling salesmen, but do a strictly house trade business.

T. B. Lumpkin, well known to the southern trade through his more than twenty years in this line in Atlanta, and Frank Hall, formerly of Anderson, S. C., compose the firm. Mr. Hall is a newcomer to Atlanta. Until recently he operated a chain of five retail stores in South Carolina.

The stock of the Ward-Truitt company, which was purchased by the new firm, has already been increased by a number of purchases of job lots.

"We are going to deal mostly in job lots of goods, which we can obtain from the mills at reduced prices," said Mr. Lumpkin. "Our policy will be to get the advantage of the low prices on such goods. We will consider the quality of the goods, but by foregoing having goods made up under any particular brand will be able to make attractive prices to the trade."

The new firm is occupying the Ward-Truitt building on West Hunter street at present and may arrange to use it permanently.

An' It's Proud We Are--- All of Us!

Just naturally pleased and proud—how can we help it?

Here's our home town—good old Atlanta—singled out by the brainiest and hardest-thinking financial experts in the country as one of the Big Centers.

Ain't that something?

A Center of Finance and a Center of Distribution.

The point from which the whole of the Sixth Regional District can best be served.

Train service and postoffice service are up to all the requirements for quick action in reaching all parts of the section.

The Organization Board looked mighty closely into these details. Our local folks actually had to SHOW them that Atlanta had the goods.

There wasn't any foolishness about it. It was merit—right straight through. PLUS some powerful hard work by the local committee. Playing ball right up to the ninth inning, so to speak.

Here's OUR point—same old point we've been talking about all the time:

Atlanta has every facility necessary to serve the Region in matters financial.

She is, therefore, absolutely the logical DISTRIBUTING POINT for the wares and the products used by the people of the region.

Atlanta manufactures millions of dollars worth of products annually.

The signers of this advertisement produce in their own factories a big proportion of the total manufactured goods.

Why should not the goods we make be used by the people in our own state and our own Region?

Why traipse off to New York or other remote markets for the very things your own neighbors are making right at home?

Our goods stand with the very best of 'em—ANYWHERE! Why not use our goods here in the Southeast, where it's easy to get them?

You dealers think on this.

It's YOUR interest as well as our own that we have in mind.

You know well and good that we don't expect any argument to prevail with you unless that argument shows you where YOU gain by doing the thing we ask you to do.

It is to your interest to buy near home. Distinctly so.

It is to the interest of every farmer, manufacturer, merchant and other business man to be in easy reach of a money center.

No longer will we need to go East to finance things.

We are to have the resources and the provision AT HAND.

And it's the same way with the supplies that your trade wants to buy. No need for you to go east to stock up.

You have the Supply Department AT HAND.

You can reach it double quick. Remember that Atlanta's Postoffice and train service make for reaching you in a hurry.

Remember that short hauls are a saving.

Remember that it's very sad to be "out of it" when the trade is calling for it. We can help you to avoid this.

Remember that the way to build up YOUR OWN business is to keep the money in your own community. It's Common Sense as well as loyalty.

We want every merchant in this Region who reads this message to send us an order for some of our stuff THIS WEEK.

Ask for prices. Ask for information. Ask us to send you a salesman. Ask for samples or lists or whatever you need.

Get in communication with us—and you'll be glad you did it.
